Peace Group Shelves Plan For League Of Americas

Bitter Words Fly When Argentina and Brazil Fight Proposal.

Bill on Poison Gas, Bacteria Deferred

Equality in International Trade Proposal Wins by U. S. Pressure.

By the Associated Press.

Buenos Aires, Dec. 17.—Inter-American peace conference delegates wrangled in a committee session today over a sub-committee's recommendation for creation of an American League of Nations and finally postponed action on the plan.

Faces reddened and caustic words flew as the Argentine and Brazilian delegates led opposition during a meeting of the committee on peace organization.

The sub-committee, in its report, advocated establishment of an association of American countries on lines recommended by Colombia and the Dominican Republic.

Max Henriquez Urena, a Dominican representative and chairman of the sub-committee, proposed that the conference name five jurists to meet by May 1, 1937, to study the two projects and prepare a report for the regular Pan-American parley slated for Lima, Peru, in 1938, but even this suggestion met strong opposition.

Opposed by United States.

(The idea of an American League of Nations, which has threatened the harmony of the Buenos Aires Peace Conference, was opposed by the United States throughout preparations for the conference and in the sessions themselves. The proposal was among the first submitted when President Roosevelt invited suggestions of topics to be placed on the agenda. As early as last April, three Latin-American countries advanced the league idea and there have been indications that its supporters would seek strenuously to bring about favorable action.

(Presidents Alfonso Lopez, of Colombia; Rafael L. Trujillo, of the Dominican Republic, and Jorge Ubico, of Guatemala, urged that the topic be placed on the agenda, the Colombian executive even going so far as to urge a league to create "regional law, broader than that now prevailing in the world and intended for application with all energy and without reservation or exceptions.")

The arms limitation committee, in a quieter session, adopted a Chilean resolution urging general or bilateral arms limitation agreements, "within the necessities of the signatories' internal order and of justified defense."

Poison Gas Bill Waits.

It deferred action on a Uruguayan resolution assailing the use of poison gas and bacteria in warfare and the bombings of unprotected cities when Brazil offered a counter-proposal declaring the Uruguayan plan would require detailed study for definition of some of its terms.

Heated debates marked the meeting of the committee on intellectual co-operation, which approved, among other measures, a Brazilian resolution recommending that all the American republics acknowledge the citizenship rights and duties of women.

The United States delegation won approval of the economic committee for its recommendation that governments of the 21 American republics establish equality of treatment in international trade.

Along with a United States resolution proposing reduction of excessive trade barriers, which was passed by the committee yesterday, the measure will go before the next plenary session for final approval.

The economic committee also adopted a Uruguayan resolution calling on the Pan-American Union—which represents all the American republics and has headquarters in Washington—to communicate with American finance ministers or managers of central banks to determine whether it is feasible to call a conference for discussion of monetary stabilization.

Argentina's be-mustached foreign minister and Nobel Peace prize winner, Carlos Saavedra Lamas, who is chairman of the whole conference,

EDITH MAXWELL.

Maxwell Defense Plans Fight To Halt 20-Year Term for Edith Motion to Quash Verdict Filed; Hearing on Arguments Set in Wise March 1; Mountain Jury Took Hour, 37 Minutes for Decision.

By Edward T. Folliard.

A Staff Correspondent.

Wise, Va., Dec. 17.—A jury, headed by an undertaker, today found Edith Maxwell, 22-year-old mountain school teacher, guilty of murder in the second-degree and fixed her punishment at 20 years in the Virginia State Penitentiary.

She was accused of killing Trigg Maxwell, her father.

Edith, who had been asked to stand up while the verdict was read, turned a ghastly white when she heard it. Then she threw her arms around her brother, Earl, and began to sob violently.

The spectators crowded around and glared at her. Some of them grinned.

"What was I a-telling you," one was heard to mutter.

Edith, raising her head from Earl's shoulder, looked over at the 12 men who had decreed she should spend the next 20 years of her life in the penitentiary and cried out:

"Them jurors know I wasn't guilty."

In that moment of hysteria the tall, mountain-bred girl forgot the grammar she learned at the East Radford Normal College.

For a time it appeared that Edith would be clapped into jail immedi-

Jury Indicts 9 In Maryland Traffic Graft

All of Officers Involved Suspended; 14 Counts Accuse Moffatt.

Seven members of the police force, a bondsman and a justice of the peace were named in 30 indictments returned yesterday by the Prince Georges County grand jury as it completed an exhaustive five-day investigation of an alleged graft ring.

Simultaneously the county board of commissioners issued an order to Chief Jeremiah J. Crowley suspending without pay all the accused policemen.

All nine men were named in at least one of the 16 indictments charging conspiracy to obstruct justice. In addition, 14 separate presentments were returned against Justice of the Peace Herbert J. Moffat, Hyattsville, Md., accusing him of malfeasance in office.

Elmer Pumphrey, bondsman, Suitland, Md., was named in 12 conspiracy indictments.

8 Counts Face Peak.

The policemen against whom true bills were presented were Warren E. Peak, eight counts; Albert Anderson, seven counts; Claude A. Reese, four counts; Howard Slater, three counts; Maurice Hampton, two counts; Arthur Brown, two counts, and Frank Hall, one count. All of the men were attached to the Hyattsville sub-station, Sergt. Ralph Brown was the only member of the station who was not named. None of the officers in the Upper Marlboro station was indicted.

The accused men, it was learned, will be given several days to post bond of $1,000 for their appearance in circuit court.

Dates for the trials have not been set. They probably will not be held, however, until after the State Legislature meets next month. It is believed legislation will be enacted then revising the entire police set-up.

Constitutionality of the present system has already been challenged in test cases now pending in the circuit court.

Only Nine on Force.

The suspension order yesterday left only six privates, two sergeants and a chief to police a county 75 miles wide. Orders immediately were issued transferring Officers Oscar Beall and William Gray from the Upper Marlboro to the Hyattsville station. The transfer will be made today.

The action of the grand jury came as a surprise. The jurors were ushered into the courtroom at Upper Marlboro in an atmosphere of tense silence. None of the accused men was present but a number of courthouse attaches and half a dozen newspaper reporters were there.

W. R. C. Connick, elderly grand jury foreman, who for 22 years was principal of the Baden (Md.) High School, presented the investigating group's report to Judge Joseph C. Mattingly.

Methodically, the judge read to his obviously incredulous courtroom audience:

"During the course of this inquiry, we have questioned 34 witnesses, read scores of affidavits and carefully studied the voluminous reports of the special investigators who were chosen by your honorable court to audit the records we had impounded.

Situation Held Deplorable.

"As a result of our investigation, we are presenting 30 indictments, and respectfully beg leave to submit the following comments and recommendations:

"Our inquiry shows that a very deplorable situation has been in existence for sometime in that portion of our county adjacent to the District of Columbia. We have discovered strong evidence to show that a conspiracy, embracing certain members of the county police force, a justice of the peace and a professional bondsman, has been operating to defeat the ends of justice and to enrich the conspirators. Our investigation leads us to believe that this disgraceful condition is due primarily to three causes:

"First, political expediency instead of personal fitness seems to have been the principal factor in determining the selection of the personnel of the police force.

"Second, the chief of police is chief in name only, without authority to discipline or dismiss the members of his force, whether they be inefficient, insubordinate or even criminal. The existing

Lewis Committee Seeks $1,000,000 in Cash for War Chest.

Corporation Ready for Last-Ditch Fight Against Unions.

By Felix Bruner.

A major battle between labor, represented by the Committee for Industrial Organization, and industry, represented by the United States Steel Corporation, America's largest industrial concern, was joined yesterday before the National Labor Relations Board. On the outcome may depend the fate of the Wagner law and the future relationship between workers and employers.

The issue involved charges that the steel corporation and its subsidiary, the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, have interfered with their employes' rights to join the labor union of their choice.

Officials of the steel company made it clear that they were prepared to defend their employe representation plan to the limit and refused to acknowledge legal right of the Labor Board to interfere.

On the other side, the Committee for Industrial Organization, headed by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, was just as firm. Lewis sent out yesterday to every member of the miners' union notice that each would be assessed $1 a month in January and February to make up a $1,000,000 "war chest."

Today Lewis will meet with representatives of unions in the automobile and glass industries in a move to consolidate further the strength of the C. I. O. Strikes already have been called in various units of these two industries.

The steel companies lost in the first skirmish of the battle when the Labor Board refused to postpone the hearing. Company representatives were seeking to delay action pending an expected decision of the Supreme Court on the validity of the Wagner act. The hearing will continue today and will then be recessed until January 11.

Several Courses Open.

Unless in the meantime the Supreme Court outlaws the Wagner act under which the board is operating, it is possible that the board will follow the procedure it has pursued in other cases and order an employe election to determine the union choice of a majority of the workers. Such an order, if carried out, would be a direct test of the strength of the CIO in the industry.

Meanwhile, however, there is little doubt that the miners are preparing to strike with the expiration of the bituminous coal contract on April 1, if the operators stick to their proposal for the lengthening of working hours.

It is expected that simultaneous demands for union recognition will be made of the steel companies and possibly of automobile manufacturers, with the possibility of major strikes in these industries.

30-Hour Week Goal.

Between now and April labor organizations are expected to work for additional legislation in Congress, including the 30-hour bill, a revival of the Guffey coal act, outlawed by the Supreme Court, and for the licensing of industries engaged in interstate commerce. The part played by labor, and especially by the Lewis organization, in the election is expected to strengthen the hand of the labor group.

Another big push by labor is expected in behalf of adoption of the child labor amendment. The drive is being started by the American Federation of Labor and yesterday the Railway Labor Executives Association, meeting here, voted to

Pontiff Suffers Another Relapse; Ordered to Rest

By the Associated Press.

Vatican City, Dec. 17.—Pope Pius XI relapsed again into a period of weakness tonight—the result, worried physicians said, of undue exertion.

The newest setback came while the Pontiff was talking with a visitor, about 5 in the evening. It climaxed the Pontiff's best day since his illness.

Doctors and other persons close to the Holy Father, saying it was evident the Pope must not again resume strenuous activities, took occasion to urge him anew to rest completely.

He insisted on carrying on some work today, receiving Eugenio, Cardinal Pacelli, the Papal secretary of state; Dominic, Cardinal Mariani, economic administrator of the Holy See, and his nephew, Franco Ratti, technical director for Vatican City.

Prelates said the audiences were absolutely necessary to the conduct of important affairs. But the Pontiff's doctors have explained to him with great stress that his setbacks, since a paralytic stroke 12 days ago, have been due to over-exertion.

Dr. Aminta Milani, after visiting the Holy Father for the third time today, said danger was not over and that the Pontiff must give himself several weeks of complete rest.

Audiences with bishops and other dignitaries which, in the past, have taken much of the Pope's time, were suspended indefinitely. Prelates said, however, the Pope was desirous of making another speech deploring the war in Spain when the cardinals call on him Christmas Eve, to present their holiday greetings.

Spending Cuts Mapped By Roosevelt, Leaders; Tax on Profits to Stay

Hamilton Wins Confidence Vote Of G. O. P. Leaders by 74 to 2

Fish, Chairman's Critic, Won Over at Session in Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 17.—Chairman John D. M. Hamilton received an overwhelming vote of confidence today in a turbulent meeting of the Republican National Committee.

The members voted 74 to 2 to reject his proffered resignation and to retain him at the party helm after three and a half hours of acrimonious debate.

Their deliberation room in a Loop hotel re-echoed cross-currents of oratory. Sharp attacks on the Kansan evoked a spirited defense. Participants clashed on demands for liberalization of Republican policy and criticism of the party's action on social problems.

When the results of the roll call were disclosed, Hamilton stated:

"I am gratified. I'll keep right on working."

Hamilton announced he would make a swing around the Nation to organize Republican ranks for future State and Congressional elections. He planned to urge State chieftains to convoke more frequent meetings of State and county committees.

He relayed committee members' reports of "splendid spirit" within the party and said permanent headquarters would be established in 10 or 12 States which previously had not operated on a year 'round basis.

The chairman said he would assign a group of Republicans—including some members of the National Committee—to the task of devising means of meeting the $901,501 deficit.

He remained noncommittal on any possible changes in party policy but stated:

"I think a good service was rendered in bringing problems to light."

Hamilton expected to meet Gov. Landon in Chicago soon and ac-

Harrison Believes New Excises Unnecessary; Some May End.

Bankhead Gloomy On Consolidations

Modified Surplus Levy Hinted but President Insists on Principle.

By Robert C. Albright.

Shaping broad outlines of the Administration's new legislative program in conference with Congressional leaders, President Roosevelt yesterday called for scaling down of appropriations and renewed his firm stand for the principle of undivided profits taxation.

Taxes and the budget headed a long list of legislative knots discussed with the President by Speaker William B. Bankhead, Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, and Representative Robert L. Doughton, of North Carolina, in the first of what promises to be a series of round-table discussions.

Speaker Bankhead went to the White House alone, while Harrison and Doughton, chairmen of Senate and House committees charged with revision of the tax structure, reviewed the fiscal outlook in a separate White House audience.

Harrison left the President with the firm conviction that there will be no need for new taxes. It may be possible even to eliminate some of the minor nuisance taxes, where administrative cost is out of proportion to the revenue collected, the Senate Finance Committee chairman said.

Refers to Study.

He made no commitments on proposed modification of the undivided profits tax, but pointed out Congressional tax experts have been studying the possibility of easing the burden on heavily debt-ridden corporations, and firms needing funds for plant extensions and modifications.

Later, Speaker Bankhead told reporters the President is going to insist that there be no change in the principle of the highly controversial undistributed earnings tax.

"He is very firmly in favor of the principle," the Speaker said, conceding there may be some alteration in the structure of the tax, but no change in the basic formula.

Further indication that the budget will not be balanced in the present fiscal year was given by Harrison, who said only that with further improvement in business and resulting increases in revenues it was hoped the Federal budget could be balanced in 1938.

Bankhead, who, following conferences with Representative James P. Buchanan, chairman of the House appropriations committee, has shown concern at the trend in departmental estimates, communicated these views to Mr. Roosevelt.

"I told the President I thought there was going to be a deep feeling in the House that we ought to use every effort to hold down appropriations, wherever possible," Bankhead said.

Gives Tentative Program.

"The President fully agreed with me. He also said he was going to make every endeavor to reduce the deficiency estimates."

Although the Speaker pointed out it is now too early to formulate a hard and fast legislative program, and he expects to discuss details at other conferences with the President, he outlined as follows the major items now in prospect:

1. Appropriation bills, leading off probably with the Independent Offices supply bill and the Treasury-Postoffice bill, which the

5 Shot to Death; Pittsburgh Police Seize Officer, 70

Pittsburgh, Dec. 17 (AP).—Police in suburban Duquesne arrested a 70-year-old fellow officer tonight after a series of revolver shots killed five persons, three of them women.

They held Policeman Martin Sullivan, vetrean of 25 years on the force, and accused him of stalking through an industrial neighborhood, blazing away with his service weapon.

They said all of the victims were involved in tangled affairs of Sullivans' life. His girl-wife had left him, and he had been accused of attacking a 12-year-old child.

Nanking Moves To Settle War Over Kidnaping

Government Is Negotiating With Emissary of Rebel Marshal

By the Associated Press.

Nanking, China (Friday), Dec. 18. Two armies fought today while secret negotiators debated settlement of a civil war that may cost the lives of both leaders, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and his captor, Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang.

The Nanking regime, although asserting its armies were highly successful on the Shensi battlefront and declaring its refusal to compromise with the rebel marshal, Chang, was known to be considering terms on which the leader of the uprising at Sianfu, capital of Shensi, proposed to free Chiang and end the civil war.

Loyal divisions were reported steadily driving the rebel troops back on Sianfu, over which government planes were flying in awesome demonstrations. It is in Sianfu that the government asserts the generalissimo is held captive, with several of his generals, by the rebel "Young Marshal."

Deep interest centered, however, in the closely guarded conferences at Nanking, where James Elder, British adviser to Marshal Chang, was closeted with Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, her brother-in-law, Dr. H. H. Kung, minister of finance and temporary head of the government, and her brother, T. V. Soong, former minister of finance and high in government councils.

Confer With Emissary.

Elder arrived by air from Sianfu to communicate terms on which Marshal Chang proposes to settle the crisis which has plunged China into civil conflict. He was rushed from the airfield in a closed automobile to Dr. Kung's residence, where only the highest leaders of the Nanking government were permitted to talk with him.

The government, however, outwardly maintained an unyielding

Madrid, Dec. 17.—The first capture of "German troops" during fierce fighting west of Madrid was announced today by the junta of defense—at the close of the fifth month of civil war.

The Germans, said a spokesman, were captured in a battle around Boadilla del Monte, 7 miles west of the capital, and commanding a secondary road to the west.

(The insurgent headquarters at Salamanca announced officially the town had been taken by the Fascists, and that an international defense brigade had left 83 dead on the battlefield.)

Charge Planes Supplied.

"Some Germans were killed, some were wounded and several were taken prisoners," said the junta spokesman. "I can't give you the figures now.

"The fighting has started there again and the insurgents are obviously trying desperately to extend their flanks and take the road to El Escorial.

"But the Germans seem to find the government lines as hard to smash as did the Moors."

[Advices reaching London tonight indicated that a Spanish rebel warship had halted and set fire to the Soviet steamer Komsomol off Oran, Algeria, as it was en route to Spain, the United Press reported. It was believed that the Komsomol's crew of 25 or 30 were rescued from the burning ship, but their subsequent fate was unknown.—Editor's note.]

Meanwhile, the Socialist government at Valencia charged that Germany, Italy and Portugal, ignoring the nonintervention agreement in the Spanish civil war, are sending "planes and gases with which to murder women and children in Madrid."

Gingell Seized Here in Murder Of Rich Farmer

Youth Taken on Highway Bridge Hitchhiking; Denies Crime Aid.

Lawrence Gingell, sallow 20-year-old Maryland youth wanted for the murder of Elwood Matthews, was seized by Washington police yesterday as he fled across the Highway Bridge toward Virginia.

He was being held in a cell at the Fourth Precinct station last night for Maryland authorities. State's Attorney James Pugh, of Montgomery County, was here arranging extradition proceedings last night.

Gingell is the second captured among three wanted for brutally beating, shooting and drowning Elwood Matthews, wealthy Four Corners farmer, the night of November 21.

He was making his way out of town yesterday after three days of hiding in the Capital when a colored motorist spotted him trying to thumb a ride. The motorist recognized him from past acquaintance.

Officers Heard Report.

The motorist, whose name the police did not reveal, drove to Fourth and I streets southwest, where he found Patrolman Ernest M. Brooks and informed him Gingell was on the bridge. The officer hastened to a call-box and telephoned to the Fourth Precinct.

It so happened that Spotwood Gravely and Norman Gray, scout car patrolmen, were phoning the precinct at the same time. The cam on the board was open, and they heard Brooks' report. Without waiting they leaped in the scout car and hurried to the bridge, arriving less than two minutes after Brooks' call.

They saw Gingell walking rapidly across the bridge. They pulled up alongside and asked him his name.

SEC Investigates Milton's Control of 44 Concerns Worth $218,000,000.

By Sidney Olson.

The Securities and Exchange Commission began yesterday a study of the manner in which David Milton, son-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, jr., gained control of a "financial empire" for $13,000.

The financial empire consists of the $218,000,000 Equity Corporation, composed of 44 companies capitalized at hundreds of millions of dollars.

Milton, a quiet-voiced, youngish man, characterized by Commission Counsel David Schenker as "the Van Sweringen of the investment trust field," avoided direct answers to the questions of Schenker, and attempted to get into the record a blanket answer in the form of a press release. Schenker disallowed this on the grounds he would prove all its contentions inaccurate, point by point, but indicated the statement might be placed in the record later.

Move Traced Down.

The entangled and complex structure of the Equity Corporation, and the involved deals in which Milton acquired control of it emerged slowly from the testimony of Milton as Schenker repeatedly insisted on "yes or no" answers.

The intial move toward control, involving an actual investment by Milton of only $13,000 and 6,300 shares of stock in an inactive insurance company began when Milton and Ellery Huntington, an associate, with $41,000 and 19,000 shares of the American Colony Insurance Co., purchased control of the Consolidated Funds Co., of New York. Milton put up one-third of the cash and one-third of the stock, he testified.

Consolidated Funds, an investment trust, controlled the Oceanic

McGovern, Heckler of George V, Demands Clerics Help Idle, Leave Edward in Peace

London, Dec. 17 (AP).—"Jock" McGovern, the outspoken member of Parliament who once heckled King George V rose in the House of Commons today to tell "the bishops" to "get out and deal with unemployment instead of kicking a man when he's down."

Bringing into open debate the wrath of some parliamentarians against the Archbishop of Canterbury's radio rebuke of former King Edward VIII, McGovern, once a plumber, said the cabinet members act like "a lot of huffy old women if they don't get their way" and added:

"If the issue (of Edward's marriage to Wallis Simpson) had been put to the country, he would have beaten the cabinet. The prime minister would have gone but the man—(Edward)—would have remained."

He said the ministers were "a number of old, worn-out veterans who are continually threatening to resign."

McGovern, who shouted out in Parliament three years ago, just as King George V finished his traditional speech from the throne, that "you are a gang of lazy, idle, parasites," burst out in defense of George's son today while members of the house were debating a resolution opposing the reduction of unemployment allowances.

"Let the bishops deal with unemployment instead of kicking a man when he is down," he cried.

"Let them go to the wireless and try to arouse the indignation and the conscience of the Nation against social injustices that the common people suffer."

He said he had seen children killed by bombs in Spain and added: "That action was cruel and deadly, but swift and sudden. Death is being dealt out to millions of children in this country—it is like putting them into a compartment in which the life is slowly pushed out of their bodies."

He advised the cabinet and "the bishops" to "never mind Mrs. Simpson," and declared "we are all willing to relieve" Prime Minister Baldwin and his cabinet "if they want to go."

His speech served as a prelude to what may be a more extended attack on the British Broadcasting Co.

Capital Churches Assail Plans For Military Inaugural March

Admiral Cary T. Grayson's plans for a military parade on President Roosevelt's Inauguration Day January 20 brought a vigorous objection yesterday from a committee representing 120 Protestant churches in the Capital.

Learning the inauguration procession will consist chiefly of marching units of Army, Navy and Marine Corps, the Committee on Civic Affairs of the Washington Federation of Churches last night forwarded to Admiral Grayson a resolution "disapproving an inaugural parade in which the dominant note is military."

"How can such a parade (as announced) be called an American parade?" Wilbur LaRoe, jr., chairman of the committee, asked. "A military parade is not typical of our country. It will look more like those they stage in European capitals."

LaRoe said his committee had hoped the inaugural procession would display America's interest and activity in such fields as transportation, industry and the arts.

"At least, there might be a peace float in the parade," LaRoe said.

In the resolution sent Admiral Grayson as director of the inaugural day celebration, the committee pointed out that "America is a peace-loving Nation, and a leader among nations in the advocacy and establishment of world peace."

It recommended that the inaugu-

U.S. and Britain To Exceed Navy Quotas Jan. 1

Both Countries Will Retain Added Excess Tonnage When Pact Expires.

Plans of both Great Britain and the United States to retain additional excess naval tonnage, following expiration of the 1930 London naval pact at the end of this month, were revealed yesterday.

In London, Sir Samuel Hoare, first lord of the admiralty, told the House of Commons of the British government's decision to retain in service five light cruisers it had been intended to scrap.

Here, it was learned Secretary of the Navy Swanson has advised the State Department this country will keep 19,000 more tons of destroyer strength than had been planned.

Britain and the United States had announced previously each would retain 40,000 tons of destroyers above the limitations of the treaty, now about to expire.

In view of these new developments there was speculation last night as to whether President Roosevelt would soon announce construction of two new battleships to add to this country's defenses. Congress has authorized construction of the two vessels, leaving it to the President to decide when work will go ahead.

Meanwhile, word was awaited from Japan as to her intentions, in the light of the revised British and American plans.

Shift Not Provided.

Heretofore, Japan, which announced her intention of withdrawing from the accord, has made plans to retain 11,059 tons of destroyers, and to add 15,598 tons to her submarine strength. The treaty permitted her to keep up to 28,000 tons of excess destroyer power, but made no provision for her to transfer part of that excess power to the submarine classification without invoking the escalator clause of the treaty on her own behalf.

A further blow at the original limitations of the London pact was seen in the likelihood that Britain would save from the scrapheap four heavy cruisers now scheduled for decommissioning. When the agreement expires at the end of the month there will be no treaty restrictions left on naval construction or possession of warships by the three countries.

The United States, notified by Britain of her plan to retain the five cruisers, raised no objections, but the Associated Press from London reported that Japan's reply had not been received last night.

The United States is permitted to retain the extra 19,000 tons of destroyers by Article 17 of the treaty, which makes it possible to replace a portion of any shortage in the permitted light cruiser strength with additional destroyers. When the treaty expires, the United States will have 208,000 tons of destroyers, though many of the ships will be over-age, to 190,000 tons for Britain.

Increase Is Authorized.

All powers signatory to the naval treaty had the right to invoke the escalator clause, as Britain has done, to retain tonnage in excess of the allotments, though, it was pointed out here last night, it was the original intention that the clause should be utilized only when "national security" of a signatory was "materially affected by new construction" of nonsigners.

Other parties to the treaty, thereupon, were authorized to take similar strengthening action.

The United States has once called to the attention of Great Britain the fact that Japan was not authorized to transfer a portion of her excess strength to the submarine class, since she had not invoked the escalator provisions herself. However, since the treaty soon will cease to be in effect, no further action has been contemplated, apparently, by this government.

Industry Creating Serious Social Problem by Refusal to Hire Workers Over 40.

By Franklyn Waltman.

PROBABLY the most serious long-range problem confronting this country is the growing disinclination of industry to employ workers who have passed their fortieth birthdays — or even their thirty-fifth. It is not an acute problem at the moment, even though it has some serious aspects. But within a few years, if the present tendency continues, it may become a critical problem—or result in radical changes in American life.

WALTMAN.

Competitive pressure for lowering or maintaining price levels; technological developments and increased use of machinery; greater longevity due to medical and hygienic progress and the greater complexity and tempo of life generally, all are contributing to creating a problem which may baffle solution for many years.

Many manufacturing organizations already have shut their doors against applicants for employment 40 years or over. For many years the tendency in the basic industries has been toward the employment of youth. Before the more intensive development of machine production brains and skill were at a premium. Such brains and skill could be attained only through years of training and experience. The older a craftsman became the more valuable he was, because he possessed greater skill.

With the advent of machinery and mass production — and the drive for lower costs or greater per dollar values — the younger man, however, brought the premium in the labor market. The young man, by operating a machine, was able to produce a better article than the finest of artisans could do by hand—and he possessed greater speed and stamina in such work.

The disinclination to employ workers over 40 years of age in industry became more accentuated during the depression and during the recent months of recovery. With a huge labor surplus in the country, the manufacturer subject to heavy competition wanted only the cream of the unemployed, and these invariably were men between 25 and 35 years old—men with some training and experience, but not of a handicapping age to speedy machine operation.

Under the whip of competition and in an effort to offset the costs of the present social security program, manufacturers explored possibilities where machines could be substituted for human workers, and again the younger man was desired to operate such machines. It has been estimated the industrial production of the last year was achieved with nine-tenths of the labor that would have been required in 1929 to produce the same quantity of goods.

This increase in production per worker is not all due to the installation of machinery. A part of it resulted from greater efficiency on the part of workers. In other words, there are today employed in industry a greater number of more efficient — and younger — workers than in 1929.

This development has been in progress in the manufacturing industries for the last two decades. Perhaps one reason why it did not precipitate an immediate problem was that a greater proportion of workers gainfully employed annually were going into the service industries—from manufacturing, agriculture, mining, transportation and communication into the professions, domestic service, distribution and the growing luxury services.

Thus in 1920, 69.8 per cent of all gainful workers were employed in the basic industries and 30.2 per cent in the service groups. In 1929, workers in the basic industries represented 61.9 per cent of the total, with 38.1 per cent in the service industries. In 1935 only 58.4 per cent of all gainful workers were employed in the basic industries and 41.6 per cent in the service groups.

Recently, however, the ban against workers 40 years old or more has spread into the service industries. For reasons of efficiency and as a result of the movement toward setting up old-age pension funds, employers are reluctant to employ workers of advanced ages even in white-collar jobs. It is this development which has given the problem serious and grave aspects.

For instance, the Wall Street Journal several days ago, in commenting on the need for training personnel, asserted: "Executives of one large manufacturing corporation have expressed alarm because in its sales and executive forces most of the men are over 35 years of age. 'What are we going to do,' one of them asks, 'when these men can no longer work? We will be forced to use less experienced men and sacrifice efficiency, or pay a high price for better men than we have trained.'"

It is a shocking thought that men over 35 years of age in the selling and executive occupations are regarded as approaching the end of their usefulness. But it appears to be a reality, and it indicates to some extent the hard core of the problem of reducing Federal relief expenses.

For instance 49.6 per cent of those on WPA rolls are more than 40 years old. Most of them in all likelihood will stay on relief rolls until industrial production passes a point sufficient to absorb the other one-half under 40 years of age. Among all gainful employed workers 40 per cent are past 40 years of age.

Taking the National Youth Administration, the CCC—agencies set up especially to relieve unemployed youths—and the WPA together, 3 per cent of the total on their combined rolls are more than 40 years old. Approximately an equal number—36 per cent—are between 15 and 24 years old. Those between 25 and 39 years old represent 27 per cent of the total. It is this last group which is favored by employers.

The situation of those under 25 years old can be solved by training them for jobs that will come with increasing production. The latter also will force the employment of some of those past 40 years—but their outlook is far from bright.

Jones Testifies In Rail Hearing On RFC Loan

Statute of Limitations Was Van Sweringen Salvation, Committee Hears.

By the Associated Press.

Evidence that the statute of limitations saved officials of the Missouri Pacific Railroad from possible prosecution on charges of making "false" statements in obtaining a $17,100,000 RFC loan was presented yesterday to a Senate investigating committee.

Chairman Jesse H. Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, examiner of the corporation's railroad division, testified that the road, an arm of the Van Swearingen system, failed to disclose obligations to Terminal Shares, another Van Swearingen company.

The question of a violation of the RFC act was referred to the Justice Department, which replied over the signature of Joseph B. Keenan, assistant Attorney General.

The incident involved a contract between the Missouri Pacific and Terminal Shares for the purchase by the former of Middle Western Terminal properties. A total of $3,200,000, paid on principal and interest in connection with the transaction, was listed in a balance sheet accompanying the loan application as "special deposits."

"If I had known in 1931 what I know now," said F. P. Johnson, vice president and chief accounting officer of the railroad, "the item 'special deposits' would not have been the amount shown."

Also called to the witness stand was William Wyer, secretary and treasurer of the Missouri Pacific who testified that he had sworn to statements of verification accompanying applications for RFC loans, and had prepared "cash forecasts" to accompany them in which prospective payments on the Terminal Shares contract were listed as "ordinary vouchers," and lumped in with other items.

In response to questioning by Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, he testified that "work sheets" used in arriving at the various items of the cash forecast were destroyed.

Far-Flung Search Reveals No Clews To Missing Plane

By the Associated Press.

Salt Lake City, Dec. 17.—A widened search from sky and land was directed tonight for an airliner believed to have carried seven persons to death in snow-drifted mountain wilds.

One by one, under skies bright and clear for the first time since the Western Air Express transport disappeared early Tuesday, searching craft swooped down at Salt Lake Airport with the terse reply to hopeful questioners:

"Nothing sighted."

Tom Wolfe, vice president of Western Air in charge of traffic, announced two ground crews had covered an area approximately 6 miles square "without finding a clew."

Some in the ground parties suffered severely from cold and fatigue. Toward the mountain heights, snow ranged from 2 feet to waist deep.

Aid Held Main Aim For Farm Tenants

By the Associated Press.

A many-sided national program aimed at improving the status of tenant farmers, without attempting to convert great numbers of them into land owners, appeared to be favored yesterday by most members of the National Tenancy Commission.

As the group ended a two-day organization session, spokesmen said there probably would be a series of regional meetings before a report was handed to President Roosevelt sometime before February 1.

The commission had the word of Secretary Wallace, its chairman, that billions of dollars would be required to finance any large scale program of ownership for all tenant farmers, estimated to number 2,865,000.

Rescue Ships Stand By Grounded Navy Boat

Tientsin, China, Dec. 17 (AP).—Rescue vessels stood by the United States naval transport Chaumont today, but the grounded ship appeared in no danger.

The Chaumont went aground in the harbor of Chinwangtao, on the northeast China coast, last night after sailing for the United States with 250 Marines.

It was expected the ship would be refloated without damage.

Whitmore Heads Chemists.

New York, Dec. 17 (AP).—The election of Dean Frank C. Whitmore, chemist and author, of Pennsylvania State College, as president of the American Chemical Society for 1938 was announced today.

After President's Taxation Conference

Roosevelt, Leaders Map Savings

House Appropriations Committee is now attempting to prune.

2. Extension of the President's power to revalue the gold content of the dollar, which expires the last of next month.

3. Extension of lending powers of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which expires at about the same time.

4. Legislation continuing the Civilian Conservation Corps.

5. Extension and strengthening of the neutrality law, which expires May 1.

6. Some moves toward reorganization of the complex Governmental structure.

Bankhead pointed out that these items are not complete, and the details of other probable legislative moves have not been worked out. Among these other measures likely to play a major role, is projected legislation to aid farm tenants, in which the Speaker himself is vitally interested. He said proposals for a Federal incorporation law were not discussed at the White House.

The Speaker was not overoptimistic about the reorganization outlook, although it was Bankhead who sponsored the resolution setting up a House committee to explore reorganization possibilities.

"I am willing to go the full route," he said. "But we all must admit it is going to be hard to get a meeting of minds. There always has been and probably always will be opposition in the bureaus concerned. It is going to be hard to get through, and certainly it cannot be accomplished in any omnibus measure. It may be possible to make a start toward consolidations, even if few agencies are actually eliminated."

Bankhead, who is taking no part in the contest between Representatives Sam Rayburn, of Texas, and John J. O'Connor, of New York, for the House majority leadership, said no date has been fixed for the Democratic caucus which will make a choice between the two. He said one proposal is to hold the caucus the day before Congress meets.

In addition to naming a majority leader, the caucus must elect two members to the important Ways and Means committee, to fill vacancies caused by the retirement of J. Twing Brooks, of Pennsylvania, and Samuel B. Hill, of Washington. Once reorganized, the Ways and Means Committee must fill vacancies on other House committees.

Representative Doughton, who sat in on the White House tax conference with Harrison, declined to discuss what transpired. Like the President, he is wed to the principle of the undistributed earnings tax. In an interview preceding the White House conference, he said proposed modifications in application of the tax may be considered by his committee, but he had an open mind on their efficacy.

Congressional leaders are all pessimistic over the possibility of holding down appropriations very far below this year's level. Although it may be possible to keep "ordinary" expenditures within estimated revenues, they point out that expanded departmental activities, emergency functions, the social security act and continuation of relief will make any pruning process difficult.

Estimates on Canal Declared Too Low

By the United Press.

J. B. Willoughby, Wilmington, N. C., engineer, charged yesterday that the Florida Ship Canal will cost more than twice as much as Army engineers estimate.

Appearing before the Board of Army Engineers on behalf of a committee of engineers, geologists and agriculturists, Willoughby said the ultimate cost will be $366,980,000.

A special commission of Army Engineers placed the cost to the Federal Government at $162,985,000. Its report, recommending continuance of the project, is the basis of the present hearings. The canal was started with a Presidential allocation of relief funds and halted when Congress refused to provide additional money.

H. J. Borges, of the Association of American Railroads, held that estimates of the total of shipping that would pass through the canal were excessive.

The hearing will continue today.

'Red Hunters' Formed By Tulane Students

The white flag, they declared, typified "purity of political opinions of Tulane and Newcomb College."

Moise Steeg, jr., law student, said: "We stand for a free press and free speech and the right of assembly, and we don't want any suppression of academic freedom."

Added Price Rise Predicted in Wheat

By the Associated Press.

With wheat prices marking up peaks for recent years, Agriculture Department experts said yesterday they may go even higher.

A price survey by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics said:

"In years which have been more or less similar to the present, domestic wheat prices in January usually have been higher than in December."

It warned this trend "will depend upon extent and rapidity with which reserves are accumulated by European importing countries."

Italy Claims 'Complete' Conquest of Ethiopia

Addis Ababa, Dec. 17 (U.P.).—Italy today proclaimed a "complete conquest" of western Ethiopia as result of the surrender of Ras Imaru and 300 of his rebel followers after a battle along the Gogeb River.

"The last rebel nucleus in western Ethiopia is thus eliminated amidst the rejoicing of the population," an Italian communique said.

Nations League For Americas Hit in Session

Hot Words Fly as Decision Is Delayed; Poison Gas Bill Is Deferred.

and Hildebrando Accioly, of Brazil, led the attack on the American League of Nations suggestions.

They assailed not only the idea of an American league, but the appointment of a committee to study it, declaring establishment of such an organization at present is impossible. Jose M. Cantillo, of Argentina, called the League proposal "immature," bringing the remark from Lleras Camarago, of Colombia, that the idea had existed for a century and was in reality first broached by Simon Bolivar, northern South America's liberator whose memory the committee honored today on the 106th anniversary of his death.

Maximiliano Patricio Brannon, of Salvador, entered the spirited debate by saying:

"The consultative system we set up by the new peace maintenance pact approved by the full conference yesterday is a child with a crown. This child needs regents to form an American league and an American court."

Francisco Castillo Najera, of Mexico, and Felipe Barreda Laos, of Peru, tried to halt the wrangle. Eventually the committee adjourned, returning the report to the sub-committee to study the possibility of sending it to Washington to be considered by a law-codification group to assemble in April under a resolution passed yesterday.

Among the projects adopted by the committee on intellectual cooperation were:

1. A United States proposal to exchange professors and students among the 21 American republics.

2. Recommendations to hold a joint exhibition of old and modern art of these republics.

3. A recommendation for establishment of national associations of writers and artists.

4. A recommendation that the governments which have not done so adopt a Brazilian-Argentine convention for revision of school textbooks to prevent international hatred.

Four Other Plans Adopted.

Mrs. Burton Musser, of the United States, made the reservation that the United States, under its Constitution, would not agree to restrict the writing of textbooks.

The committee postponed action on proposals to control the radio, theater and films "to prevent and, if necessary, to punish," incitement to war or propagation of international hatred.

United States delegates explained their country could not accept these recommendations because their application might be interpreted as censorship.

Resistance Urged To Mexican Stand

Mexico City, Dec. 17 (U.P.).—Passive resistance to the government's socialistic educational system, one of the main points of controversy in the church-state conflict, was urged on Catholics today by the Roman Catholic hierarchy of Mexico.

In a collective pastoral letter signed by the archbishops and bishops, headed by Archbishop Leopoldo Ruiz y Flores, at present in exile in San Antonio, Tex., Catholics were minded of their duty neither to accept the system nor even to pretend to accept it.

The faithful were urged to unite to seek liberty of teaching. "We insist," the pastoral said, "among other practical methods that passive resistance, of which Christians of the past have given us such good examples, be utilized."

Norway Won't Deport Trotzky Immediately

Oslo, Dec. 17 (U.P.).—Leon Trotzky, exiled Russian revolutionary, will be allowed to stay in Norway for "some time," although his residence permit will expire tomorrow, immigration officials said today.

Oslo was filled today wtih rumors that Trotzky would depart for various places, but officials made it plain that if he does so immediately it will be voluntarily.

Mexico has offered him haven, but it is understood that he is making intensive investigations before accepting it. Trotzky is fearful of his enemies, followers of Joseph Stalin, may be attempting to lure him to some spot where he can be killed.

Husband of Chinatown's Angel' Freed in Death

San Francisco, Dec. 17 (AP).—Judge Sylvain J. Lazarus ordered dismissal of manslaughter charges today against Hjalmer E. Groneman, accused in connection with the death of Ella Mae Clemmons, one-time "Christ angel of Chinatown."

law vests all such authority in the board of county commissioners.

"Third, there was a complete absence of a carefully planned system of records and there was a routine of procedure that invited rather than made difficult the criminal practices that existed."

To remedy this situation, the jury suggested:

"First, that the county commissioners when making future appointments to the police force, personally make a careful investigation of each applicant and that only men of intelligence, sobriety and unquestionable integrity, who are physically, mentally, morally and temperamentally fitted for the work, be selected.

"Second, that the board of county commissioners delegate to the chief of police authority to discipline and suspend members of the force when, in his opinion, it may be necessary—subject, of course, to a review by the board.

"Third, that a carefully devised system of checks and records be adopted, and it be required that they be well and accurately kept."

In addition to investigating the alleged bonding racket, the jury considered 26 other charges and returned 19 indictments.

Jones Gives $54,500 To New Deal Drive

By the Associated Press.

Contribution to election campaign chests ranging up to $54,500 were reported yesterday to the Senate Investigating Committee.

Walter A. Jones, of Pittsburgh, informed the committee he had contributed $54,500 to the Democratic National Committee and loaned $50,000 to the Pennsylvania State Democratic Committee and $2,000 to the Good Neighbor League, which supported President Roosevelt.

Mrs. Irenee S. du Pont, of Wilmington, contributed $5,000 to the Republicans in addition to the $416,000 reported by her husband Wednesday, and a Democratic contribution of $17,500 was reported by Lewis S. Rosenstiel, of Greenwich, Conn.

Among the other larger Republican contributors were Mrs. Irene Jackson Sloan, Great Neck, Long Island, $32,500; R. P. Brown, Germantown, Pa., $19,215; Miss Louise Robinson, New York, $10,550; Theodora Pitcairn, Pittsburgh, $14,250; Lester Armour, Chicago, $7,000; John J. Watson, New York, $7,500; Jules S. Bache, $7,800 (and a loan of $2,500 to the Liberty League); Philip D. Armour, Chicago, $7,000; Hill Blackett, Chicago, $6,553, and Mrs. Hill Blackett, of Winnetka, Ill., $5,000.

Other Democratic contributions included $10,000 by F. J. Lewis, of Chicago, and $5,000 by Charles Harwood, of New York.

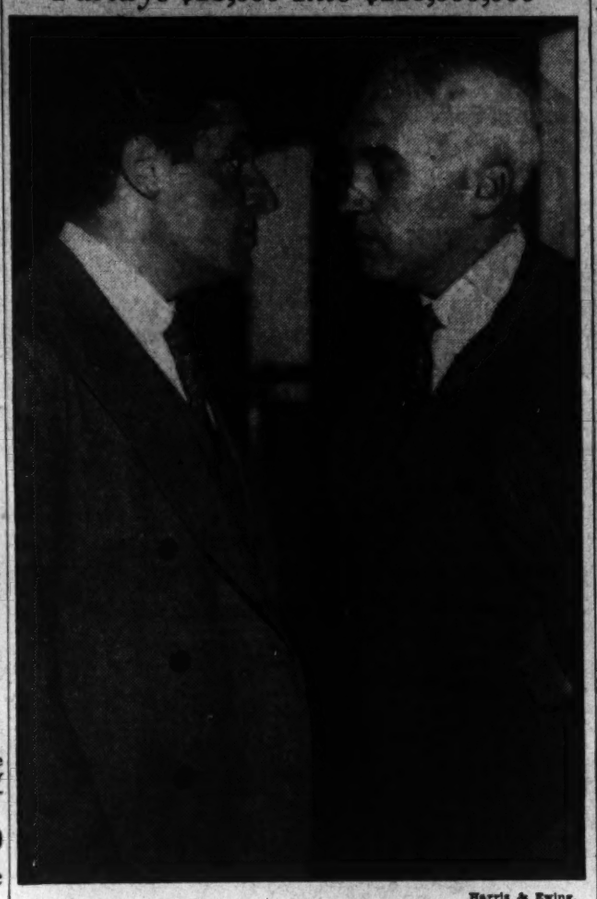
Parlays $13,000 Into $218,000,000



Harris & Ewing.

David Milton, son-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, shown conversing with David Schenker, counsel for the Securities Exchange Commission, after he told how he won control of a $218,000,000 investment concern by putting up $13,000 in cash and 6,500 shares of stock of an inactive insurance.

Rockefeller Kin's Deals Aired

Insurance Co. The latter had a one-fourth interest in the Equity Corporation.

The parallel move toward control, interlocking in the end, came when Underwriters Equities, a corporation controlled by Milton, sold $900,000 worth of stock in two insurance companies, the American Colony Insurance Co. and the Colonial States Fire Insurance Co., to the Interstate Equities Corporation. The latter company was owned and controlled by the Equity Corporation.

Bought Control.

With the $900,000 gained in this transaction, Milton bought 1,150,000 shares of Equity Corporation from Wallace B. Groves, investment trust "expert." This was far more than a majority of the 1,700,000 shares outstanding of the Equity Corporation.

Schenker asserted that in this way Milton acquired control of Equity with $13,000—and that he got this control by using the Equity Corporation's own money, while still holding personal control of the insurance stocks which Equity Corporation's subsidiary, the Interstate Equities Corporation, had "bought" from Milton himself.

Schenker forced Milton to admit that he had never added any more money to his original "investment" of $13,000.

On December 31, Equity Corporation controlled, besides its own resources of $33,000,000, the following companies: General American Life Insurance Co., resources $120,000,000; United Founders, resources $50,000,000, and the North Star Insurance Co., resources $15,000,000.

Incorporated Abroad.

Schenker brought out that Milton, at the top of the pyramid, formed the entire set-up into the North American Securities Corporation, Ltd., incorporated in the Bahamas, where there are no income tax laws. Schenker asked Milton if this act was not for the "purpose of circumventing, avoiding or postponing taxation scrutiny." Milton said merely, "at the beginning it was for tax purposes."

Whereas Milton's prepared statement for the press indicated that the formation of Equity Corporation was for purposes of efficiency and economy, and in order to reduce the number of companies in the field by mergers and dissolutions, Schenker set out to show that in the beginning all Equity Corporation had was 327,532 shares of Yosemite Holding Co. stock, which the latter's prospectuses admitted had no asset value, according to Schenker.

Hamilton Wins Confidence Vote Of Party Chiefs

Republican Chairman Is Upheld, 74 to 2, at Stormy Session

The chairman shook hands with his chief critic, Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York.

"I'm a Republican," Fish said. "I'm going along with him. I just wanted an opportunity to express myself."

The two votes against the chairman were cast by Mrs. Katharine Kennedy Brown, of Ohio, and L. W. McCormick, of Philadelphia, who held the proxy of James W. Arnold, of Georgia. Fish held the proxy of E. A. Rasmuson, of Alaska, but refrained from voting.

Fish precipitated the general argument by declaring:

"If the party does not liberalize and reorganize, you die. Hamilton led the fight against the social security act which alienated millions of wage earners. He went to Boston and made a speech which drove millions out. He has shown that his associates comprise the old guard.

Held Behind the Times.

"We are a quarter of a century behind the times. The wage earners do as much thinking along political lines as any one. They believe the Republican Party lined up with the forces of privilege."

Mrs. Ruth Baker Pratt, of New York, contended the party was opposed only to the form of the act on the theory it was unsound.

Arthur Curtis, of Missouri, asserted:

"I don't see any reason why Hamilton should resign any more than the chairmen of the various States should resign."

Representative Everett Dirksen, of Illinois, took up the discussion of social problems, declaring Republican chieftains needed "a damned good lecture" on ascertaining what the people wanted.

Referring to a statement on the American way of life by Col. R. B. Creager, of Texas, Dirksen said it was "rhetorical pap." He added:

"You're indulging in self-glorification and adulation. You're trying to salve your conscience and you don't get away with it."

Just Begun to Fight.

"Let the word go out that we have just begun to fight," said Walter S. Hallanan, of West Virginia. "Hamilton need have no apologies for the fight he carried on. Nothing has been of said of carrying on for the 16,500,000 unbought and untrammeled voters who cast their lot with the Republican Party."

Mrs. Robert Lincoln Hoyal, of Arizona, called Hamilton the "one man who could build the party."

Hamilton himself admitted "there were a lot of errors" in the campaign preceding the party's crushing defeat, but contended "we still have a future ahead of us."

He said Gov. Alf M. Landon, defeated Republican nominee, supported his position that the chairman should have the full support of the committee to "be free to go ahead and build a new organization."

Fifty-nine committee members attended. Twenty-two of the 31 proxies were approved.

Landon Sends Greetings.

Gov. Landon praised the 16,000,000 Republican voters for their "splendid spirit in defeat," in sending his greetings to the committee members.

His telegram follows:

"The splendid spirit which has been shown in defeat by those who supported the Republican ticket in the last general election should serve as an inspiration to the members of the national committee in their deliberations. Republicans throughout the Nation will look to the committee and the party's elected representatives everywhere for intelligent leadership in formulating the plans for the future. Will you extend my personal regards to the individual members of the committee? Cordially yours,

"ALF M. LANDON."

Several participants advised changes in the party machinery.

Frank Burns, of Washington, favored a change in the personnel of the executive committee. He said in its present status it was a "sort of closed corporation."

Mrs. Brown argued against giving the chairman "carte blanche," instead, she said, the policy should be shaped by the committee.

Harvey Jewett, of South Dakota, supported Hamilton, but held the party must have a "liberal touch." He proposed that Hamilton have "some advisers to give him the other side."

Jewett brought the public discussion to a close by suggesting that they go into executive session and "wash out some of this dirty linen among ourselves."

Committee Proposed.

Representative Carl Bachman, of West Virginia, proposed a committee of five from the national committee to consult with the Republican members of Congress to ascertain the views of the people through elected representatives. Hamilton said he hoped to fill that request.

Bachman charged that Republicans who did not agree with the national committee were being "neglected."

Miss Marion Martin, of Maine, declared:

"If you'd gone along with the chairman as we did in Maine, you would have won in your States, too."

G. Mason Owlett, of Pennsylvania; John L. Green and Henry A. Wise, of Virginia; Mrs. Bertha Baur and George Harding, of Illinois; Harold W. Mason, of Vermont; F. F. Taggart, of Ohio; John D. Sceniar, of Montana, and E. F. Colladay, of the District of Columbia, were among those supporting Hamilton in the rapid-fire exchanges.

Given a mandate to carry on by a decisive margin, Hamilton personally will serve until Republican delegates meet in their 1940 national convention to pick a Presidential candidate.

It's our family's whiskey, neighbor—and neighbor, it's your price!

Us Wilkens down at the river loading up the old Mollie J. with the biggest batch yet

To make sure of getting out all your orders on time, we got the Mollie J. to pull up alongside the bank by the distillery—and this photo shows you The Wilken Family giving a hand loading her up. It's me checking the number of cases with the captain, and my brother William wheeling a load up the gangplank. My brother-in-law Tom don't show up so good, but you can make out the back part of him inside the barge bending over like. Piling up cases there—that's Eddie Poole. Eddie's got a job minding the Mollie J's running gear. I never did know the captain's right name. Everybody on the river just calls him Cap.

Harry E. Wilken

With the holidays coming on—everybody seems set on getting this extra tasty whiskey!

I know business never hummed like it's humming now for the Wilken Family Whiskey!

There never was a month kept us hopping like this! You'd think everybody was ordering our Family's Whiskey. If you ask me, I figure it must be folks are putting by a few extra bottles to tide them over the holidays!

Well I don't rightly see as things could hardly be different from what they are. I mean folks finding the Wilken Family Whiskey tastier and milder feeling on their throat than anything they ever got a taste of. For this whiskey is more than one man's whiskey—it's our own Family's Recipe—the personal favorite of us distillers that have been a family of whiskey making people since I couldn't just say how long. Take Grandpa Wilken. He was a distiller. And Pa Wilken. He put in forty odd years at it. And that's not mentioning William and me and Tom. And the best of everything that all of us ever learned concerning the making of good whiskey is in this Family's Recipe of ours. So I'd say it would be funny if it wasn't just the best you ever tasted!

In connection with the labor board hearing of the Carnegie-Illinois case, L. H. Burnett, of Pittsburgh, vice president of the company, declared that as a party to a contract with its employes the company "will respect its obligation through every possible lawful effort to maintain the legality of the employe representation plans and continue to deal with its employes thereunder."

Agreement Attached.

The C. I. O. labor group has charged that the company insisted the company union approve a wage agreement without submission of the terms to employes affected.

In answer to accusations of company domination, coercion and intimidation of employes, Burnett said:

"The representatives have shown clearly by their independent attitude in making requests and demands upon the company that they are entirely free of any such intimidation, coercion or domination in representing their constituents."

Burnett said more than 90 per cent of the Carnegie-Illinois employes have participated in an election on the question of organization plans. He said that more than 400 representatives of the employes deal with the management.

First Witness Heard.

Elmer J. Maloy, a steel stripper in the Duquesne (Pa.) plant of the company, was the first witness before the board. He testified that employe representatives are paid by the company for attending organization meetings.

He said the employes' group at Duquesne tried in June to take a referendum on compulsory arbitration and formation of a central committee of employe representatives from all the Carnegie-Illinois plants, but the management objected.

The referendum was dropped, he said, after R. L. Lefler, industrial relations manager of Carnegie-Illinois, promised the central committee idea would be considered by the company.

Meanwhile, Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, told the Associated Press in New York that he was not worried over prospects for renewal in Congress of a campaign for a six-hour day for railroad employes.

"The chief item of railroad expense in labor," he explained. "A six-hour day would increase that item by between 25 and 30 per cent. Believing as I do in the fairness of Congress, I just don't believe that Congress would pass such a law."

2 Boys Kill Guard And Flee 'Prison'; Retaken by Police

Lancaster, Ohio, Dec. 17 (AP).—Slugging a guard to death, two prisoners escaped from the Boys' Industrial School today only to be captured shortly afterward in the hills nearby.

The school's riot signal roared warning of the escape. Officials found Hobart B. Stewart, 44-year-old stationary engineer and guard, beaten with an 18-inch wrench. He died two hours later.

Assistant Superintendent George Lamb sent guards and county and city police into the hills in pursuit of Frank Sidar, 17, and Albert Brown, 18-year-old negro, both sentenced from Cleveland for burglary and robbery.

Great Britain to Delay Scrapping of 5 Cruisers

London, Dec. 17 (AP).—Five old British cruisers which were bound for the scrap heap will be kept in service because of "the deterioration of the general international situation," the House of Commons was told today by Sir Samuel Hoare, first lord of the admiralty.

Dope Ring Smashed With Seizure of 20

Boston, Dec. 17 (U.P.).—Federal agents announced today they had smashed a $2,000,000 narcotic ring here with arrest of 18 men and two women. Additional arrests were expected tomorrow.

Clean-up of the ring culminated a concentrated drive that started eight weeks ago.

2 Who Frightened Boy To Death Start Sentence

Poplar Bluff, Mo., Dec. 17 (AP).—Two men started serving jail sentences today for scaring a boy to death.

The men, George Bond and Carl McMurtry, were convicted of having frightened James Ainles, 11, on December 23, 1934, to such an extent that he died.

Punishment was fixed at six months in jail and $500 fine each.

The men, charged with being intoxicated, stopped the boy while he was going to a Christmas program.

74 Dead in Flood.

Manila, Dec. 17 (AP).—Reports from the Cagayan Valley flood area today brought the official toll to 74 known dead and 166 missing, with damage estimated at over $2,000,000.

ral ceremonies be appropriate for "a statesman recognized throughout the world as a leader in the cause of peace among the nations."

The resolution put the committee on record as "disapproving an anaugural parade in which the dominating note is military, and in which guns, cannon, tanks and armaments are prominently displayed."

Calls It Inconsistent.

Such a parade, it continued, would be "plainly inconsistent with the true aspiration of our people and with the position of our Government, as champion of the cause of peace among men and nations."

"If this is a bad time of year to stage a parade, it would be better to have none than to put on a military one," said LaRoe.

When announcing his plans Wednesday, Admiral Grayson said President Roosevelt had discouraged proposals for an elaborate parade because it would increase health hazards of spectators in the event of inclement weather. A feature of the parade, according to the admiral, will be a presentation of the full midshipmen and cadet corps of Annapolis and West Point.

Gen. Malin Craig, Army chief of staff, will be parade grand marshal. Except for Governors of States and their parties, the military units will be the only participating groups.

Direct supervision of activities attending inauguration of the President will be divided among the three District Commissioners, according to announcement by Grayson, general chairman of arrangements.

To Name Chairmen Today.

A total of 17 sub-committees will be appointed, Admiral Grayson said. Unit chairmen are expected to be announced today following a meeting in the office of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen at 9:15 a. m.

Division of sub-committees among the Commissioners was announced as follows:

Commissioner Hazen: Public order, co-operation of civic bodies, finances, budget and auditing, special religious services, tickets and badges and souvenirs.

Commissioner Allen: Housing and hospitality, entertainment and music, press relations and communications, reception, and program and printing.

George P. Hart Funeral Rites Set Tomorrow

Retired Lawyer Descendant of Two Celebrated Pioneer Families.

George Pender Hart, an attorney, died yesterday at his home, 1816 Kalorama road, after a prolonged illness. Mr. Hart, a resident of Washington for 40 years, retired several years ago from the practice of law in the District courts and the United States Supreme Court.

A native of North Carolina, where he was born in Edgecombe County, March 11, 1862, Mr. Hart was a descendant of John Hart, signer of the Declaration of Independence, and a member of the Lee family. He was the third son of Spencer Lee and Unity Permelia Andrews.

Surviving are his wife, Mary Elizabeth Poe, daughter of the late Prof. George Poe, cousin of Edgar Allan Poe, and Margaret Wallace Poe; four sons and four daughters; two granddaughters and one grandson, three sisters and two brothers.

One of his daughters, Margaret Poe Hart, of the Evening Star, is president of the Newspaper Women's Club, and the other children are Lee Poet Hart, Spencer Lee Hart, George Pender Hart, jr., William Edgar Hart, Elizabeth, Mrs. Spencer Darwin and Mrs. Genevieve Cook. A son, John Gordon Hart, died several years ago.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. in the chapel at Hines' undertaking establishment. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

NOW, FOR THE FIRST TIME, YOU CAN TELEGRAPH A BOTTLE OF JOHNNIE WALKER TO ALMOST ANY POINT IN AMERICA*

... through the nearest

TELEGRAPH office

This Christmas, score a scoop in gifts by telegraphing a bottle or so of Johnnie Walker to particular friends. This is the first time you've been able to do anything like this.

By arrangement with your local telegraph office, neither time nor distance are any longer a barrier to Scotland's most famous whisky. The nearest telegraph office will see to speedy delivery, together with your words of greeting.

This new service applies to both Johnnie Walker Red Label (8 years old) and Black Label (12 years old). You will be surprised at how little it costs. Just phone the telegraph company for details of this service—they will send for your money order, if desired.

Of course, for your own use and for gifts to nearby friends, your regular liquor store has holiday stocks of Johnnie Walker.

*NOTE. Johnnie Walker may be sent, under this service, to most sections of the United States. Of course, where alcoholic beverages may not be legally sold and where local regulations conflict, this service is not available.

Sheriff Is Seeking U. S. Aid to Stop Hooded Floggings

By the Associated Press

Southport, N. C., Dec. 17.—A threatening note signed "KKK" led Brunswick County officers today to hope for Federal assistance in breaking up sporadic activities of a band of hooded nightriders, reported to have capped off their floggings by joining in prayer.

Sheriff J. A. Russ said he had asked Government agents to investigate the sending of the note by mail to Jarvis Inman, 22-year-old Freeland filling station operator, a cousin of William Inman, who reported that he and a neighbor, Jesse Cox, had been lashed and warned to "mend your ways," by 25 or 30 men who then held a "prayer meeting."

Bandit Caught By U. S. Agents Gets Life Term

Brunette Pleads Guilty to Kidnaping New Jersey State Trooper.

By the United Press.

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 17.—Harry Brunette, 25-year-old Wisconsin bandit captured after a gun battle with G-men in New York two days ago, pleaded guilty today to a Federal indictment charging kidnaping of a New Jersey State trooper. He was sentenced to life imprisonment.

The Newark Federal grand jury indicted Brunette, Merle Vandenbush, Wisconsin bank robber, still at large, and Brunette's wife, Arlene, in the kidnaping of Trooper William A. Turnbull from New Jersey to Pennsylvania in October.

Mrs. Brunette, wounded in the New York gun battle, was arraigned in Trenton and in default of $100,000 bail was committed to the Clinton Reformatory. She was taken to the hospital there.

Brunette was captured Tuesday morning after Federal agents and New Jersey and New York police trapped him in a New York apartment with his wife. Brunette fired his last shot and surrendered.

Brunette's capture precipitated a quarrel between Federal agents and New York police. J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, claimed his men discovered Brunette's hide-away and planned the capture.

New York Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine charged the G-Men with publicity-seeking and endangering the lives of firemen and bystanders with "needless" shooting.

Attorney General Cummings yesterday defended J. Edgar Hoover against criticism of Hoover's manner of conducting the arrest of Brunette.

"Hoover has orders to get the criminals, dead or alive," the attorney general said, "and how he gets them is his affair. The main thing is that he gets them."

Of the Brunette raid, Cummings said:

"Hoover did a good job, a necessary job, and I've told him I am well pleased. The same hue and cry arose after Federal agents shot John Dillinger to death two years ago. They said somebody might have been shot. The best answer to that is that nobody was shot. The same goes for the capture of Brunette."

Officer Held for Noise Of Motorcycle Freed

New York, Dec. 17 (AP).—Patrolman Michael Darienzo, arrested by Magistrate Overton Harris last Sunday when his motorcycle popped off with much noise in front of Harris' court, was acquitted today of the charge of violating Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia's antinoise law.

The decision was handed down by Chief Magistrate Jacob Gould Schurman, jr., who took personal charge of the case.

After hearing the testimony of court attendants, Schurman held Darienzo's motorcycle made no unusually loud noise, and that, when arrested, he was pursuing his duty.

Mountain Jury Requires Hour 37 Minutes to Reach Decision.

ately. But tonight she was free on $15,000 bond and was motoring back to the farm she and the other members of her family are working at Brewrys Bluff, seven miles from Richmond.

The jury pondered her case this morning for exactly 1 hour and 27 minutes. In her first trial, a jury of mountaineers deliberated only 29 minutes and then found her guilty of murder in the first degree and fixed her punishment at 25 years in the penitentiary.

Verdict Attacked.

As soon as the verdict was announced today, Charles Henry Smith, of Alexandria, who was engaged by The Post to defend Edith, made a motion to Judge Carter that the verdict be set aside and a new trial granted.

He suggested that until this motion could be argued, Edith be granted her freedom on bond.

Judge Carter set the first Monday in March as the date for arguing the motion to set the verdict aside and grant a new trial.

But when it came to the question of bond he hesitated.

"It has been my policy," he said, "never to grant bond to a person who has been sentenced to serve ten years or more.

"A person under sentence of 10 or 15 years is facing a serious proposition. I don't know just how rational they might act."

Defense Counsel M. J. Fulton, of Richmond, who has been retained by the Virginia branch of the National Woman's Party, told Judge Carter that he could cite cases where persons had been granted bail even in first-degree murder cases.

Judge Deliberates.

Judge Carter ordered a recess so that he could deliberate the question.

Meantime, Edith talked to her relatives who were crowding around her.

"This verdict can't stand, can it?" she asked Clay Robinson, her brother-in-law.

"I don't know, sis," said Clay.

"Keep your chin up, Edith," said Earl, her brother, "the fight's not over yet. You see, the other side has just won two rounds. We are going to win the rest."

When Judge Carter returned after the recess, he announced he had decided to grant Edith bail. But this time, he said, it would have to be $15,000 and not $6,000, the sum fixed when she was granted bail after the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals set aside the verdict in the first trial and ordered that a new trial be held.

Readers of The Washington Post help get Edith her new trial. They felt that she had been denied justice in her first trial and they contributed to an Edith Maxwell defense fund, of which The Post was custodian.

The Post engaged Charles Henry Smith, of Alexandria, to defend the girl and carry the fight to the appeals court.

Asked to comment on the verdict today, Attorney Smith said:

"Good sportsmanship and the ethics of my profession prohibit me from commenting on the verdict of the jury.

"I can say, however, that I am more firmly convinced now than ever that Edith Maxwell did not kill her father.

"The only skirmish we have won so far was before the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals. We shall unquestionably invoke the jurisdiction of that court again."

EARL MAXWELL.

Bail a Problem.

There remained the problem of who would put up the $15,000 bail. If it wasn't put up, Edith would be removed to the jail across the way, where she spent part of the 14 months she served in jail after her arrest.

Attorney A. T. Dotson, of Richmond, and M. D. Taylor, of Wise, who pledged their real estate holdings for the $6,000 bond last September, were ready to pledge their holdings again today.

But Judge Carter had said that the bond must be raised to $15,000.

A farmer, E. S. Tate, stepped forward and said he would put up his place as a guarantee that Edith would not run away. He said he had a 24-acre farm with a house on it.

"What, in your judgment, is the value of it?" asked Judge Carter.

Guilt Doubted.

Afterward he told Edith:

"The reason I did it was that I thought they was a-railroading you."

C. D. Lay, who owns land and buildings down in the mountain country, also offered to stand bond for Edith.

"How much are your properties worth?" Judge Carter asked.

"I wouldn't be willing to sell out for $10,000," said Mr. Lay.

In the end, Judge Carter accepted the bond of Messrs. Tate, Lay, Dotson and Taylor, and Edith was allowed to go her way until March.

Edith Maxwell was ill when she came into court this morning.

"I just couldn't eat," she explained. "I have a headache that is killing me."

Case Given to Jury.

Judge Carter gave the case to the jury at 10 o'clock.

The jurors retired to a room just off the courtroom. There they elected Lewis Estes, a young funeral director, as foreman.

When an hour had passed and the jury had not come out, Edith began to feel encouraged. She was remembering that the last jury—the one that sentenced her to 25 years—was out only 29 minutes.

It was 11:37 o'clock when a knocking was heard at the door of the jury room. A bailiff opened the door.

Funeral Director Estes was the first to come out. His expression was grim, and Edith sitting over at the counsel table, shuddered.

When the jurors had taken their seats, Judge Carter asked them if they had reached a verdict.

They said that they had, and Judge Carter asked Funeral Director Estes to hand the written verdict to Clerk Charles Fuller to read.

Second-Degree Verdict.

"We, the jury," intoned Fuller, "find that the defendant, Edith Maxwell, guilty of murder in the second degree, and we fix her punishment as confinement in the penitentiary for 20 years."

Aside from Clerk Fuller's voice, the courtroom was like a tomb.

But a moment later it rang with the sound of Edith's sobbing.

Foreman Estes was asked what happened in the jury room.

"There was no battle," he said. "All twelve agreed that she was guilty. The only question was, what punishment ought she to get. There was one fellow who thought she ought to get 15 years and another who thought it ought to be 18."

"The only reason we were out as long as we were was to get these fellows to agree to 20 years."

Estes said that the jury founded its verdict on instructions No. 3 which Judge Carter gave them. This read:

"The court instructs the jury that every unlawful homicide is presumed to be murder in the second degree. In order to elevate a murder to first degree the burden of proof is on the Commonwealth. To reduce to manslaughter the burden of proof is on the prisoner."

Judge Carter, some time later, asked Commonwealth's Attorney Fred Greear what he proposed to do about Mrs. Anne Maxwell. It has been largely overlooked, but Mrs. Maxwell, mother of Edith, also has been indicted for the killing of Trigg Maxwell.

Greear asked Judge Carter for a continuance of her case, and that request was granted.

Not all the people in this mountain country are against Edith. Those who are for her were shocked by the verdict today, but, at that, they weren't surprised.

"The case should never have been tried here," one of them said. "They should have granted a change of venue.

"The evidence was largely gossip. But down here gossip is gossip."

The lawyers defending Edith would not say what they thought. As Charles Henry Smith said, it would be against the ethics of the profession.

Here is the prospect for Edith Maxwell:

Judge Carter will be asked on the first Monday of March to set the verdict aside and grant a new trial. He is expected to deny that motion.

He is expected to deny it because the motion will be based on the ground that he admitted evidence that should never have been admitted, and excluded evidence that should have been admitted.

If Judge Carter does deny the motion for a new trial, the case can be carried to the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals, which set aside the first verdict and ordered a new trial. In doing this the Appeals Court said that there was not sufficient evidence for a first-degree murder charge and a sentence of 25 years in the penitentiary.

If the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals refuses to set the verdict aside, the case can be carried to the United States Supreme Court.

Of course, if ever a new trial is granted, the defense counsel will again ask that it be held in some other court or county.

Bias Convicted Edith Maxwell, Capital Thinks

All Walks of Life in City, Suburbs, Call Verdict in Wise Injustice

Edith Maxwell, the 22-year-old former mountain school ma'arm, sentenced yesterday to serve 20 years in prison in her second trial for the slipper slaying of her father, Trigg Maxwell, village blacksmith of Pound, Va., is the victim of a gross miscarriage of justice.

She could not receive a fair trial in Wise County if she faced judge and jury for eternity in the western Virginia court, where she twice has been found guilty of murder.

This was the virtually unanimous opinion of Washingtonians and residents of nearby Virginia, an opinion obtained from a cross-section of men and women from many walks of life.

Women and men were equally vehement in their condemnation of the severe verdict and the sentence it carried to the "Lonesome Pine" girl.

"Miscarraige of Justice."

"The verdict was the grossest miscarriage of justice," asserted Mrs. Biddle.

"The case certainly should be tried in some other section of the State, where justice can be obtained.

"This verdict is a challenge to the women of the world. This girl needs, and must have, justice."

Mrs. Biddle's opinion was echoed and re-echoed by men and women in theater crowds, drug stores, cafes and in their homes.

And in Arlington County sentiment ran strong, and more than one resident there felt if the case had been tried across the Potomac from Washington Edith would be free.

"Bring the case to Arlington County, and the girl will have a good chance of being acquitted," asserted Ashton C. Jones, well-known real estate dealer and former president of the Arlington-Fairfax-Alexandria real estate board.

"No person should be sent to prison for 20 years for protecting herself from a drunken man."

A petition should be sent to Gov. Peery seeking a pardon for Edith, suggested George M. Yeatman, chairman of the Arlington County board.

"Her conviction was because she couldn't get a fair trial, due to the one-track minds of the jurymen in her home town," said Frank T. Stone, retired druggist, and candidate for Lieutenant Governor subject to the Democratic primary.

"Bring the case to Arlington County, or take it to Roanoke, and the girl will get a fair trial."

"It is a shame and something should be done about it," said Mrs. J. B. Lowell, president of the Arlington County Women's Club.

Back across the river, as the crowds emptied from Washington's theaters last night, there was never a dissenting comment.

"An injustice has been done," said men and women in evening clothes, and men and women who were emptying from the motion-picture houses.

"I think she got a dirty deal," murmured one girl in a fur coat as she applied her lipstick, just as Edith had before the tragedy in the mountain country.

"She ought to be turned loose, that girl," remarked her escort.

"I don't think she had a fair trial," commented George Lauderbough, white-haired cashier in an E street cafe.

"I think that mountain jury made up its mind before hearing all the evidence, and I don't think Judge Carter's charge to the jury was right."

"I was amazed. I thought she would be freed," remarked Mrs. E. C. Bosher, an ex-Army nurse and a saleslady who has travelled the Lonesome Pine country many times.

"I know conditions there," she continued. "She must have had a brute of a father."

Citizens in Alabama would not return such a verdict, in the opinion of M. G. Moore, of Birmingham, Ala., a pullman official who is in Washington on business.

"The women of our State would resist such tyranny," said he.

"Just a bunch of hard-headed mountaineers," observed Joseph Goldstein, a liquor store proprietor, who lives at 1925 Sixteenth street northwest.

"I could have cried when I heard about it," said his wife.

"Edith deserved a better break, and the normal woman in an enlightened world resents the verdict," asserted Mrs. H. Broder, of Woodley Park Towers.

54 to Be Tried In Plot to Bomb Tokyo Cabinet

Supreme Court Will Hear Charges of Conspiracy for Imperial Rule.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Dec. 17.—Fifty-four fanatical patriots, who called themselves "God-sent soldiers" were ordered today tried by the Supreme Court on charges that three years ago they plotted wholesale assassination of the cabinet by airplane bombs. Their purpose, it was charged, was to clear the way for the Emperor to rule the nation directly as the Mikados are believed to have done in the mythological "age of the gods."

The plotters were arrested July 10, 1933, and have been in prison since while the judicial authorities investigated all ramifications of their fantastic scheme, some details of which were disclosed for the first time today in a statement by the ministry of justice.

That the case has been sent directly to the Supreme Court indicates how seriously the government views the plot. For never before has the highest tribunal been made a court of first instance.

Some of the accused were army and navy men, but most are civilians belonging to the ultrapatriotic groups which have flourished in Japan since the Manchurian conquest began in 1931.

The ministry of justice statement said the "God-sent soldiers" wanted to change the existing system of government and society because they believed it had been poisoned by liberal, materialistic and individualist ideas imported from the Occident. It said they intended therefore to wipe out the cabinet and destroy the machinery of government by armed mass insurrection and re-establish a primitive form of direct imperial rule.

Commander Saburo Yamaguchi, a naval aviator, was charged with the task of flying over the official residence of the prime minister the morning of July 11, 1933, at a time the entire cabinet would be in session there, and destroying the building by bombing. Commander Yamaguchi since has died in prison. This was to be a signal for a general rising of the populace.

Nanking Moves To Settle War OverKidnaping

attitude toward Marshal Chang. The control Yuan (council) voted that the rebel chieftain should be condemned to public execution for his rebellion, a crime "so enormous * * * it cannot be expiated should he (Chang) die a thousand deaths."

Dr. Kung, in a speech broadcast from Nanking, said "the campaign on the Sianfu border will be pursued with unabated vigor."

"While we are all anxious that Gen. Chiang may be rescued and returned to safety * * * our attitude is that the personal safety or movements of one man (referring to Chiang) should not be allowed to interfere with the normal conduct of the government," he said.

After the meeting between Elder and Nanking leaders, an official spokesman asserted it "would be beneath the dignity of the government to negotiate with Marshal Chang, whom we consider a bandit. Nanking might be prepared to offer Marshal Chang assurances for his personal safety, but the government will never come to political terms with him."

It was nevertheless known that efforts to obtain a negotiated settlement of the crisis were going forward.

It was announced that Gen. Chiang Ting-wen, captured at Sianfu last week with the generalissimo, had been freed by Marshal Chang and permitted to carry to the Nanking leaders a statement of his terms.

The government continued to publish evidence supporting its contention that the generalissimo is alive and unharmed, although a prisoner, at Sianfu.

Nanking's reports from the Shensi battlefield pictured uninterrupted successes for the loyal divisions encircling the rebel capital, and officials indicated Marshal Chang's readiness to negotiate was due in part to his desperate military situation.

Japan Issues Warning.

Tokyo (Friday), Dec. 18 (AP).—Japan served notice on China today she will consider her own security and the peace of the Far East seriously endangered "if the young marshal's (Chang Hsueh-liang's) program is carried out and China turns red," the Domei (Japanese) News Agency reported.

Hachiro Arita, foreign minister, told Chinese Ambassador Hsu Shih-ying that "pending clarification of the situation the Japanese government is watching developments in the Sianfu coup with serious concern."

He pointed out that "according to the press, Chang Hsueh-liang favors the adoption of Communist toleration."

for carrying the archbishop's speech, in which he called Edward's determination to marry Mrs. Simpson "a violation of Christian principles of marriage" and termed friends of the former King "a circle whose standards and ways of life are alien to the best instincts and traditions of his people."

The name of Father Charles E. Coughlin, of Detroit, was inferentially injected into the debate tonight.

Lieut. Comdr. E. F. Fletcher, Laborite, flung the archbishop's name into the debate at the same time he mentioned the name of Father Coughlin.

"There has been a certain amount of criticism of the broadcast of the Archbishop of Canterbury last Sunday," Fletcher said.

"I can only say that America has with very great relief seen the end of its radio priest."

800 Ask Edward for Jobs.

Enzesfeld, Austria, Dec. 17 (AP).—The weary Duke of Windsor received in amused silence today the job applications of 800 Austrian madchens, most of them stenographers, watched the film antics of Mickey Mouse and sipped spiced wine for what was described as "a cold in the head."

The communications from job seekers were among 6,000 letters from feminine admirers which the former King of England has received since he renounced his throne for Wallis Warfield Simpson and came to castle Enzesfeld.

To revive his languorous spirits, the Baron and Baroness Rothschild, his host and hostess, arranged for a showing of American movies, among them Mickey Mouse, and prescribed for his cold and headaches the remedy highly regarded by Austrian farmfolk—hot red wine, spiced with cloves, sugar and cinnamon.

Will Play Santa Claus.

Enzesfeld, Austria, Dec. 17.—Edward, Duke of Windsor, will appear in a new role Christmas Day—that of Santa Claus.

Upon the Baroness Rothschild's urging, the youthful former ruler has consented to distribute the presents when she holds her annual Christmas party for the children of castle servants and nearby peasants.

By the United Press.

Mrs. Simpson Assailed.

Cannes, France, Dec. 17 (U.P.).—Angered residents, many of them wealthy British aristocrats, threatened tonight to drive Mrs. Wallis Simpson off the Riviera.

Mayor Pierre Nouveau of Cannes told the United Press he was deluged with letters protesting against the American woman's presence in the Mediterranean resort.

Some of them came from English women residents, he said, and others were from taxpayers who berated him for sending two large baskets of roses to Mrs. Simpson at the Herman L. Rogers villa.

"I cannot take sides in this matter, either for or against Mrs. Simpson," the mayor said, "but, nevertheless, we cannot ignore the protests of so many English residents."

It was reported tonight an Englishman has been arrested at Menton on charges of sending threatening letters to Mrs. Simpson.

It was believed that if the antagonism toward her continues, Mrs. Simpson will seek seclusion somewhere else to await the granting of her final divorce decree, so she can marry former King Edward.

She has been upset by scores of anonymous letters threatening her life, and refuses to venture from the villa unless accompanied by bodyguards of the French Surete Nationale.

The people of Cannes, who were proud to receive Mrs. Simpson as their guest two weeks ago while Edward was on the throne of England, apparently feared her presence might interfere with the Riviera's "high-class" trade.

Mrs. Simpson ventured from the Rogers villa atop Mount California twice today, accompanied by her bodyguards.

She made an automobile tour of the nearby towns of Antibes, Grasse and Juan Les Pins during the morning. She left the villa again at 9 o'clock tonight, supposedly for a social appointment in Cannes.

Loyalists Trap Reich Soldiers Helping Rebels

lero, in a lengthy note addressed to Great Britain and France, accused foreign allies of the Spanish Fascists with "prolonging the civil war."

He declared a Franco-British mediation proposal was "unjust and impracticable," but offered to accept it on his own conditions.

The note did not disclose the specific conditions of the Socialist administration.

Apparently the Boadilla action was part of a wide offensive by Gen. Francisco Franco, the insurgent commander. Other fighting was in progress in northwestern University City, and from the northeast, Fascist troops were moving toward Madrid.

Government commanders believed Franco next would try to drive a wedge between Madrid and Valencia, the new seat of government to the southeast.

Madrid counted 63 dead and more than 200 wounded as the result of yesterday's air raid, which ended in a spectacular aerial battle between scores of Fascist and Socialist planes. Four enemy pursuit planes and one bomber were shot down, the government command asserted.

Hope for General War.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Border, Dec. 17 (AP).—The Spanish government's lone hope for victory lies in European war, uncensored reports from Madrid said today.

These advices said the Madrid-Valencia government, unable to control the anti-Communistic elements within its defense, now knows its cause is hopeless unless there is a general conflagration.

Intelligent Spaniards supporting the government have come to feel they cannot depend upon Russia alone; that Italo-German recognition of the insurgents was a death blow; that there is only disappointment in hoping for help from the Socialist government of France, in the present circumstances.

Only the most unlimited concessions to power-hungry Syndicalists have staved off an explosion within the government Popular Front. And the government is impotent to control the anarchistic elements within the National Workers Federation.

The "Fai" (Iberian Anarchists' Federation) ignores laws, decrees and ordinances of the government. "Fai" fighters ignore military commanders. One anarchist leader told a foreigner coldly:

"Take prisoners when food is so low? Foolish!"

Militia Uncontrolled.

A military commander said:

"I can do nothing with the anarchist militia. They fight when and where they please. If I should try to enforce orders, I would be shot."

Hence political prisoners have been shot at the rate of 25 a day in Madrid; 50 to 75 a day in Valencia; 30 to 50 a day in Barcelona.

There even are rumors in Madrid, said the uncensored reports, that the anarchist commander, Buenaventura Durruti, who was buried as a hero killed in action, was in fact shot by his own men.

Mysterious desertions and disappearances continue.

One observer was told on the highest authority that the whole general staff of Gen. Sebastian Pozas disappeared en route from Madrid to Valencia.

Twenty exchange control experts who left the capital for the new seat of govrenment never reached there.

Whole battalions have gone over to the Fascists.

Mrs. Cornelia F. Heflin.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 17.—Funeral services for Mrs. Cornelia F. Heflin, 68, of near Cropp, Stafford County, who died here Wednesday night, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow in Grace Methodist Church, Fauquier County.

Mrs. Heflin is survived by her husband, Charles M. Heflin; a son, Silas G. Heflin, of Cropp, and a brother, Silas A. Manuel, Washington.

The Second Maxwell Verdict.

The second conviction of Edith Maxwell on the charge of murdering her father is no more impressive than was the first verdict against her. The conduct of the trial and the swift decision of the jury both suggest that the people of Wise County have convinced themselves that she ought to be punished, regardless of the actual evidence in the case.

Those who have followed the proceedings were astonished when the young school teacher's plea for a change of venue was denied. Her first trial strongly indicated that she could not expect fair judgment without such a change. Since the court was not disposed to remove her case from this atmosphere of prejudice, the second trial seems to have been merely a waste of time and money.

Irregularities in the trial just closed cast further doubts upon the verdict. Judge Carter admitted evidence about an ax supposed to have disappeared from the home of a relative of the Maxwells living nearby. But after the jury had heard this testimony, without a shred of evidence to connect the ax either with Miss Maxwell or the crime, the judge instructed the jury to ignore it. Unwarranted inferences in the arguments of the Commonwealth's attorney, to the effect that the defendant had picked up a weapon and said she would kill her father, were also permitted to go uncorrected.

Coroner MacDonald of Washington, Coroner Hix of Wise and two other medical experts testified that the girl's father could not have died from a blow on the head. Against this stands the indecisive findings of two doctors hired by Maxwell's friends to perform an autopsy. Recommendation of the maximum penalty for second-degree murder in the face of this testimony is definitely disquieting.

Virginia's Supreme Court set aside the first verdict on the ground that it was not justified by the evidence. It could not be called surprising if similar findings should eventually be handed down against the verdict reached yesterday.

A $300,000,000 Loss.

Both good and bad news comes from the maritime strike front. Discouragement is found in the open and acrimonious break between President Ryan of the International Longshoremen's Union and Harry Bridges, the Pacific Coast leader of the longshoremen. However, as their hostility is of long standing, the present flare-up seems unlikely to injure the increasingly favorable chances for a settlement of the West Coast dispute. And there is certainly good news in the reported agreement over the control of hiring halls for unlicensed seamen—one of the major issues of the strike.

If these hopes end in disappointment, as on so many previous occasions, the pressure of public opinion may force the Government to intervene more decisively than has been the case so far. As the strike enters its eighth week the ill-effects are being felt over an increasingly wide area. It is reported that 25,000 farmers, represented by the heads of 55 co-operative marketing associations, are preparing to draft resolutions demanding State and Federal action to move their products. Retailers are also suffering from reduced buying. Manufacturing concerns are curtailing operations because of shortages of waterborne raw materials and increased costs of land transportation, and workers are being laid off because of the disruption of commerce.

A survey by the shipowners indicates that the daily losses from the strike amount to about $7,250,000 while the total loss to date is placed at over $300,000,000. With these figures in mind, it is impossible to pretend that the tie-up is not a matter of general public concern calling for outside intervention, if the present hopes of successful negotiations are not realized.

Every day of delay in achieving a settlement emphasizes the necessity of setting up a mediatory agency that will in future be able to exert pressure upon the parties to secure negotiated agreements. Fortunately, such a measure has been drafted and preparations are under way to introduce it at the coming session of Congress.

The Opportunity In Housing.

Every session of Congress since the New Deal came into power has been concerned with housing legislation. The subject again looms up as one of the major items on the calendar of the Seventy-fifth Congress, convening next month. And at last there are encouraging indications that some definite and logical policy may be adopted.

The fumbling which has been so obvious does not mean that there has been any lack of governmental interest in housing. Indeed, the Administration is now engaged in a variety of experiments aimed at the worthy objective of providing better living quarters. But nearly every one has come to recognize that these haphazard ventures have not solved the problem of putting idle men and dormant money to work in the lagging construction industry. Clearly a more scientific approach is in order.

The need for more extensive home building is not open to question. Nor does any one pretend that the resources to carry out a large-scale housing program are lacking. It is only the want of organizing genius which seems to keep the construction industry in a prolonged slump while most other enterprises have experienced a wide measure of recovery. The administrative problem, therefore, is to call forth the best leadership obtainable and formulate a policy that will tend to break the present log-jam.

Some of the responsibilities of the Administration in this field are unmistakable. First, it should co-ordinate its housing activities and eliminate all the present conflicts between various governmental units. So long as different branches of the Government are working at cross-purposes, and no comprehensive housing policy has been approved, private enterprise will be handicapped in doing its share. Especially is that true when subsidized Federal projects actually compete with private efforts.

It is obvious that no public housing program consistent with the current budgetary outlook could of itself make a substantial impression upon the housing shortage. Subsidies will be absolutely essential to the elimination of slum areas. But that is a relatively small part of the larger housing problem. If housing is to take its logical and vital place in the recovery program, private financial and industrial agencies must be organized to assume major responsibilities. Legislation submitted to the next Congress ought to be carefully adjusted to forwarding this end.

For various reasons temporary continuation of the FHA seems desirable. That section of the FHA which specializes in large-scale housing projects can render a unique service in forthcoming months. Even more important is the reduction of interest rates under guaranteed mortgages. Many authorities are convinced that extensive home-building operations can not be expected until financing costs have been reduced more nearly to the level prevailing in Great Britain and other European countries.

Beyond the financial problem there is the urgent task of developing a real housing industry. At present building is still largely in the handicraft stage. There is not much hope for mass production of low-cost dwellings until the industry itself has revolutionized antiquated procedures. Primarily, of course, that is an obligation upon leaders in the business world. But the Government can render valuable assistance by the promotion of research and the dissemination of authoritative advice.

Efforts to deal with this vital economic and social problem through emergency measures have failed. There is no longer any excuse for considering the housing program merely as a means of providing temporary employment. The forthcoming Congress will miss a real opportunity if it fails to outline a comprehensive and clear-cut policy to facilitate private building as well as subsidized reclamation of slums.

Forgotten Americans.

The twentieth and final volume of the "Dictionary of American Biography" has just been published. This compilation of the life stories of the men who have carved the Nation's destiny represents eight years' effort and the expenditure of over half a million dollars on editorial work alone. In all, the careers of 13,633 Americans are examined.

The biographies are the work of 2,243 contributors, selected not only for their familiarity with the subject assigned, but for their distinction in scholarship as well. Their work divided into two categories. First, there was the task of gathering all recently discovered information concerning the country's well-known figures, resulting in many cases in new delineations. The other major duty of the editors, was research into obscure records for accounts of citizens who, without having achieved mention in history books, nonetheless contributed materially to the story of America.

For example, Hannah Adams is presented, the first woman in the country to make writing a profession; and Ohio Columbus Barber, who peddled matches of his own manufacture and later founded the Diamond Match Co. Other chapters consider William Bullock, an orphan boy who revolutionized printing with his invention of the high-speed press; and Francois Prevost, surgeon, who "alone in a Negro cabin dimly lit by candles, assisted only by a slave woman, without anaesthesia, without asepsis, without modern instruments, probably without even common cleanliness," performed the first Caesarian sections in medical history.

These are the real forgotten Americans. In uncovering their names, the Dictionary throws colorful sidelights on the national scene—sidelights which illumine the whole story of our country. In the final writing of history many generals and Presidents dwindle as perspective lengthens. And that reduction enables us to see more clearly the contributions of orphan inventors, resourceful surgeons and ingenious match peddlers.

Calling The Bluff.

For the first time since the President and Administration spokesmen began to tell the country that a balanced budget might be expected within the next year or two, some commentators are beginning to be disposed to take such prophecies seriously. Since the election, indeed, the tide of optimism has mounted steadily, and people who should know better have been saying that the budget might actually be brought into balance in the coming fiscal year, ending June 30, 1938.

To some extent this cheerful attitude is due to the general business improvement, which has brought with it increased revenues and reduced the necessity for relief outlays. To a large degree, however, it is an outcome of nothing more substantial than a Micawber-like faith that "something will turn up."

Fortunately for the country this dangerous complacency, which the President and his chief financial advisers have sedulously inculcated, is now rudely shattered by the blunt pronouncements of Speaker Bankhead and Representative Buchanan, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee. The former merely hopes to "get within sight of a balanced budget within the next two years." The latter sees only a fighting chance of even balancing the Government's ordinary expenditures against revenues during the coming year. "As long as we keep adding agencies and functions," Mr. Buchanan explained, "we've got to appropriate for them and we can't cut down."

These plain-speaking realists know very well that the chance of balancing the budget next year is practically nil. It may be economically possible, but it is not politically feasible. During the elapsed portion of the present fiscal year we have spent as much as we did during the same period a year ago. Only the Treasury's practice of deducting the net receipts of lending agencies from current outlays deludes the uninitiated into believing that we are actually beginning to economize.

Last September President Roosevelt placed the prospective 1937 deficit at $957,000,000 before making any provision for debt retirement and excluding $569,000,000 paid out to veterans. To that figure, must be added unbudgeted relief appropriations which the President then placed at less than $500,000,000, but which may easily run much higher.

Moreover, these deficit computations were based upon the assumption that receipts would reach the extraordinarily high figure of $5,666,000,000. So it is evident that only a combination of rapidly rising revenues and drastically reduced outlays could close the gap in the budget next year.

While there is good reason to feel encouraged about the improved prospects resulting from better business, only those who like to dwell in a fool's paradise will pretend that the end of deficits is as yet in sight. The House leaders have performed a real service in dissipating illusions that the Administration is about to balance the budget without new taxes and without painful retrenchment. It is only by frankly facing the facts that the importance and urgency of cutting present governmental costs can be brought home to the people.

There are few traffic fatalities in Russia. Instead of slapping a reckless driver on the wrist and saying, "Naughty, naughty!" as is done over here, Russian authorities shoot him. This permanently disposes of one reckless driver, and somehow it discourages others who may have been contemplating taking up reckless driving for amusement.

A New Refuge For Trotzky.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Mexico has ever been hospitable to alien refugees and her invitation to Leon Trotzky to abide there after his permit to reside in Norway expires December 18 offers a solution of a problem acute to most European nations as well as to the exiled Communist leader himself.

Since the execution of Zinovieff, Kameneff and other allies of Trotzky in Russia there has been no doubt that the same fate awaited him if he should return. And after Norway, which harbored him largely for internal political reasons, lately found Trotzky had violated his sanctuary by conspiring anew against present limitations of communism, he has been held a virtual prisoner. He was without a visa, and otherwise was human dynamite.

Mexican laws would forbid him from mixing in political life, but if Mexico permits him to use that base for unrestrained advancement of his particular brand of world revolution by his influential pen, his transfer to this continent may raise new questions.

Labor Comparisons.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I read with interest and I must confess also with a certain degree of amazement the article concerning chain gangs, reprinted from the Baltimore Evening Sun.

There is a well-known proverb that comparisons are odious and I think contrasting a chain gang of enforced labor with the "free and undisciplined construction gangs of road contractors—not all the road work is done by prisoner labor—who get drunk and steal, create disorder and at times annoy the girls and women, etc," as it is described in the article is unfair. By carrying out such argument and reasoning to its logical conclusion, all labor would be better if enforced. I hold such a premise to be unwarranted and unreasonable and, in fact, a slur on free labor.

I quote further from the article. "On the job the officers on duty sit upon elevated platforms overlooking the work. They are armed with revolver and automatic shotgun." Undoubtedly this promotes efficiency, but would the writer presume to contend that efficiency under such circumstances is anything to boast of and suggest, by comparing such efficiency with that of free labor, to the detriment of the latter, that the free and undisciplined construction gangs of road contractors would be more efficient by the application of similar methods? Such, at least, is the impression I gather from the article.

That the barracks, mess hall, kitchen, storerooms, etc., are spotless in their cleanliness, that the food is choice and wholesome, and the cots comfortable, etc., are cause for congratulation, assuredly. That the treatment is humane is praiseworthy. Personally, as an American steeped in American traditions, I dislike the thought of chains, though I suppose, through experience in prison management, such things have been found necessary.

But I think the disparagement of free groups by way of contrast can hardly be commended.

The Archbishop's Words.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

King Edward did not have to choose between a "loveless marriage" and its opposite. He had lived for 40 years unmarried. He roamed the world and met thousands of beautiful, cultured, adaptable women. To wait until he was 42 years old and had ascended the throne of the British Empire, at one of the most critical times in modern history, to shock the Christian world by an announcement such as he made regarding a twice-divorced woman of the night-club social set, called for words from the ecclesiastical head of the English Church.

I must believe that better thinking people in all countries will prayerfully think in the spirit of the archbishop's obvious wish, that former ex-king Edward will yet "come to himself" and place his ability and vibrant personality at the service of the empire which he professes to love so well and which as a whole so delighted to honor his as its ruler!

Mt. Holyoke Concert.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In the Christmas concert to be given December 19 by the Mount Holyoke College carol choirs, the director, Dr. William Churchill Hammond, will be offering the farewell concert of his long career. He retires at the end of this year.

This is the first time since 1929 that Washington has had the privilege of hearing Dr. Hammond's choir. Ten years ago the choir sang here to a packed auditorium, with 400 listening to the concert through amplifiers in an adjoining hall. The size and enthusiasm of the audience at the Press Club Saturday night will indicate the discrimination and importance of Washington's musical public.

From Another Motorist.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The difficulties experienced by "Motorist," as related in The Post of December 11 in connection with registering his car, are not so different from the experiences of many others of us who are compelled to deal with the bureaucrats along the avenue.

My own recent experience is probably very similar to difficulties of countless others, in connection with securing registration plates for the coming year. Perhaps, however, a recital of the facts will enable some other victims to take steps in time and so avoid being left without the indispensable plates after January 1.

On October 30 I forwarded to the Bureau of Vehicles and Traffic a properly executed application for a 1937 renewal of my car registration. I included in the payment therefor, 10 cents for delivery of the new plates to me. As there was no traffic violation ticket out against me, and my application was in well in advance of the usual end-of-the year rush, I actually expected to receive the plates within a reasonable time.

Five weeks went by and no plates reached me. Then upon going to the bureau to investigate, after repeatedly trying to get some satisfaction by telephoning without avail, I learned that my plates had been turned over by the bureau to a delivery service which has the contract for distributing the plates to those who wish to avoid losing a day from their work and so pay the 10 cents fee for delivery. The plates were thus entrusted to the delivery service on November 11, 12 days after I had sent in my application. The delivery service had had my plates for 23 days. By long and somewhat loud protests, I managed to get a man in authority sufficiently interested in my case so that he telephoned to the proprietor of the delivery service to the effect that if my plates were not delivered within two days the bureau would issue to me duplicate plates and require the delivery service to pay for them. I got my plates—by going after them—just 38 days after sending in my application for them.

Motorists who have paid for the delivery of plates, and who have not yet received them, might do well to take a day off and go down to investigate before the lack of the plates causes them the inconvenience of not being able to use their cars.

Edward's Farewell.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The unique radio address of one Edward Windsor for which the world waited breathlessly was more an appeal to kindred spirits everywhere than a farewell to the British Empire. A life of intense activity lies ahead and in this he will be aided, as is Lindbergh, by one who understands his aspirations and shares his desires.

Hail Edward Windsor, citizen of the world! May he be an ambassador of peace to all and a salesman of good will!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Mr. Roosevelt, we learn, is back to weigh the anchor on the ship of state and start out on a national voyage in some direction.

If he is quite human he will interpret the election returns as a mandate for definite action. Let us hope he is superhuman. Perhaps The Post will receive many letters as to what Mr. Citizen meant when he voted. In my vote was the mandate to continue letting the Supreme Court have the last word, because this was an important part of the combination we have enjoyed in the last few years. There is no individual in the United States sturdy enough in the true fiber of statesmanship and in the public eye, who has sufficient rugged individualism to command each of the people successfully to stand on his head and let everything which jingles fall out of his pockets. We want all the protection possible by virtue of established law against the hazards of one-man rule.

It is not unheard of that an individual may become over-taxed mentally to such an extent that his judgment may become impaired. When this happens in one-man rule it may not be observed in time to avoid running on the rocks. A slight error by any pilot on 24-hour duty may wreck or damage the ship.

Reply To Toronto.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In Detroit feeling runs high against Canadians who haul down wages in Detroit plants and spend them across the line. Names are applied to these non-tax-payers. Blanket condemnation of Canadians and all their works moves the more vitriolic to an exhibition of harshest criticism.

Mr. Frances, of Toronto, in The Post of December 14, seems to have caught the same idea—in reverse, in his reaction to Franklyn Waltman's views on Edward VIII and his possible relation to Canada. Many Americans agree wholly with Mr. Frances on this point, but when he allows his personal irk and irritation caused by a single release of one journalist to magnify the charge that this country is to blame for the existing world chaos, remarks so removed from common sense demand rebuttal.

Does his indictment of not minding one's own business extend to this country alone? His comment on American relief in Belgium is offered in answer. And if the abdication of a British King does not constitute a question on which stray opinions anywhere in the world are valid, will Mr. Frances in his wisdom explain what does?

But He's Not A Republican.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Mr. Waltman's recent column about Edward in Canada was impudent and ill-advised, but there is no reason why M. Frances should attempt to match it in bad taste. Possibly, M. Frances, being a Canadian, did not realize that that was a tough job. We, knowing Mr. Waltman to be a Republican, expect him to be wrong and are not excited.

Though you would never guess it, Mr. Waltman was attempting in his elephantine way to be funny, but M. Frances, instead of giving a ham act the bird it deserved, threw a few dead cats at Uncle Sam, who was not even on the bill but down at Buenos Aires. His charges are, of course, beneath contempt, but his remarks caused me to wonder why we so instinctively resent the citizens of that great but shaky empire.

I think it is because of that crawling hypocrisy so well exemplified in Stanley Baldwin's speech in Parliament about his "friend" Edward. His crocodile tears at taking leave of that lively prince who represented everything he hated—a King with a mind of his own, sincerity, and a very real sympathy for the hapless wretches of the depressed areas—showed British genius at its worst.

End Of An Era

ALL the livery stable men, Hod and Duke, Kelly and the Greenwood boys, were fine men. They were toss-pots, perhaps, and they slept in odd corners, and their clothes were seldom of their own buying. Still there was a fine simplicity about them, a sturdy individuality, an authentic freedom. They never quite stopped being boys. They curried, they cleaned wagons; strange and unfamiliar in fuzzy stove-pipe hats, they drove hacks on ceremonial occasions. But these were odd jobs. They were not jobs at all—they were things you did carelessly, of your own choice. To dig butter from tubs and weigh out sugar, to stand the day long at lasting machine was not for them. That would blur the fine bloom of this freedom. Certain things they lost, to be sure; you wonder now if they missed them. And you wonder, too, what has become of them these later days. For there are no stables, now.

Of course you have memories of the stable in winter—of the sleighs, and the chiming bells, of horse blankets frosted with white hair drying on the rail fence, of the office and the hanging oil lamp and the cannonball stove about which men in buffalo coats argued. But these things were beyond a boy's province; you remember them with your nose against the frosty panes, and a sled bumping your heels. And now, as you summon your memories from the past, it is always summer—late summer and late afternoon. Sparrows chirp in the sunlight that lingers in the maple tops, that sifts down in long dusty shafts over the stable yard. Franklin Pierce Chamberlin is selling a horse—and almost you'd forgotten him. His name was on the sign over the great door, "T. P. Chamberlin, Prop." And he was a prop to the community at large. A traveled man, a man of strange and fabulous experience, every year he drove with Hod or the Duke to the green Vermont and New Hampshire hills, came back like a Lowland raider with a string of fat and shaggy horses. Jaalam was but the center of his web, and this covered the towns for miles around. He knew every farmer, every grocer; without him, without the livery stable, the land must have slipped back to savagery and foot traffic. Now he is in full splendor—a keen, lean, long-legged man with a buckhorn mustache, a tailed coat, immaculate boots and linen—for he is selling a horse to Sam Cozzens from West Purchase.

* * * *

There is about this a ritual. Sam Cozzens is glum, noncommittal; Chamberlin cracks his whip and cracks jokes. Hod and the Duke and the Greenwood boys have worked over the horse since morning; his coat is satin, his feet are shod with fire, his neck is an arch of pride. Buckles wink golden as they hitch him to the heavy stable wagon; they lock the rear wheels with chains; the Duke shakes back his long black hair and the reins tighten. He chirrups, the horse leans against the collar and hames, and the wagon moves. Dust drifts on the light air as they wheel, return and pass.

"Pull?" Chamberlin cracks the whip. "You get a chain around the Town House, Sam, and he'll land it in your back yard."

"Neah. And get him out in that low field of mine and he wouldn't pull the hat offen your head. Can he go—or can he?"

The Duke swoops to earth, and with swift fingers Hod strips the harness. The Duke croons, his lips close to the flaring red nostrils; his dark eyes have a flat glitter, and now you believe the tales of his Indian blood. He whistles softly and gathers the halter, and feet and shod hooves pad in the soft dust as they go running down the street. They turn, they come back—and this you remember.

* * * *

You remember horse and man running steadily, swiftly, as one. The Duke runs easily, without effort, his dark hair swinging over flat, high cheek bones; the horse paces and tosses his head as he breasts the pattern of liquid shade and sunlight; his legs are whalebone, and his tail a war pennon; he snorts, and the foam flecks are silver on his mahogany flanks. They sweep by in a supple flow of motion and power, horse and man running tirelessly, running endlessly toward the red sun. Your throat tightens at the sheer beauty of it. The whiplash cracks.

And then, in the checkered shade, begins the appraisal, the drawled disparagement, the long bargaining.

* * * *

But it was purty, and it was a picture. Already the sun is low over an era; already Hod needs the fingers of both hands to tick off the automobiles in town—and we boys who watch and remember will, in our day, count the Jaalam horses in the same manner. But this remains—the color and the scent and the feel of it, the savor of a lost and vanished romance.

I know, I know. We progress, and that is good. But is a gas pump ever a picture? And do sparrows raise their small and cheerful voices about the garage door?

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Unsatisfied Germany.

DR. HJALMAR SCHACHT, Germany's minister of economics, today let it be known that unless the Reich is given colonies to exploit the world may expect her to try to get them by force.

"Germany," he said in an article in Foreign Affairs, remains the lone unsatisfied large power.

"So long, then, as the problem of colonial raw materials is not solved for Germany, so long will she remain a source of unrest despite all her love of peace. It is that love of peace which still permits her to entertain the hope that she can solve the colonial problem peacefully and that she can take her place in the ranks of the 'haves.'"

Dr. Schacht's statement is all the more essential because heretofore he has been regarded as somewhat opposed to the belligerent stand of Fuehrer Hitler and the Nazi extremists about him. Yet while he expresses his views in more diplomatic language than Herr Hitler, the net effect is the same—Germany must have colonies.

• • • •

INCIDENTALLY, Dr. Schacht would appear to challenge Sir Samuel Hoare's declaration at Geneva last year in favor of a wider distribution of the world's raw material resources. For while Sir Samuel was understood to stress on "access," Dr. Schacht stressed "control."

"First," said Dr. Schacht, laying down the two conditions which he considers essential for a solution, "Germany must produce her raw materials on territory under her own management. Second, this colonial territory must form part of her own monetary system."

"Colonial raw materials," he explains, "cannot be developed without considerable investments. Colonial markets are not of the kind that can live by the personal needs of the native population. Shirts and hats for the Negroes and ornaments for their wives do not constitute an adequate market.

"Colonial territories are developed by the building of railways and roads, by automobile traffic, radio and electrical power, by huge plantations, etc." And as such development depends on long-term investments "the German currency system must prevail in the colonial territories so that the required investments may be made with German credits."

• • • •

DR. SCHACHT pointed out that Great Britain has "more than one-quarter of the earth's surface at her disposal," and quotes a British authority as saying that of an estimated twenty-five varieties of essential raw materials, Britain was deficient only in five. Germany, on the other hand, is "completely without nineteen."

The United States is virtually self-supporting both with regard to raw materials and market. France is another one of the big "haves." So is Russia. Japan and Italy recently have gone out and taken what they need. So they, too, are among the "satisfied."

"Germany remains the lone unsatisfied large power," Dr. Schacht observed. Yet, he declared, in the 25 years' average time that she held them "she did more with her colonies than other countries had done in 250 years."

• • • •

ROOM for Germany, he insisted, "is not a problem of imperialism. It is not a mere problem of prestige. It is simply and solely a problem of economic existence." Because of that—and on the basis of President Wilson's "Fourteen Points," plus Britain's official denial of territorial ambition at the start of the World War—he directs his plea to all Anglo-Saxon peoples.

"Colonial sovereignty, army, police, law, churches, and so on," he concludes, are "open to discussion." How these things would be handled if Germany were allowed to exploit commercially a land that was otherwise entirely in the hands of some other power he does not say. But he does say the problem must be solved. "For," he warns as his parting shot, "the future of European peace depends upon it."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Yuletide Husband Draws Line.

My dear, I'll check your Christmas list
And offer some suggestions;
Your pleas for aid I'll not resist—
I'll answer all your questions;
I'll walk with you through shopping zones
And through the stores I'll trundle,
But I say this in firmest tones:
I will not tote a bundle!

II.

I'll fight my way from store to store
If it will make you happy;
I'll knock the helpless to the floor
With manner low and scrappy.
I'll even feign a look of bliss
With bitter aches accruing,
But to your plea of "Carry this,"
My answer's "Nothing doing!"

III.

I'll join the elevator charge
And on the weak I'll trample;
If it will please you, by and large,
The shoppers' lunch I'll sample;
I'll help pick cards of Christmas cheer
In mobs quite fierce and snarling—
But when you chirp, "This bundle, dear,"
I'll answer, "Nerts, my darling!"

IV.

I'll knock the old and weary down
As in the aisles I slam 'em;
I'll make a shambles of the town—
The dead and wounded, damn 'em!
On etiquette I'll cry "A pox!"
And knock good breeding blooey,
But when you lisp, "Hon, take this box,"
Dear lady, you're just screwy!

V.

I'll even tear through toytown and
Show no one any mercy;
I'll bark at clerks to beat the band
Until they need a nursie;
I'll do my best to make you feel
The Yuletide spirit's got me . . .
But to your "Carry this" appeal
I have one answer: "Not me!"

The Prisoner to His Lawyer.

Dear Sir: You asked me the last time you were here to write out my family history so that you could work on a pity angle for the jury. Well, we were a model family of 12 healthy looking Americans, and the head was our pop, the meanest man since Midas died. He had one good habit. When he was drunk he stayed away from home. When he was home we all stayed away.

Out of the dozen of us there were two girls. They were the only womenfolk, and the sight of them cooking in the kitchen caused the other ten of us to reach for our hats.

Katie, the oldest, wanted to be an actress. The road to success was lined with stone, but Kit knew her marbles. She was playing juveniles when Booth knocked off Lincoln, and has been in the back row of Minsky's ever since. Well, one more year and one more wrinkle and she will be a natural for the second witch in "Macbeth."

Every family has its tragedy. We had ours in the twins, Jimmy and Johnny. They were playing down at the wharf, when Jimmy slipped and fell in. Now, Johnny should have minded his own business and let his brother drown, but Jimmy had the 20 cents they had stolen from the blind man, and, without giving the matter another thought, Johnny jumped in to protect his interest with a firm hold on Jim's pocket. They both drowned. (I got the two dimes.)

Election's Effect

Observer Sees Acceptance Of Nov. 3 Verdict In Rush Of States To Comply With Social Security Law.

By G. W. Linewеaver.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

ARE THE STATES of the Union following the election returns on November 3? If so what does it portend from a national standpoint? The best evidence of a trend in that direction is the rapidly mounting calls for special sessions of Legislatures to get under the wire with social security legislation before December 31 in order to take advantage of the Federal law and hold on to their respective shares of the contributions of both employers and employes.

Previous to December 1, 16 States had enacted legislation putting themselves in line with the Federal social security law. Within the year, many of the remaining 32 Commonwealths had refused to take action at regular sessions and Governors had steadfastly refused to summon special sessions. In the latter instances, the general position was that Congress in 1937 would extend the time for State participation or that it was useless to summon the legislators since a majority had indicated opposition to this sort of New Deal proposal from Washington.

Not a few States had taken the stand that the Federal law would be held unconstitutional and that nothing would be lost by their failure to come into the fold.

Pressure Increased For Special Sessions.

WITHIN a few weeks after the election on November 3, however, there was increasing pressure in many States for special sessions, especially with the warning that the Social Security Board would not recommend extension of time for compliance.

The possibility that States without legislation by the close of the year would see more than $100,000,000 lifted from their employers and employes without assurance that any would be returned was a powerful argument for immediate action.

Business organizations that had led the fights at State capitals against social security bills, succeeding in many instances in defeating them, held out to the last. it seems, but a wave of public sentiment appears to have engulfed the opposition and polls of most of the hold-out legislatures indicate no difficulty in adopting measures that will protect the interests of their wage-earners.

Pennsylvania, with a heavy Democratic majority in both houses of its legislature for the first time since the War Between the States, has led the procession by adopting the necessary legislation. While most State proposals carry a "rider" providing for invalidation of the State statute if the Federal law is declared unconstitutional, Pennsylvania took no such precaution. Its new law stands whatever may happen to the Federal statute.

Before the middle of this month, practically every State in the East, South and Middle West that had not previously acted will see its legislature taking action, while the Far Western Commonwealths will probably be in line also, many of them fellowing Pennsylvania's lead in disregarding the outcome of a constitutional test before the Supreme Court of the United States.

Maryland, New Jersey Among First to Respond.

REPUBLICAN Governors in Maryland and New Jersey were among the first to call special sessions of their legislatures to pass social security legislation so any direct partisan feeling in the retreat from previous stands.

Of far-reaching significance if not influence, in the opinion of many observers, is this almost precipitate move of so many States in the direction of joining up with the Federal Government in social security legislation. It is without precedent in many respects and, while the desire to get their respective shares of the pay-roll contributions is a most important factor, the effect on national public sentiment of this new Federal-State cohesion will be watched with absorbing interest.

The pre-election barrages laid down by opponents of President Roosevelt served to center attention on social security and its proponents may well claim the election results on November 3 as equivalent to a referendum approving the Federal law and a mandate to the States to fall into line.

That so many States are thus interpreting the re-election of the President is quite evident and the probability that before Christmas, more than 40 States will have social security acts in their statutes. This suggests that a constitutional amendment further interpreting the welfare clause could and would be approved by the required 36 States should the Supreme Court hold the social security act passed by Congress in 1935 was beyond the powers of the national legislature.

Another view of the situation that has developed with the prospective near-unanimity of State action on social security is that a damper will be placed on enthusiasm for a test of the Federal statute since States with heaviest pay rolls, like Pennsylvania, will have statutes in effect even if the Federal law should be invalidated.

Amendments May Pass Before Supreme Court Test.

Still another suggestion is that business leaders have scrutinized the election returns and their implications and have been counseling fewer court tests of New Deal legislation and more concentration on attempts to get together with the Administration, smooth out existing statutes by amendments, and may seek to promote closer observation of the trend of national thought.

THE SUPREME COURT may not have the social security act before it for another year, by which time Congress may have adopted amendments that will remove some of the objections as to its provisions; so facetious references to Mr. Dooley's famous remark in this connection are not apropos at this time.

And when and if the social security act is submitted for a constitutional test, what will be the effect if a considerable number of States intervene in support of the measure? It is not beyond the realm of probability that most of the States which will have accepted the principle and enacted companion legislation will have their attorneys general do just that.

Back in 1808 Thomas Jefferson had views about the removal of State barriers that are decidedly at variance with many present-day interpretations placed on his thoughts on the subject. Mr. Jefferson, thinking of Federal road-building, canal digging, navigation improvements, and other objects of material value, felt that "new channels of communications will be opened between the States; the lines of separation will disappear, their interests will be identified and their union cemented by new and indissoluble ties," according to Claude G. Bowers in "Jefferson in Power."

The founder of the Democratic party may not have been thinking of social legislation, as it is recognized today in enactments of the type of the Federal social security law, but the reception being accorded the program by the States in this year of 1936 seems to be approaching the objective Mr. Jefferson had in mind 130 years ago.

Burton Holmes Talk Slated by Geographic

Modern Mexico, our transformed neighbor south of the Rio Grande, will be described by the veteran lecturer and traveler, Burton Holmes, before members of the National Geographic Society in Constitution Hall tonight.

With new motion pictures and colored lantern slides, Holmes will contrast the scenes of today with those of his last visit to the Latin-American republic 45 years ago. From snow-capped peaks higher than the Alps he will take his audience to semitropical Cuernavaca, where Col. Lindbergh met the author of "North to the Orient." Other scenes will reveal the famous Shrine of Guadalupe, street scenes in the Mexican capital and quaint Indian customs.

McAdoo's Law Partner Fights Oil Merger Plan

San Francisco, Dec. 17 (AP).—William H. Neblett, law partner of Senator William G. McAdoo, filed suit in Federal court here today to overthrow the $187,000,000 merger of Associated Oil Co., Tide Water Oil Co. and Tide Water-Associated into the Tide Water-Associated Oil Co.

Neblett represented the firm of Barr, Cohen & Co., of New York, owners of 260 shares of Associated Oil stock. He charged the asserted merger was in effect not a merger, but a sale of assets under conditions denying minority stockholders a voice in framing the terms.

Greased Skids

By Julius C. Edelstein

The La Follette-Frank Feud.

THE PRINCIPLE of academic freedom is by no means the real issue at stake in the current moves to ease Glenn Frank out of the presidency of the University of Wisconsin, many reports from those close to the situation insist.

News stories coming out of Wisconsin's capital reveal that this is being made the principle issue in the current controversy. But there is a more fundamental story behind the headlines.

That story is one of a difference between two individuals, Glenn Frank and Philip F. LaFollette, growing to a point where it becomes a national issue taken up by educators and politicians. It is a story of a friendship between two brilliant young men which changed to enmity and hatred as their stars of destiny crossed and rose into different heavens.

• • • •

IN 1925, THE University of Wisconsin Board of Regents, dominated by Progressives, then in the heydey of their control of the Wisconsin Republican Party and of State politics, invited youthful, radical Glenn Frank to become president of the State university. Frank was at that time the "boy editor" of the Century magazine.

In the same year young Philip F. LaFollette, youngest son of Old Bob LaFollette, made his first appearance in Wisconsin politics by running successfully for the district attorney's job in Dane County.

Young Frank and young LaFollette were great friends. They were even closer friends by 1930 when LaFollette was elected to his first term as Governor of Wisconsin. At that time Dr. Glenn Frank, already a national figure, was 39; LaFollette, just breaking into the national limelight, was 34.

Both were reputed "liberals." Dr. Frank was busy warning big business that unless it reformed itself Government would take a hand. Phil LaFollette was blaming the stock crash of '29 on the same big business.

• • • •

IN HIS FIRST TERM, Gov. LaFollette told his friend, Dr. Glenn Frank, that the "deadwood" must be removed from the university pay rolls. Dr. Frank made surveys, but took no action.

By the end of his first term, Phil LaFollette was no longer a good friend of Glenn Frank's. In 1932 Phil LaFollette was defeated for the Republican nomination for the governorship by industrialist Walter Kohler. There were reports that Glenn Frank had lent secret support to Kohler, that he, Dr. Frank, was making sheep's eyes at the Republican nomination for the Presidency of the United States, and that he considered association with LaFollette a liability.

LaFollette was returned to the Governor's chair in 1934. By that time Glenn Frank's brand of politics was beginning to take on a distinctly conservative tinge. Friends of Frank were making open assurance that he would be the Republican candidate for the Presidency in 1936.

The breach between LaFollette and Frank widened until it became a matter of public record. There was a feud between Frank and LaFollette. In budget hearings, LaFollette badgered Dr. Frank unmercifully.

THERE WERE THOSE who said that LaFollette was only waiting for a chance to oust the university president. There were reports that LaFollette wanted the university president's job for himself. By 1936, the transition was complete. LaFollette was the leader of a new political party. Frank was a favorite son candidate for the Republican nomination for the Presidency.

In the summer of 1936, Glenn Frank proposed to the Board of Regents that student tuition fees be raised to provide more university income. Gov. LaFollette made an issue out of this demand. He exerted pressure on the Board of Regents, dramatized the student fee raise into a question of free education versus privileged education. Glenn Frank was on the side of privileged education.

Gov. LaFollette won his point, and the student tuition fees raise was side-tracked. But at that time intimates of the Governor reported that if he were re-elected, one of his first official acts would be to have a new president installed at the State university.

Conservative Republicans made President Frank and the university an issue in the State campaign. They accused Gov. LaFollette of dragging the university into politics. The electorate of Wisconsin seemingly approved Gov. LaFollette's stand. He was re-elected.

And now the skids seem to be greased for Dr. Frank. Old-fashioned Wisconsin liberals, however, are objecting to Frank's dismissal. It will take the State Legislature to force any action.

"Shining Scabbard"

By William Lyon Phelps

This is the latest novel by the young Englishman, R. C. Hutchinson, still under 30, whose novel, "The Answering Glory," published in 1932, gave me such a terrific succession of thrills that I have the most absolute confidence in the man. I know how dangerous it is to make prophecies; but I believe that before he is 40 years old Mr. Hutchinson will be regarded as one of the leading living English-writing novelists.

• • • •

I advise every intelligent person to read "The Answering Glory," "One Light Burning" and this new novel, "Shining Scabbard." He is wholly original; he writes like no one else. But he is going to take one of the vacancies made by the deaths of Joseph Conrad, John Galsworthy, Rudyard Kipling, George Moore, Arnold Bennett, Thomas Hardy, all of whom have died during the last 12 years.

I shall not attempt to describe this latest novel, "Shining Scabbard," except to say that it is a story of a French family ending in 1914—both the story and the family. But I will quote this paragraph; the old French general has just told the priest Vignaud that his whole life had been ruined because his friends years ago had accused him of cowardice in action, whereupon the following dialogue takes place. Vignaud says:

• • • •

"It is very hard to forgive a falsehood like that," he said deliberately. "So much harder, I have always said, than to forgive any other kind of injury . . . And yet I have always wondered if a man can really be damaged by a falsehood. I mean damaged in himself. Wouldn't you agree—or is it only a crochet of mine?—that a man's virtue hardens, becomes more precious and larger and more splendid, when it is calumniated? Of course, we should not have thought like that when we were young; but you and I, we have both reached the age of clearer vision now; we are able, as younger men are not, to assess the real importance of things which have hurt us. Don't you feel now, looking back over that ocean of bitterness, that your courage became more precious to you; that it received a finer temper, because you knew that it had been impugned falsely?"

Eugene stopped with his back to the window and shook his head. "I'm afraid, my dear Abbe, you don't understand. To you it would mean nothing to be called a coward; to you——"

"I agree, my dear M. Severin, it would mean nothing at all as long as I knew it wasn't true. But——"

"I tell you, you don't understand what it was like to stand in that court, to hear my fellow officers, one after another . . . You who have been all your life a priest——"

• • • •

"——I agree, yes, it is different for me. As a priest, you see, I have had so little to bother me. What matters to so many men—to you, perhaps—is what their friends think about them, what other people think, what all the people in all the streets in every town and village think. It is so much simpler to be responsible only to God. Then you know, when everyone is saying what a dreadful old charlatan the Abbe Vignaud is, that God is just laughing at them over your shoulder. So comforting, I always find that. Wait! You must not misunderstand me. We have to remember—we who have chosen to have God as our single arbiter—that He is very clear-sighted. If you take snuff during Lent—as I do sometimes—you can conceal it from your servant, even from people in the same room (I'll show you the trick some time), but God always spots you.

A New Deal for Civil Service

President and Congress Can Demolish Patronage

Outlook Is Bright For Enactment Of Legislation Which Will Erect A Permanent Civil Service Based On Merit Principles On Ruins Of Old Order.

By Robert C. Albright.

Congress has the power, and President Roosevelt the influence, to demolish Federal patronage and spoils in one sweep of legislation, and erect on the ruins of the old order a permanent civil service, based on merit, with opportunity for public service careers. There is sound reason to believe that more than an indifferent effort will be made at the coming session of Congress.

Ninth and Last of a Series.

Two legislative vehicles for extending civil service rules and regulations to agencies excluded by law from the competitive merit principle received favorable reports last session from House and Senate committees.

Both will be introduced again, with better chance of success. A third bill, including merit extension in a five-point program for improvement of the civil service, has been jointly drafted by two influential Senators and will be introduced.

With the President evidencing more than ordinary interest, the outlook is bright. Mr. Roosevelt has left no doubt in the minds of confidants that he intends aggressively to support legislation to carry civil service merit principles into agencies he cannot now reach by executive order.

Personnel studies now being concluded by the President's Committee on Administrative Management, by Brookings Institution, with Senate and House Reorganization Committees in the background, may afford a factual basis for later strides toward a ladder system of careers for competent employes.

The President's own attitude reflects the frequently expressed conviction of the Civil Service Commission that all positions, except those which are policy forming, should be filled by competitive selection.

The depression has keyed public interest in Government operations, and demand for employment in public administration, to a point where nothing less than efficient Government and high service standards is acceptable.

Recognition that extension of civil service rules is the first major step toward general improvement in administration is inherent in the Logan and Ramspeck bills, seeking by different methods to apply merit standards to positions not now subject to the civil service act.

Logan Bill

Senator M. M. Logan, (Democrat), of Kentucky, proposes through a system of non-competitive examinations, to bring employes in all agencies under the civil service law. His measure gives the President the right, however, to exclude any agency he wishes.

The Logan bill provides:

"That with the exception of such positions as the President may exempt by executive order, and with the exception of positions subject to confirmation by the United States Senate, all positions in the executive civil service which are not now subject to the civil service act and rules are placed in the classified civil service of the United States within the meaning of the act of March 27, 1922 * * * And there are also included the positions of clerks in third-class postoffices, special delivery messengers and substitute rural letter carriers.

"Any corporation created under authority of an act of Congress which is controlled or owned by the United States Government, whether or not the employes thereof are paid from funds appropriated by Congress, such employes shall be included by the provisions of this act.

"The incumbents of the positions affected by this act who are in the service on its effective date may acquire a classified status only upon passing a non-competitive test of fitness by the Civil Service Commission under regulations to be promulgated by the President of the United States.

"Any employe, or groups of employes, which the President may exempt from the provisions of this act, shall be exempt only for the period of four years, unless such exemptions shall be extended by the President."

Ramspeck Bill.

The bill introduced by Chairman Robert Ramspeck, of the House Civil Service committee, does not go this far. It merely gives the President the authority, regardless of any legislation which has been enacted, to bring any governmental agency under the Civil Service law.

The same purpose might be accomplished by both the Logan and Ramspeck measures, but the theory is the President might be open to criticism if, under the Logan bill, he exempted certain agencies from merit requirements. He could negatively accomplish the same end under the Ramspeck bill by simply not blanketing such agencies under the merit system.

There is another major difference in the two measures. Under the Ramspeck bill, a person now holding office in an agency covered in, would receive a classified job only by demonstrating his ability to hold it in an open competitive examination. Senator Logan feels those now holding Government jobs should receive first consideration. These would be given the exclusive opportunity of passing a noncompetitive examination, and, if they demonstarted their fitness, would remain in the service.

Independent proposals have been made to allow only employes recommended by administrative officials to take the non-competitive examination. Logan opposes this suggestion, and struck it from his bill, because he feels it would provide too wide a play for favoritism and even politics.

President Not Committed.

Although the President is not committed to any one measure, he is understood to favor the method provided in the Ramspeck bill.

The Georgian's measure provides:

"That notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary, the President is authorized by executive order to place within the classified service as defined by the act of March 27, 1922 . . . any position or group of positions in the executive branch of the Federal service which may now or may hereafter be exempted by statute from the provisions of the civil service act of January 16, 1883. . . .

"The provisions of this act shall be held equally applicable to positions and employes in any corporation, created under authority of an act of Congress, which is controlled or owned by the United States Government, whether or not the employes thereof are paid from funds appropriated by Congress.

"The incumbent of any permanent position which is affected by any executive order which may be issued under authority of this statute, who does not already have a classified status, may acquire such status in his position only upon receiving a new appointment as a result of an open competitive examination held by the Civil Service Commission for filling the position."

Third Major Bill.

Teaming up with Senator Robert M. LaFollette, Wisconsin Progressive; Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, worked out during the summer a bill for general civil service improvement, leading off with a provision for extending the merit system to all permanent agencies.

O'Mahoney last session sponsored a bill to bring 13,730 first, second and third class postmasters under the civil service law. It failed. Later the President, by executive order, tightened merit requirements in this wide group. Postmasters in these three service groups still technically remain outside of the civil service law, and it still will require an act of Congress to eliminate their 4-year term of office and confirmation by the Senate. One of the provisions of his latest measure would bring postmasters under civil service beginning in 1938.

The new O'Mahoney-La Follette bill for improvement of the civil service would authorize the President to place positions within the classified service, except in emergency agencies created since March 4, 1933. The Logan and Ramspeck bills are not so restricted. Sponsors of the proposed bill feel that general "covering in" of employes of all emergency agencies might interfere with reorganization plans.

The O'Mahoney-La Follette bill also excludes policy-making jobs from civil service, because, as O'Mahoney expresses it, "if the President should be deprived of the appointive power of those who control policy in the various departments the civil servants would be running the Government instead of Congress and the people."

Other features of the O'Mahoney-La Follette measure would strengthen the merit system in making promotions as well as appointments. It provides for cooperation between the Civil Service Commission with States and cities in developing merit systems in States and local governments. Further, it would establish a Federal personnel council, and a liaison system between the Civil Service Commission and various departments, to improve personnel administration.

Change of Attitude.

Jealously as members of Congress have guarded their patronage rights in the past, there is increasing reason to believe there has been a change of attitude since the depression demand for Government jobs placed a premium on their time, converted many into messenger boys for constituents, and seriously handicapped the business of legislation. Patronage jobs not only cause members untold worries back home and in Washington, but end in making from 10 to 100 enemies for every constituent who gets a job.

H. Elliott Kaplan, executive secretary of the National Civil Service Reform League, last session told the Senate Civil Service Committee that "this matter of patronage is not what it is cracked up to be by a long shot." He referred to the league's experience with the problem in New York.

"I think the average public official is perfectly satisfied to make appointments through the merit system so long as he knows the other side does not get any advantage of it," Kaplan said.

"And that is why our illustrious President some years ago suggested to our league frankly that we try to get the leaders of both major political organizations together to come to some agreement putting a restriction on the number of excepted positions, so that neither political organization could have an advantage over the other. And he thought in that way we really could extend the merit system."

This article concludes the series which Mr. Albright has written discussing the history, progress and inadequacies of the merit system in the Federal civil service. Beginning Sunday The Post will present the first of four articles on the British civil service by Don K. Price, who spent three years at Oxford University studying the British government. He specialized in the administration of the British civil service in the last year of his study.

Hatch to Seek Jobless Inquiry By Senate Unit

Desires to Find Causes and Fix Cure on Basis of Permanency.

By the Associated Press.

A Senate investigation of all phases of the unemployment problem, to establish its causes and possible cures, was proposed yesterday by Senator Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, with strong support from friends of the Administration.

Contending the problem was the most important facing the Nation, Hatch announced he would offer a resolution as soon as the Senate convenes.

A similar proposal last session was dropped because of fear in some quarters that election-year politics would interfere with a free and impartial study. But strong support was promised for the project at the coming session.

The investigation would concentrate on methods for putting the jobless back to work and preventing unemployment in the future. It would involve a thorough search into the economic causes of the shortage of jobs.

The inquiry also would seek to determine how existing unemployment should be handled—with a view to working out a permanent relief plan.

"I am convinced that a certain amount of unemployment will be permanent," Hatch said. "Harry Hopkins has done a good job, but that was an emergency plan. We should find the best permanent plan."

Hatch said the investigation should consider the effects of NRA and its abandonment; the possible results to be obtained from a universal shortening of working hours, and other proposals.

The New Mexico Senator said he would ask to have his resolution sent to the Judiciary Committee, of which he is a member. That committe, which has favored 30-hour week legislation in the past, probably would be authorized to make the inquiry.

Rankin Would Impeach Nation's Injunction Rule

By the Associated Press.

Representative Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, said yesterday he favored, if necessary, "a series of impeachments to put a stop to local Federal judges attempting to run this country by injunctions."

His comment referred to a Federal District Court injunction early this week which enjoined the Tennessee Valley Authority from expanding its service.

"We must put a stop to these abuses of judicial power of inferior judges setting themselves up as petty dictators," Rankin said.

Sales Tax Passes.

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 17 (AP).—The Alabama Senate, by a vote of 20 to 13, today passed a House-approved 1½ per cent gross receipts tax on retail sales and amusements, and sent the measure to Gov. Bibb Graves for signature.

China Unified By Kidnaping Of Gen. Chiang

Abduction Is Condemned as Betrayal of National Cause.

By Dr. Hu Shih.

World Copyright, 1936, by United Press.

Peiping, Dec. 17.—In considering the grave crisis which confronts the Chinese people because of the action of Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang in siezing the chairman of the national government, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, the following points are now clear:

First, that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek and those generals of the Nanking government which were seized with him at Sian-Fu are safe and unharmed.

Second, that all the provinces of the nation have pledged their loyal support to the central government and condemn Marshal Chang's rebellion.

Troops Lay Down Arms.

Third, that, with the possible exception of certain regiments around Lanchow, all of Marshal Chang's former Manchurian troops outside of the walled city of Sian-Fu, have pledged their support to the central government and voluntarily have surrendered their arms.

Fourth, that Marshal Chang's action is universally condemned by the nation as a betrayal of the national cause which must be most gratifying to our national enemy.

Gen. Chiang's importance as the national leader never has been so fully realized by all classes of Chinese as during the last week—since he has been a prisoner. All Chinese are aghast at the possibility of losing him through treachery.

University presidents, in a joint statement, have declared that Generalissimo Chiang's loss might set back national progress for 20 years.

Anti-Japanese Subterfuge.

The rebellion in Sian-Fu merely has demonstarted most clearly that the Communists never have been truly nationalistic and that their much-advertised anti-Japanese slogan has been only a shameless subterfuge

The Communists were interested only in creating a situation so that they could fish in troubled waters. Henceforth they no longer can deceive the people.

If Generalissimo Chiang is delivered safely from his present predicament he should learn a lesson—or, if he does not, the nation should. That lesson is: It is always dangerous to center all powers in a single individual.

Post Toy and Doll Fund Reaches Sum of $425; More Needed to Insure Needy's Christmas

Letters From Families Are Pouring In as Time Nears.

Gifts, ranging from 10 cents to $10, continued to flow into the Fund as generous Washingtonians took pity on the District's least-privileged children and helped Santa Claus to visit even the poorest homes one week from today.

Kind-hearted Post readers continued to send in toys and dolls—old and new—to The Post, or left them at one of the 42 Peoples Drug Stores in the District, or at Loew's Capitol, Columbia and Palace Theaters. And donors who could not bring their gifts in person arranged for a Terminal taxicab to pick up their toys and dolls free of charge.

The largest contributor yesterday was Lansburgh & Bro., Washington department store, that sent in a large assortment of toys, games and dolls to The Washington Post Fund.

Despite these encouraging signs, thousands of Washington's children still face a cheerless Christmas morning. At the Council of Social Agencies, which is taking care of distributing gifts, letters poured in at a discouraging rate.

Every mail brought hundreds of new cases to the attention of the council's volunteers. Families facing a joyless Christmas, and youngsters whose beliefs in Santa Claus are due for a rude shock, were reported in overwhelming numbers.

Appeal Is Renewed.

And again The Post appeals to generous readers to make this Christmas mean only happiness to every youngster. A dime or a quarter can mean a world of delight to one more child on Christmas morning. A single toy or doll can help brighten an impoverished, despondent family.

Everything sent in goes directly into gifts for underfavored children. The Post, station WJSV, Peoples Drug Stores, Loew's Theaters, the Terminal Transportation Co. and the Council of Social Agencies have donated their services without charge. None of the funds will be diverted into overhead expenses.

Both new and old toys can be used. Dolls and toys needing repairing are renovated and repainted at the Christmas Workshop, 1524 L street northwest, where a corps of workers is waiting an increased inflow of gifts.

Among the contributions to the fund acknowledged today several were particularly interesting. Many of the gifts were anonymous. One $5 contribution was sent in in memory of Gus Gennerich, former aide to President Roosevelt, whose funeral was held Wednesday at the White House.

The letter accompanying the contribution read: "Enclosed is a cashier's check in the amount of $5 for the toy fund. This is being sent to you anonymously, but in memory of Gus Gennerich, whose funeral was December 16, believing he would rather that some child would be happy at Christmas than to have flowers at his funeral."

Was Fond of Children.

Gennerich, one of the most popular figures Washington has known, dent's aide, he was a favorite of had always been especially fond of children. At Warm Springs, which he visited regularly as the Presithe crippled children. Many of the youngsters looked forward to seeing him as much as they anticipated the visits of the President himself.

That even the reputedly hardest-hearted men in the world—baseball umpires—have warm hearts at Christmas time was revealed when the D. C. Umpires Association contributed $6 to The oPst Toy and Doll Fund. And another segment of the sporting world—horse racing fans—have helped the fund with contributions totaling $40.15.

Sends in $5 Donation.

More than a week ago Bill Bennings, whose racing column is a regular Post feature, asked his readers to send in dimes to the Toy and Doll Fund. And over 400 have already responded. Each day sees another contribution labelled "Bill Bennings Fans."

Readers of another Post feature, Mary Hayworth's column on the Woman's Page, have contributed $8.35 in only one day. Her followers are being asked to send in dimes and quarters to help Christmas reach every youngster this year.

And one other entry attracted special interest. Last Saturday Arch McDonald, WJSV announcer, gave his interpretation of a ballet dance at a children's morning matinee at Loew's Capitol Theater. The performance was in fulfillment of a wager with Arthur Godfrey, conductor of WJSV "Sun Dial" program, who maintained McDonald's listeners would contribute fewer toys and dolls for the fund than would Godfrey's audience.

McDonald's dance a week ago fulfilled part of the bet. This week a $5 contribution to the fund, sent in by McDonald to be credited to Godfrey, completed the terms.

Over the week-end six Federal employe groups will help the fund by sending in toys and money collected at parties they have arranged. Last night Samuel Lubell, conductor of The Post's Federal Diary, appeared as Santa Claus at a meeting of the Social Security Board Union.

Tonight he visits two other parties and, aided by a troupe of entertainers from WJSV, will play Santa Claus at three more on Saturday night.

Gifts of toys and dolls can be left at any Peoples Drug Store, at Loew's Capitol, Columbia and Palace Theaters, or at The Post Building, 1337 E street northwest. By calling DEcatur 5150, arrangements can be made for a Terminal taxicab to pick up your gift free of charge. Gifts of money should be mailed to the Fund in care of The Post, or left at the counter in the lobby of The Post Building.

A load of toys, for The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund, yesterday was donated by Lansburgh & Bro., who sent Miss Aulma Blessing to deliver them in person at The Post Building. Miss Blessing arrived in a taxicab-loaded with games, dolls, toys, sports equipment and other gifts for Washington's poorest youngsters this Christmas.

Dr. Swartwout, D. C. Physician, Dies at Home

Heart Ailment Is Fatal to Former Head of Homeopathy Institute.

Dr. Frank Swartwout, 69, prominent homeopathic physician, died unexpectedly of a heart attack early yesterday at his residence, No. 12 Logan Circle.

For more than 42 years a practicing physician here, Dr. Swartwout was active in numerous organizations. He was a past president of the American Institute of Homeopathy, serving about six years. At the time of his death he was a member of the Board of Directors.

Dr. Swartwout also served several terms as president of the Washington Homeopathic Society, and was chairman of its advisory board for some time. For six years he was secretary-treasurer of the Southern Homeopathic Medical Society. He also was an active member of the staff of Homeopathic Hospital.

A life member of the Sons of the American Revolution, Dr. Swartwout also belonged to the Society of Colonial Wars.

Active in church affairs, Dr. Swartwout was senior deacon of Calvary Baptist Church. He taught Sunday school there for many years.

A native of Lee Center, Ill., Dr. Swartwout came to Washington as a young man.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Bessie A. Swartwout; two sons, F. Astin Swartwout, of Washington, and Dr. John A. Swartwout, an interne in the Providence (R. I.) Homeopathic Hospital; a daughter, Dr. Edith S. Hewitt, physician, affiliated with the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn., and two sisters, Mrs. H. C. Downes, Oxnard, Calif., and Mrs. C. T. Greenway, Maryville, Tenn.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. at Calvary Baptist Church, followed by burial in Rock Creek Cemetery.

John M. Riehle Dies; Long Leading Democrat

New York, Dec. 17 (AP).—John M. Riehle, one of New York's leading insurance men and a prominent Democrat, died yesterday at his Manhasset, L. I., home. He was 73.

Insurance men in all parts of the country paid him tribute last November 16, his fortieth anniversary as general agent for the Equitable Life Assurance Society. He was president of John M. Riehle and Co., Inc., insurance brokers. For seven years Riehle served as president of the National Democratic Club. He was officially commended by President Wilson for services to the nation during the World War.

Mrs. Harriman Loses Fight To Legalize Charity Project

Post Staff Photo

Mrs. Oliver Harriman, New York society woman, and her attorney, Emil K. Ellis, leaving District Court after losing a plea that her "National Conference for Legalizing Lotteries" be again permitted use of the mails.

D. C. Court Upholds Postal Ruling That So-Called Benefit Scheme Is Lottery; Battle Will Be Continued.

Mrs. Oliver Harriman, New York society leader, yesterday in District Court lost her fight to have rescinded a postoffice fraud order barring use of the mails to the National Conference for Legalizing Lotteries, of which she was the head.

The Postoffice Department deemed the organization a lottery in violation of the regulation and issued the order, which had the effect of stopping the receipt and sending of mail.

Claiming the organization was formed for the purpose of aiding in welfare work in the Nation and was not intended "nor was it" a lottery, Mrs. Harriman and her associates sought the court order. They pointed out the organization had received some $120,000 from persons who sought to win prizes. Entrants were given a list of 15 philanthropical societies and were directed to pick them out in the order of their preference, the idea being that the one who most closely approximated the choice of a selection committee would be winner of first prize.

In addition, $100,000 has been spent in advertising, and there are money orders valued at $18,000 which the organization is unable to cash because of the postoffice restrictions. The orders will have to be returned to the senders.

After a hearing, Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue dismissed the suit for a restrainnig order and permitted the sponsors to note an appeal.

In a statement after the trial, Mrs. Harriman said: "This will not in any way affect my campaign to legalize lotteries for public welfare. This is only a temporary setback."

NFFE Council Offers 5-Point Retiring Plan

Group Urges Liberalization of Present Federal Pension System.

A five-point program for liberalizing the retirement laws was approved yesterday by the executive council of the National Federation of Federal Employes as part of its legislative program to be pushed in the next Congress.

The council called for:

First, retirement at age of 60 after 30 years of service; and at age of 62 after 15 years or more service at the option of employes only; with compulsory retirement at the age of 70 for all workers.

Second, placing annuitants retired for total disability on the permanent roll when they reach the age of 62 years; continuing the annuity from date of medical examination showing recovery until the annuitant is restored to service is a position comparable to the one held at retirement.

Third, retiring employes involuntarily separated from service for reasons other than misconduct when such employes are 62 or more; basing the deferred annuity and the immediate life annuity at the age of 62 instead of the ages, 62, 65 and 70 as now.

Fourth, giving employes the option of making additional contribuitons to the retirement fund, to purchase either increased annuities or to be returned to the employe as a lump sum.

Fifth, giving employes the option at the time of retirement of selecting a reduced annuity of equivalent value, actuarily determined, to cover the life of the employe and a selected beneficiary.

Weak, Unfit Aided by Science Held Peril to Future of Race

Danger of 'Human Erosion' Cited by Georgia Tech Commission in Report to Roosevelt; National Health Decadence Feared.

Atlanta, Dec. 17 (AP).—A Georgia Tech faculty committee asserted today, in a report prepared for President Roosevelt, that "prolonging" the lives of the weak and unfit is "undermining the physical well-being of future generations."

Montgomery Knight, professor of aeronautical negineering, was chairman of the committee, which was appointed to answer the President's inquiry as to how engineering schools might help to solve the Nation's problems.

"Human erosion," the committee said, is resulting from advancements in medical science, war, land erosion and industrial specialization.

The group suggested "our institutions of higher learning must abandon the traditional worship of unrelated knowledge for itself alone and begin the work of developing leaders of thought and action."

"Fully recognized by authorities in biology and medicine," the committee stated, "is the decadence of our national health through the advances in medical science."

It said that "in saving the lives of the weak and even physically unfit, we are in a very real sense, undermining the physical well-being of future generations."

Father Divine Faces Court Contempt Order

New York, Dec. 17 (AP).—An affidavit tending to show that Father Major J. Divine, evangelist, induced his followers to turn their savings and part of their salaries over to him was presented in Supreme Court today.

At the end of the hearing, the dapper little self-ordained "Messiah" was ordered to show cause Monday why he should not be punished for contempt of court for contending that he and money were strangers.

The order was obtained from Supreme Court Justice Samuel I. Rosenman by counsel for Mrs. Nina I. Bayless, of Aberdeen, Md., who is seeking to collect a $6,000 judgment against Divine for injuries suffered in an automobile accident.

Coast Guard Aid Sped To Six Aboard Yacht

San Diego, Calif., Dec. 17 (AP).—The Coast Guard cutter Calypso sped southward today to the rescue of at least six persons aboard the motor yacht Cricket, reported pounding to pieces on Guadalupe Island.

Guadalupe Island is more than 200 miles south of here.

4-Month Term Given to Duke For Tampering

Bail Refused for Disbarred Attorney Pending His Appeal in U.S. Court.

Jesse C. Duke, disbarred Washington attorney, yesterday was sentenced to serve four months in the Federal Penitentiary at Petersburg, Va., for attempting to influence a Federal grand jury.

Judge Luther B. Way, of the Federal Court at Alexandria, who sentenced Duke, refused to admit him to bail while the attorney was perfecting an appeal from his conviction.

Duke was found guilty by a jury Wednesday. He was accused of giving the grand jury foreman on December 7 a letter relating to charges against him of conspiring to conceal Representative John H. Hoeppel, of California, and his son. Duke was indicted by the jury.

This indictment charges that Duke harbored the Hoeppels in Richmond while Federal agents were seeking them for commitment to jail after their conviction of conspiring to sell an appointment to the United States Military Academy.

Attorney Admits Wage Law Illegal

By the Associated Press.

W. A. Toner, Assistant Attorney General of Washington, told the Supreme Court yesterday that his State's law establishing minimum wages for women would be declared unconstitutional if a "proper" case were brought.

He was replying to a question by Justice Sutherland during arguments on an attack on the statute by the West Coast Hotel Co.

E. L. Skeel, Seattle attorney for the hotel company, had contended the law was "substantially the same" as a District of Columbia statute declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court 13 years ago.

Toner contended the only issue involved in the Washington case was an order by the State Welfare Commission fixing a minimum wage for hotel chambermaids. Then he added that if a case similar to the one attacking the District of Columbia law were brought, "the statute would be unconstitutional."

Justice Harlan F. Stone will not participate in the decision it became known yesterday.

The justice, ill with dysentery since October 13, plans a trip South with Mrs. Stone as soon as he can travel.

Bal Boheme Poster Prizes to Be Given

Three cash prizes will be awarded winners in the poster competition for the 1937 Bal Boheme, to be held February 1 at the Mayflower Hotel by the Arts Club of Washington.

Prizes, for which artists in the District, Maryland and Virginia are eligible are $25, $15 and $5 for first, second and third. All posters must arrive at the Arts Club not later than 5 p. m. January 9.

Pawnee-Creek Artist Arrives in War Regalia; Urges Fellow Indians Be True to Own Culture

Acee Blue Eagle to Be Women's Press Club Guest.

Acee Blue Eagle flew into town yesterday.

Sitting Bull himself could not have looked more the part of a heap big chief than did the distinguished Pawnee-Creek artist as he climbed out of the plane that bore him from Oklahoma, where he was born, reared and educated, and where he now heads the art department in Bacone College, only institution of higher learning maintained for Indians exclusively.

Wearing a costume of fringed and beaded buckskin with moccasins to match, a two-toned peyote flung across his shoulders, and an eagle-feathered war bonnet atop his head, Acee Blue Eagle attracter plenty of attention at the airport, where people half expected him to break out into a war whoop or into a war dance.

"But I'm not going to war," he explained later at the Powhatan. "I have my peace pipe with me," he added, with a twinkle in his brown eyes. Whereupon he produced from beneath the folds of his costume a beaded tobacco bag from which protruded a silver-inlaid pipe that could be smoked for peace or other purposes.

His costume, he explained, is ceremonial garb he wears for special occasions. He wore it last year when he delivered a series of lectures at Oxford University and later when he traveled through Scotland, France and Switzerland, lecturing and exhibiting his painting.

Proud of his Indian heritage, he said yesterday that the Indian has much to contribute to modern civilization if he will not lose sight of the culture developed by his forefathers. "But there are so many of us, particularly the younger ones, who have spent so many years trying to be exactly like another race that our traditions, customs and arts exist today only in remnants."

He pointed out, however, that despite the tendency of many Indians to adopt the ways of the white man, they had nevertheless made some outstanding contributions to modern civilization. "We have given the white man the snow-shoe, the game of lacrosse, the canoe and the sugar cane press used in earlier times," he said. "All these came from our traditional culture. Any unique contributions we make will emanate from the same source."

This afternoon Acee Blue Eagle will be the guest of honor at a tea given by the Newspaper Women's Club at the Admiral. He will depict some of the traditions and symbols of the American Indian through the song and the dance, other arts in which he is gifted.

Suit Assails 'Grab' Of Process Taxes

Legislation designed to prevent manufacturers and others from recovering certain taxes paid under the invalidated agricultural adjustment act was assailed as unconstitutional in an appeal filed yesterday with the Supreme Court.

It was presented by Continental Mills, of Philadelphia, which asked the tribunal to pass on a ruling by the Court of Claims dismissing its petition for a refund of $3,160 in "floor stock taxes" paid on its stock of cotton yarn.

Whether a review will be granted or denied will be announced in January.

The act says the tax money cannot be recovered unless those who paid it submit proof that they did not pass the burden on to consumers. The company told the Supreme Court:

"It is impossible to demonstrate the effect upon the selling price of any particular element of cost."

Engineer Will Speak On Unsafe Highways

"Unsafe Maryland Roads" will be the subject of a highway safety program talk which will be broadcast over Station WBAL, Baltimore, at 12:30 p. m. tomorrow by Maj. Victor Brown, publisher of 'Roads and Streets," as the speaker.

Town in Virginia To Get Pulp Mill

Richmond, Dec. 17 (AP).—H. W. Ellerson, president of the Albemarle Paper Manufacturing Co., Richmond, announced today that a large pulp and board mill will be built at Franklin, Va., by the Chesapeake-Camp Corporation, recently organized with $3,500,000 capital.

He said the mill will give "direct or indirect employment to more than 2,000 persons."

D. C. Murder Suspect Caught in New York

Washington police yesterday were notified by Brooklyn (N. Y.) officers of the arrest there of Leroy Liggett, 20-year-old colored man, wanted here on a charge of murder.

Detective Sergt. Aubrey Tolson, of the homicide squad, was sent to New York to return Liggett to Washington. Liggett was indicted for first-degree murder by a grand jury last April, charged with stabbing his brother-in-law, James Mays, 19.

Orville Wright Is Paid Tribute As Air Pioneer

By the Associated Press.

Dayton, Ohio, Dec. 17.—Orville Wright, who looked down on the sands of Kitty Hawk, N. C., 33 years ago in man's first flight in a heavier-than-air machine, looked up today at a shiny, 21-passenger airliner dipping in salute to "those crazy Wright boys," co-inventors of the airplane.

Orville's brother, Wilbur, who helped to build the crate-like machine which flew for 12 seconds above Kitty Hawk on December 17, 1903, died in 1912. Men high in aviation laid a wreath on his grave today.

Orville Wright broke the routine of his quiet life to accept the honors brought to him and join in a dedicatory ceremony at the Municipal Airport marking the start of transcontinental air service for Dayton.

From President Roosevelt came a letter extending "the greetings and good wishes of the American people."

Among the men honoring Wright were John F. Victory, secretary of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics; Capt. Stanley M. Kraus, Naval Bureau of Aeronautics; Brig. Gen. A. W. Robins and Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, assistant and chief respectively of the Army Air Corps; Lyman J. Briggs, head of the Bureau of Standards; Charles G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution; Eugene Vidal, director of Air Commerce of the Department of Commerce, and William P. McCracken, jr., former Assistant secretary of the Department of Commerce.

Suspect in Fraud Put on Probation

Justice Peyton Gordon, in District Court yesterday placed Guy S. Burtis, former NRA employe, on probation for from 4 months to a year, following an earlier plea of nolo contendere by Burtis, who was under indictment on a charge of conspiring to defraud the Government.

Burtis and Warren L. Heap, who previously had entered a similar plea and had been placed on probation, were charged with conspiring to inform a Denver (Colo.) mining company concerning an income tax assessment for 1932. It developed neither of the men had ever actually contacted the mining company and no money ever passed hands.

Priceless Art Goes for Song In Elkins Collection Auction

Art dealers and collectors had their day yesterday when some of the city's most famous paintings went on the auction block and were sold for the proverbial song.

Representing choice selections from the effects of the late Mrs. Stephen B. Elkins, widow of Senator Elkins, of West Virginia, some of these were a bargain "at any figure under $50,000," according to Auctioneer Benjamin J. Bell, who put them on the block at the Washington Art Galleries.

"It's stole—practically stole," said Bell, as he tapped a final tap with his gavel to indicate bidding had closed on the painting by Sir Joshua Reynolds after someone bid $1,475. This picture, entitled "Portrait of Mary Buller," was purchased in 1903 from the V. G. Fischer Art Company, of Washington, for $5,750. It was originally from the collection of Lord Elphinstone.

"With dealers here from as far West as Pittsburgh and they jet such treasures as these get by them at such ridiculous prices," Bell said again, as John Opie's "Portrait of Miss Melville" brought only $775. This canvas from the collection of Oakley Maund, Esquire, of Birggens Park, Herts, England, was purchased by the Elkins family in 1907 from James P. Silo for $3,200.

Louis Tocque's "Portrait of the Marquise of Chavreuse," appraised at $3,000 in 1933, went for $1,000; G. H. Harlow's "Portrait of Miss Jepson," appraised at $2,000, brought $230.

Today the Elkins' famous 120-piece Royal Worcester china dinner set, a Chippendale mahogany dining-room suite and a 261-piece set of sterling silver flatware will be among the effects placed on the block.

The sale will continue through tomorrow afternoon.

Trade Board Unit Adopts Traffic Rule

Members of the traffic committee of the Washington Board of Trade yesterday adopted a resolution in which they pledged themselves to use all means within their power to bring about strict observance of the existing traffic regulations.

The resolution was passed at a luncheon meeting held in the Harrington Hotel. It called attention to arrests and ticketings for traffic violations in the District and the increase in the number of automobiles and urged more obedience on the part of motorists instead of more arrests.

"The members of the traffic committee of the Washington Board of Trade will, insofar as it is consistent with their private and business lives, endeavor to instill in the minds of their families, their friends and their business associates, a strict observance of the traffic regulations," the resolution asserted.

Police Set to Snare Bragging Bank Bandits

Indianapolis, Dec. 17 (AP).—State police blockaded roads in central Indiana tonight in an attempt to snare the Braggart Brady gang following the identification of Alfred Brady as one of three men who robbed the Carthage State Bank today.

Brady who once boasted his gang would make John Dillinger "look like a piker," was identified through photographs by Howard Henley, cashier of the bank, as the leader of the bank-raiding trio who forced employes and customers to lie on the floor and escaped with about $1,500.

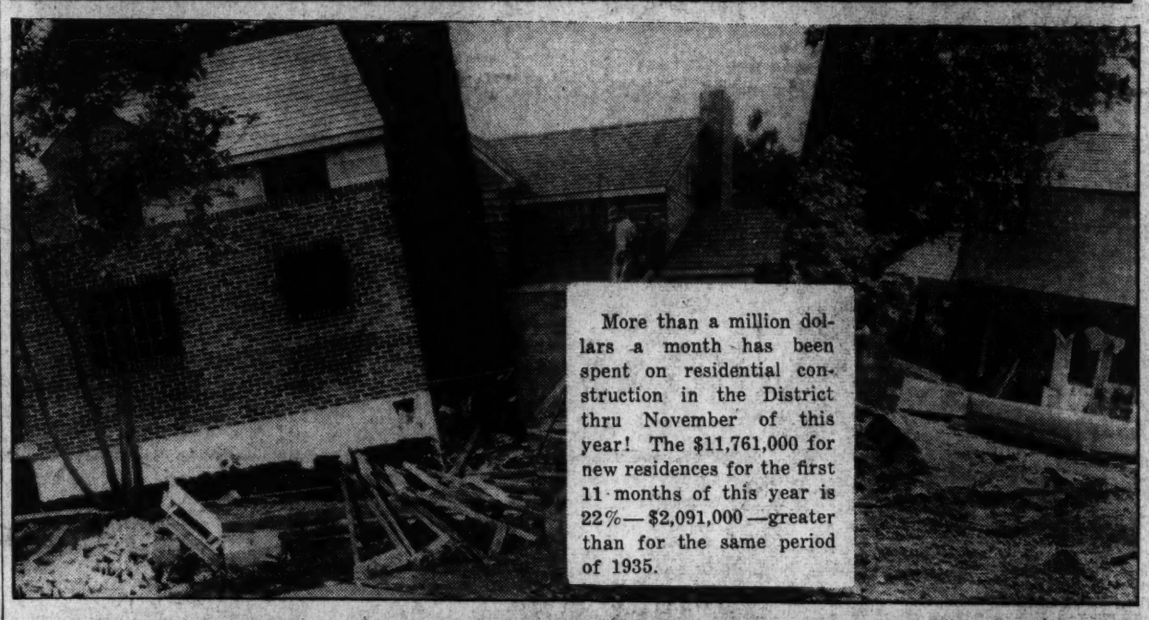
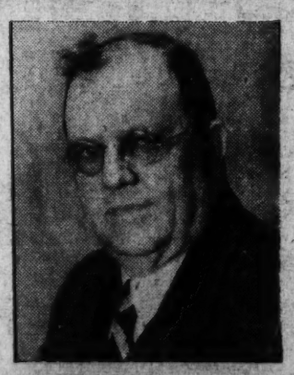
HOUSES GOING UP!



More than a million dollars a month has been spent on residential construction in the District thru November of this year! The $11,761,000 for new residences for the first 11 months of this year is 22%—$2,091,000—greater than for the same period of 1935.

SALES GOING UP!

J. G. Pascoe, Sales Manager, Wm. M. Throckmorton, Inc. Throckmorton, who is one of the largest and most consistent real estate advertisers in Washington, reports that 1936 was 40% better than 1935 in actual number of sales, and that, because of the demand for better houses, dollar volume was up still more.



N. C. Hines, Sales Director of the Wm. H. Saunders Co., one of the oldest and best known of Washington real estate firms. Saunders will celebrate its 50th anniversary next year, and, based on the substantial sales increases made in 1936, expects 1937 to be not only its 50th year but its best.

LINAGE GOING UP!

The Post has carried 826,021 lines of real estate display advertising for the first 11 months of 1936. This is the largest volume of real estate display of any newspaper in America. The Post's gain over the same period of last year is 230,972 lines—39%. If you are thinking of buying property, you will find more desirable houses and other real estate advertised in the Sunday Post's real estate section than anywhere else.

A GIFT

you could never give before

IF you would give a different gift—a gift that positively never has been given to anybody by anybody at any other Holiday season—a gift that will encourage many pleasant hours of cheerful relaxation—a gift that long will keep alive many kindly memories of the giver—then we suggest IRISH AMERICAN Whiskey.

No matter how fond anyone may have been of a man in times gone by, no one ever could give him IRISH AMERICAN Whiskey. There was none to give.

This mild and kindly whiskey, introduced only a few weeks ago, is not like any other whiskey in the world. It is made differently. It tastes different. It is unique. It is marvelously good, reminiscent of a number of fine whiskey flavors, but not quite like any of them. Mark this Christmas as distinctly different for someone you care for by giving him IRISH AMERICAN.

And if you are in doubt about what particular whiskey he has favored in the past, all the more reason for giving him IRISH AMERICAN. It will remind him of the very best whiskey he ever had—and taste, probaby, even better than that.

Youth Taken on Highway Bridge Hitchhiking; Denies Crime Aid.

"William Jones, of Aspen Hill, Md.," they said he replied.

"How old are you?"

"Nineteen."

"When were you born?"

"1915."

"That's wrong. When were you born?"

"Oh yeah, that is wrong. I was born in 1917."

"Wrong again, son. Come on with us."

The fugitive was taken without resistance. He was unarmed. At the station house, an insurance slip bearing the name of "M. Gingell" was found in his pocket, and the youth confessed he was the Lawrence Gingell police wanted. He denied, however, having anything to do with the crimes to which W. Joseph Kirby, the gang leader, confessed.

Gingell was locked up incommunicado. His mother, who has 12 children and is a widow, told reporters Tuesday that she has engaged a lawyer for him. At an early hour last night no attorney had come to his aid.

Capt. J. A. Sullivan, of the Fourth Precinct, said the youth might be held for a headquarters line-up in an attempt to have him connected with District crimes.

Kirby Seized in W. Va.

Kirby, the leader of the gang, was captured in Charleston, W. Va., last week during an attempted cafe holdup by the trio. Monday night Kirby talked—a few hours after the body of Matthews was found on a lonely rock bier near Washington, washed up by heavy rains. Kirby named Gingell and William B. Reed as his accomplices in several shootings and killings, including the revenge slaying of Matthews. The trio had killed Matthews, he said, because the farmer had acted as a State's witness against Reed's brother some time before.

Meanwhile, it was learned Montgomery County Police nearly captured Reed, whom Kirby named as the shooter of Matthews, last night at Reed's home.

Police surrounded Reed's home at 3 a. m. and rushed in, only to find their quarry had flown. Police, upon receipt of a tip Reed was in the vicinity, called for reinforcements, sending 30 miles to Poolsville, Md., for two more officers.

Details Are Refused.

By the time the officers reached headquarters and then proceeded to Reed's father's home, the gunman had gone. Montgomery County officers were unwilling to give any details of the escape last night, but could not deny they had surrounded the house on a positive tip, and found Reed gone.

Gingell escaped from Charleston police during an exchange of shots which felled Kirby. After disappearing, he beat his way to his mother's home in Kensington, Md. When he arrived there, Matthew's body had been found but Kirby had not yet "talked." He spent the night asleep in his bed.

Next morning his mother heard a radio broadcast stating her son was wanted for murder. She got him out of bed and told him to surrender to police. "It's all a pack of lies," he told her, but after she pleaded, he promised to surrender. He told her he would, then left his home and fled.

The trio is wanted in half a dozen scattered communities for violent crimes. Virginia officers were comparing bullets found in Matthew's body with those used in a bank robbery at Boonmill, Va. The trio is wanted in Charleston for a shooting, and officers there also were trying to connect them with a kidnaping and murder. Burnt Mills, Md., wants them for looting a general store; Takoma Park for a taxi holdup; Montgomery County for an attempted holdup of the Manor Club and Montgomery County for the Matthews murder.

Gingell Accused.

In Kirby's confession, Gingell was accused of knotting Matthews' suspenders around the 65-year-old farmer's neck and tying a rock onto the suspenders. The confession related that Matthews was thrown into the icey waters of Burnt Mills Creek. The rock broke loose and the aged man bobbed to the surface.

Matthews, Kirby said, pleaded: "Save me, save me!"

"I'll save you, you old ——!" Reed is alleged to have shouted, and thereupon emptied his gun into the old man, who sank from sight and was not seen again until last Sunday afternoon when his body was found perched high on a rock. Two Washington Boy Scouts found it.

State troopers in West Virginia said last night they strongly suspected the gang of the murder of W. Earl Dollman, 32-year-old Charleston salesman who was beaten to death, robbed and left in his flaming car Thanksgiving Day.

In the event West Virginia police can develop a murder case in the Dollman death, an extradition fight looms on both Kirby and Gingell. Maryland authorities already want Kirby and West Virginia authorities will want Gingell. Court action is anticipated.

Mrs. G. H. Kelly Divorced.

Reno, Nev., Dec. 17 (AP).—Mrs. Georgiana Hicks Kelly was granted a divorce today from Paul B. Kelly, both prominent socially in Washington. Her complaint charged cruelty. They were married at Washington December 29, 1926, and have two children, Elizabeth, 6, and Georgiana, 3.

Kiwanians Hold Christmas Party

Kiwanis Club of Washington held its annual Christmas party in the Mayflower Hotel yesterday with wives and children of members as guests.

A program of Christmas songs was sung by the Kiwanis sextet. Bynom E. Hynton, president of the club, was in charge of the party.

Hynton announced that the annual Kiwanis party for underprivileged children will be held at 3 p. m. Sunday in Roosevelt High School.

Bartender Held at Own Wish Returned to Jail

Daniel David Denney, 59, Camden, N. J., bartender, had a pleased expression on his face yesterday when he was led from police headquarters in custody of Camden authorities. He was being taken back to his home town for alleged larceny of $300, but he was glad because "his conscience bothered him."

Denney walked into police headquarters Wednesday and said he was wanted in Camden. He said he had lost $300 in a dice game after it had been intrusted to his keeping.

New York, Dec. 17 (AP).—Robert Cecil Nicholson, Australian coal miner, arrived in New York today to go into what he called monastic seclusion.

He will study two years under the auspices and sponsorship of the Singer Richard Crooks, to develop his barytone voice. Nicholson so impressed the American tenor during an Australian tour last June that Crooks urged him to study in the United States.

President Gets Foreign Capital Inflow Report

Data Indicates There Is No Way to Prevent Influx at Present.

The results of a preliminary survey of the inflow of foreign capital to this country were reported to President Roosevelt yesterday by Secretary of the Treasury Henry L. Morgenthau, jr., and Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System.

Before his departure for Buenos Aires, the President had asked for a study of the effects on domestic credit and price structures of foreign capital movements in this country.

Recent indications, from Morgenthau's press conferences and from a speech made by Eccles to a bank management conference in Boston in November, sum up the Administrations position as follows:

That a heavy inflow of foreign bonds is undesirable in its influence on domestic credit.

That there is now no way of preventing it.

That further foreign capital imports should be either sterilized or prevented.

That foreigners should be forced to pay increased taxes on their security holdings here.

Preventive Measures Urged.

Eccles has said that "foreign speculators should not be permitted to throw monkey wrenches into either national or international economic processes." He advocated the application of preventive measures to prevent foreign capital from becoming the base of "an unhealthy, speculative expansion" in this country.

The Administration's probable coming drive on widely fluctuating movements of foreign capital, possibly through legislation, would fit into the general picture of New Deal efforts to brake heavily any sudden boom. Budget balancing, the retirement of the public debt in order to slash bank deposits, the sharp curtailment of excess bank reserves which form the basis for credit expansion—all these are held to be part of the Administration's program of preventive measures, informed sources indicated last night, with a recurrence of 1929 remaining as a background bogeyman for the attempts.

The President, in a swift-moving day of appointments and work on the budget, saw Robert Fechner, director of the Civilian Conservation Corps, who told reporters that the CCC will be extended as a permanent part of the Government after its expiration March 31.

Talks With Harrison.

He also talked to Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, and Representative Robert Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, chairmen of the Senate and House Committees on Taxation, respectively, on tax matters; Speaker William B. Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, on the legislative program; Daniel W. Bell, acting budget director, on the budget, and with Postmaster General James A. Farley.

Mediterranean Pact Drafted by Italy, England

Reciprocal Accord Would Keep Present Balance of Power.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Dec. 17.—A preliminary reciprocal agreement to preserve the present Mediterranean balance of power has been reached between Italy and Great Britain, well informed sources said tonight.

The agreement was reported to have been reached in London. It was described as a step forward along the lines of the "gentlemen's agreement" which eased Italo-British jealousies during the fall.

Definite points of the accord will be ratified by an exchange of letters, informed persons said.

So far as could be ascertained here, Italy has formally renounced any intention of modifying the territorial or military equilibrium of the western Mediterranean.

That means she has gone on record as having no ambitions toward the Balearic Islands of Spain.

Reciprocal guarantees also were exchanged "for the freedom of communications lines throughout the Mediterranean and beyond Suez to the east," the Italian reports said.

The two countries, it was further reported, agreed to seek a further understanding concerning troop concentration in Libya and Egypt, and to examine the question of air force concentration in Africa and Asia Minor.

Nobel Money Waits Recovery of Winner

Berlin, Dec. 17 (AP).—Carl von Ossietzky, recent Nobel peace prize winner, was asserted by a friend today to have been moved from Berlin's West End Hospital to a private sanitarium.

Meanwhile his Nobel prize money of more than $30,000 will be held in Oslo, Norway, until he is able to collect it himself, intimates of the German pacifist said.

They said this arrangement was made to prevent the possibility of his running afoul of the German law making the surrender of foreign exchange obligatory on pain of punishment by death.

(Von Ossietzky was held in a concentration camp for nearly three years and only recently was released. He then entered Berlin's West End Hospital.)

Riders Register Less Criticism On Bus Service

Chief Complaints Appear to Be on Crowding in Rush Hours.

(Because of the complaints about mass transportation in Washington, arising with the approaching discontinuance of the $1 pass, institution of court action to prevent an increase in one-man cars, and the usual havoc winter plays with the system here, The Post yesterday assigned a reporter to obtain a consensus of opinion from street car and bus riders.)

Bus riders are less discontented over their service than the street car clients, it would seem from a brief survey of Federal employes in the downtown "Triangle."

Where trolley customers complain of outmoded cars that are dimly illuminated, their bus brethren express satisfaction with the many new carriers which the Capital Transit Co. has added in the past year.

One of the commonest criticisms offered by car riders is the frequency of mechanical breakdowns, an objection which was not mentioned yesterday by any of the men and women questioned who rely on motor coaches.

"I think the present bus service hardly can be improved upon under existing traffic conditions," said Miss E. W. Suter, who uses the Chevy Chase line twice daily between her home at 4119 Connecticut avenue and her office in the Interstate Commerce Commisson Building.

Many Buses Operating.

"There are plenty of buses both morning and evening. It's true that there are many standees during rush hours, but there is an almost unbroken line of buses, one trailing the other, so what can you do about it?"

Fred G. Orsinger, director of the Commerce Department aquarium and a user of the Chillum Heights bus line, praised the "wonderful service," even though he admitted he rarely gets a seat for the homeward trip. He lives at 5807 First street northeast.

"The coaches have been more crowded than usual lately," he said, "but that is due to Christmas shoppers and the building of new homes in my section of town. I have no doubt that the transit company will put on more buses when it finds out the need is greater."

Do you have a seat coming down in the morning?

Overcrowding Draws Fire.

"All the time," replied Orsinger, explaining that he boards the bus at its northern terminus, North Capitol street and New Hampshire avenue.

Quite naturally, bus riders have no trouble finding seats if they are lucky enough to get aboard at or near the terminal points. Miss Suter pointed out that she rarely has to stand up on the inbound trip after boarding the coach at Van Ness street and Connecticut avenue, which is about a dozen stops from Chevy Chase Circle.

From that point, though, most of the buses are filled to capacity between 7:30 and 8:30 p. m., necessitating long waits for patrons who live closer in.

Some bus riders protested against reckless driving and "road hog" tactics of the drivers. For the most part, however, criticism was directed against overcrowding during morning and evening rush hours.

Mrs. Carpenter, Leader Here, Dead

Funeral services will be held today for Mrs. Henry Clay Carpenter, of 1661 Crescent place northwest, socially prominent in Washington. She died Tuesday after an illness of four months. The rites will be at the home, with the Rev. Oliver J. Hart officiating. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mrs. Carpenter was the widow of a Philadelphia business man. She was the former Charlotte Ward, of Galveston, Tex., daughter of the late Fitzhugh and Charlotte James Ward. She was well known in Ashville, N. C., and Charleston, S. C. During the last years of her life she had divided her residence between this city and Ventnor, N. J.

Survivors are three sons, Fitzhugh Ward Gregg, of Atlantic City; A Pierce Gregg, of Philadelphia, and Duff Merrick, of this city; two grandchildren, Mrs. John Chester Bratten, and Miss Charles Louise Gregg, of Philadelphia, and a sister, Mrs. M. F. Ward, of Washington.

Simpson Will Leave Germany on Tuesday

Berlin, Dec. 17 (U.P.).—Lawrence Simpson, American sailor who has served 17 months of a 3-year sentence in a Nazi prison on treason charges, will be sent back to the United States on parole Tuesday, it was learned today.

Simpson, who was granted clemency by Chancellor Hitler, will sail aboard the United States liner President Roosevelt from Hamburg.

He may be signed on as a member of the crew or sail as an "unofficial" passenger.

Simpson, who will be on five-year parole and is not being deported under a strict interpretation of German law, was convicted of trying to smuggle Communist literature into Germany from the liner Manhattan, aboard which he was arrested.

Apple Blossom Festival Group Elects Officers

Dr. Lewis M. Allen Made Chairman for Fete at Winchester.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Dec. 17.—Dr. Lewis M. Allen, Winchester physician and sportsman, today was elected chairman of the executive committee of the apple blossom festival for 1937. He will succeed H. B. McCormac, who resigned because of all health.

Fred A. Read, jr., who for the last two years has served as director general, has been re-elected to this position. He will have three assistants to be named later by the executive committeemen.

Other officers elected include Clarke T. Cooper, vice chairman; H. Clay Degrange, secretary-treasurer, and Hoye Riley, director of finance. An advisory committee consisting of J. P. Arthur, chairman; Ray Robinson, H. Clay Degrange and W. E. Cooper was designated.

Members of the executive committee announced that the fourteenth annual fete, which will be held here sometime late in April or early May, depending upon when the apple blossoms are at their height, will include many innovations, particularly in the feature parade, "Trail of the Pink Petals."

J. Q. Wood Is Dead; Former U. S. Consul

St. Petersburg, Fla., Dec. 17 (AP).—John Quinby Wood, 69, of Bucksport, Me., retired United States consular official and former commissioner of education in Hawaii, died here last night. While consul general at Addis Ababa he negotiated a new treaty between the United States and Ethiopia in June, 1914. He served at consulates in more than a dozen nations between 1908 and 1929.

A graduate of Wesleyan University, Mr. Wood was Hawaii's commissioner of education in 1898 and 1899. For six years he practiced international law in Europe.

Father of Seven Dies In Virginia Auto Crash

Harrisonburg, Va., Dec. 17 (AP).—William Evans, 40, of Bridgewater, the father of seven children, was instantly killed in a collision on the fog-covered Valley turnpike, three miles south of here last night.

He was in an automobile driven by George R. Bricker which smashed into the rear of a truck on a straight stretch of road. Bricker received minor injuries and was brought to a hospital here.

Mexico City, Dec. 17 (AP).—The Mexican Interior Department disclosed today Leon Trotzky, exiled revolutionary leader, had applied officially for permission to live in Mexico.

Boy Dies of Hurts In Highway Crash

Sanford Hammond, colored, 18, died in Casualty Hospital yesterday of injuries received Wednesday night in a five-car collision on the Baltimore boulevard near Beltsville, Md.

Hammond was riding on the back of a truck which crashed into the rear of another truck which was slowing down to avoid striking a parked automobile. Another truck and a passenger car also piled into the other vehicles.

E. W. Pulliam, Ashbury, N. C., told police he sloyed his truck to avoid striking a parked car. At the same instant, he said, the two other trucks and the pleasure car skidded and crashed into his truck.

Pulliam and the other drivers will appear at a hearing in Hyattsville Wednesday. Charles C. Foote, Berwyn, Md., owner of the parked automobile, was charged with illegal parking.

Edward Boyd, 3, of 1112 Chicago street southeast, was in serious condition in Casualty Hospital last night from a broken leg and possible fracture of the skull. He was struck by an automobile at Nichols avenue and Talbert street southeast.

Police said the lad was knocked down by a car driven by Charles Gibson, colored, 47, of 5351 Hayes street northeast, who was not held by police.

Economist Gives Advice For Future Depression

Atlantic City, N. J., Dec. 17 (U.P.).—Dr. Theodore J. Grayson, dean of the Wharton School of Finance, University of Pennsylvania, told the Atlantic City Kiwanis Club today that he hoped that in the next depression "we won't be such fools as we were" in the last one.

"Thme cycle theory is based on the economists' belief that a new crop of fools comes along every 20 years," he said. "So far they are right. But the last crack was so bad that people may remember it. We will have a new crop, but I see reason to hope we won't be such fools as we were.

"The national patient now is sitting up eating a lamb chop. When we get to feeling brash again we'll start up the regular steps that lead to the next depression. And one of them we can watch for this time, one of those checks on the process, is when the bankers begin lending money not unwillingly, but enthusiastically."

Junior Board Division Awarded Chest Plaque

Harold Fangboner, captain of the winning team in the Junior Board of Commerce division in the recent Community Chest campaign, was awarded the Junior Board plaque, emblematic of the championship, at the regular Junior Board luncheon at the Lee House yesterday. The presentation was made by Clarence Phelps Dodge, president of the Community Chest.

Dodge, complimenting the entire organization upon its effectiveness in the drive, called attention to the fact that every team in the division exceeded its quota and that the winning team had turned in nearly twice its allotment.

Ohio Auditor Guarded After Admitting Theft

Cincinnati, Dec. 17 (AP).—Sylvester A. Grote, a deputy county auditor for ten years, was under police guard in his home tonight after auditor George Guckenberger announced he had confessed the theft of more than $28,100 in bonds from safe deposit boxes.

Guckenberger said Grote suffered a nervous breakdown after making the confession.

Prisoner Sheds Ball and Chain To Escape Jail

By the Associated Press.

Elkton, Md., Dec. 17.—Cecil County police officers found no trace today of Charles Rhodes, who escaped from the county jail in his second attempt within ten days.

Rhodes freed himself from a ball and chain, cut an extra padlock on his cell and scaled a 30-foot wall without being noticed late last night.

Benjamin Sartin, his companion in their attempt on December 6, notified jail officials of the escape after Rhodes had disappeared. The manner in which he freed himself baffled officials.

Sheriff Eugene Racine said he had taken extra precautions after the first unsuccessful attempt. A ball and chain was fastened to Rhodes' leg. A padlock was put on his cell on the second tier of the cell block. The sheriff found these cut.

Rhodes and Sartin were indicted this week by the grand jury on eight counts of larceny of poultry or sheep from Cecil County farmers. They were held in the jail for trial.

A woman's tip frustrated their attempt to break out of the jail on December 6. After Sartin was seen cutting at bars of the transom over the jail-yard door, officers found the two fully dressed on the cell cots.

The woman had overheard talk of the plan to escape while visiting another prisoner in the jail.

New Auto Ads To Cover Price WhenDelivered

Incidental Charges Usually Applied Later to Be Included in List

Advertised automobile prices hereafter will give prospective buyers a better idea of what they actually will have to pay for the car of their choice, the Automobile Manufacturers Association announced yesterday.

Alvan McCauley, president of the association, said in a statement that a change of policy among all its members will provide inclusion in the advertised prices of several charges not previously added in the F. O. B. list figures advertised throughout the country.

Hereafter, it was announced, the advertised prices will include a charge for preparing the car for delivery, reimbursement for the Federal tax, and charges for essential accessories, such as the spare tire and bumpers, which have become known as standard equipment, but charges for which, in most instances, are not included in the advertised price.

With such charges all lumped into the f. o. b. factory price, it was pointed out, the purchasers may determine the actual delivered cost by adding to the advertised figure only the charge for transportation from the factory and any State and local taxes that may be levied.

The association made it clear that while advertised prices will be higher, the cost to the purchaser will be no greater, except for "some very slight modifications incidental to the details of its application."

The change is expected to remove possible sources of irritation among purchasers, who, seeking a car at its advertised price, find added to that figure several charges that had not previously been mentioned.

Robert Grafton, Noted Artist, Dies

Michigan City, Ind., Dec. 17 (AP).—Robert W. Grafton, 65, noted American portrait painter, died today. Grafton's largest recent commission was the replacement of portraits and murals destroyed when the Saddle and Sirloin Club was burned in the Chicago Stock Yards fire several months ago.

Former Presidents Calvin Coolidge and Herbert Hoover sat for Grafton in the White House.

He refused a commission two years ago to paint a portrait of King Carol of Rumania.

"He'll have to come over here if he wants me to paint him," Grafton was quoted as telling the Rumanian consul in Chicago, when offered the commission of painting the King.

Slaying in Chicago Believed in Revenge

Chicago, Dec. 17 (U.P.).—A man identified as Dominick Scaduto, 24, who came here two months ago from New York, was shot and killed tonight by three men who invaded a poolroom where he had been working for the past week.

Police learned a man said to be Scaduto's brother was killed in New York at about the time he left, and believed underworld haunts there ordered Scaduto's death in revenge.

Gen. Guiney Dead; Was Hero Of 3 Conflicts

Brig. Gen. Patrick W. Guiney, assistant quartermaster general of the Army, died yesterday in Walter Reed Hospital after a lingering illness. He was 59 years old, and was suffering from a heart ailment when he was taken to the hospital about four months ago.

Gen. Guiney's service with the Army covered a period of 41 years. He held decorations for his gallantry and service in the Boxer expedition, in China, in the Philippine Insurrection and in the World War.

A native of Fall River, Mass., where he was born February 10, 1877, Gen. Guiney began his military career when he was appointed to the Military Academy from Massachusetts on June 19, 1895. Graduating in the class of 1899 he was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Cavalry.

During the Boxer uprising he served with the Legation Guards, then participated in the capture of Peking on August 14, 1900, the capture of the Imperial Palace, and in the battle south of Peking in November of that year.

Served in Philippines.

Shortly afterward he was made a first lieutenant, and in May, 1901, he was sent to the Philippines, where, with the Sixth Cavalry, he engaged in operations against Gen. Belarmino until his surrender on July 4, 1901, and Gen. Malvar to February 28, 1902.

Gen. Guiney returned to the United States in September, 1903, sreving at various posts until 1906, when, as a captain, he returned to the Philippines for two additional years of duty.

When he again returned to the United States in 1908, he saw service in the Southwestern States on assignments with the Cavalry and as a quartermaster.

In May, 1918, he went to France as division quartermaster of the Seventy-eighth Division, serving with this outfit until shortly before the armistice, when he was sent to the staff school at Langres, France.

Cited by Pershing.

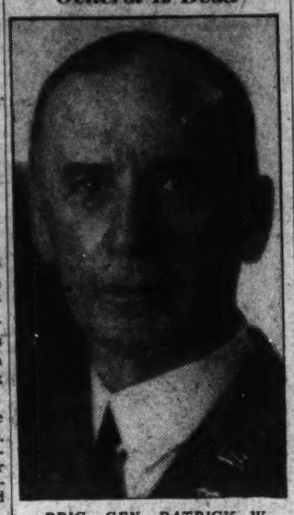
He took part in the St. Mihiel offensive, and was cited by Gen. Pershing for meritorious service. He acquired the temporary rank of colonel during the war, reverting to the permanent rank of major after the war.

Brig. Gen. Guiney became a lieutenant colonel in the regular Army in 1920, a colonel in 1921, and was appointed assistant to the quartermaster general with the rank of brigadier, September 19, 1933. He served as chief of the construction division of the office of the quartermaster general.

Surviving Gen. Guiney are his widow, Mrs. Margaret B. Guiney, of the Kennedy-Warren Apartments, and a son, First Lieut. Patrick W. Guiney, jr., of Fort Hancock, N. J.

Tentative funeral arrangements call for services in the Fort Myer Chapel tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. Burial will follow, with full military honors, in Arlington National Cemetery.

General Is Dead



BRIG. GEN. PATRICK W. GUINEY.

Lieut. William G. Sills Dies at Post in Hawaii

The War Department yesterday announced the death of Lieut. William G. Sills at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, on Wednesday. His wife, Mrs. Dorothy D. Sills, is the daughter of Col. Earl Findley, editor of Air Service Magazine, of this city.

Lieut. Sills is survived by his widow and his mother, Mrs. Daniel Sills, of Fort F. E. Warren, Wyo.

Officer Denies Garey Charges In Graft Trial

Suspended Md. Policeman Awaits Decision of Job Commissioner.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Dec. 17.—Albert E. Markley, suspended State police officer, denied today all charges filed against him by Maj. Enoch B. Garey, superintendent of the State police.

Markley asserted he never had accepted gratuities from John N. Herbert, Washington boulevard garage proprietor; he had not accepted $40 to obtain dismissal of a drunken driving charge against Herman Draayer and he had not "bullied" Paul Montgomery, a probationary patrolman.

Montgomery had been requested to appear at the heading but was not present. It was reported he is now living in New York. Officer Robert Raleigh said that Samuel Kraus, a cook formerly stationed at the Laurel substation, had quoted Markley as saying:

"Montgomery might be Uncle Harry's (Gov. Harry W. Nice) nephew, but we'll see how long he'll last down here.

State Employment Commissioner Harry C. Jones reserved decision on the case after the hearing. He also has the evidence taken at hearings of three other suspended State policemen.

Ode to OTARD

O IS FOR OTTO

Everybody laughed at Otto,
Always absolutely blotto.
Buying nameless drinks in haste,
He gulped them down to kill the taste.
He thus missed half the fun in life,
And what is more, annoyed his wife.
"I do not love you when you're blotto."
Said his wife, "Try Otard, Otto."
Otto did, and thanks to her
He's now a temperate connoisseur.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Husband Tells Wife of Idyllic Love, Now Ended, for Another Woman; She, Distracted, Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We have been married 15 years and have often been described as "an ideal couple." I worship my husband, and we have two lovely children. We have had many financial worries and debts incurred by sickness and death, and it has always been a struggle to get by on my husband's small salary. But I have always felt I could stand anything except sharing my husband with another woman.

• • • •

Four years ago I stayed home from an alumni dance because I hadn't proper clothing to wear, and my husband, as an officer of the class, felt he had to go, and he went alone. For the first time in our married life he didn't come home until 3 a. m., and then with an alcoholic breath. I was terribly hurt! To think that my husband, a Sunday school teacher with perfect ideals, could do such a thing! He told me he and another man had been out on a petting party with two girls. He begged my forgiveness and I tried to forget. But he refused to answer a few questions which any wife would have asked any husband under the circumstances.

• • • •

I lost my temper, for I have one of those ungovernable tempers which prompts persons to say things which they are terribly ashamed of and sorry for afterward. Well, anyway, I kept on nagging him about the episode and we seemed to drift apart. He urged me to be broader minded, tried to get me to smoke and take a highball occasionally. I refused and he said I was prudish, that we seemed to have nothing in common—although we both love dancing, sports and literature. We began having frequent quarrels. I could see our happy home life crumbling to ruins.

• • • •

Then this past year I had three serious operations, and was in bed for seven months. For days following the last operation my life hung in the balance. I wasn't expected to live, but I fought for life because I loved my husband so. During the past month, when I have been feeling more like myself again, we seemed to be getting back to the old, loving understanding. I was so happy. Then three nights ago my husband came home in a depressed and nervous state. I knew something was wrong and asked him to tell me. He seemed to want to.

• • • •

He said for the past three years he had been in love with another girl—with a love that was beautiful. At this I fainted. I felt more stricken than when one of our children was taken. He said they have met each other only for lunch and on the golf course, and that she is now engaged to be married. Now he says I am the only one he really loves; that he thinks I have been wonderful to take things as I have, and that we are to start all over again; that he will never hurt me again.

• • • •

But I wonder. It seems the girl pursuaded him not to see her again saying that under the circumstances it was best not to; but that if he had been free to marry, she would have married him in preference to the other man. I told him I would go out of his life if he wished to marry her, but he claims to love me best.

• • • •

I asked him only one favor—to tell her in my presence that he loves me, or, failing that, to let me talk to her alone. This he refuses to do. Why, since he knows it would make me happy, can't he do this one thing for me? Since she knows about me, why shouldn't we meet? I am afraid—so afraid—that he will be thinking of her, and that at the first sign of something wrong, will be wishing for her again. He said if I had passed away at the time of my last operation they would have been married.

• • • •

Miss Haworth, please give me some counsel soon. I am desperate. I can't eat or sleep. I want to do the right thing. I love him so, but I can't go on knowing he will be thinking of her at times. My husband says except for disposition, I have looks, personality and intelligence to surpass her. Oh, how I have suffered for my ill temper. He told me this morning he loved me best and was happy. Again I asked him to prove his love by arranging a meeting so the three of us could have a heart-to-heart talk. He said "no." Why is he so afraid? Am I asking too much? He says, "Why should I have to prove my love?" I say, why shouldn't he? He is the one who felt by the wayside and loved another.

HEARTBROKEN WIFE.

Futility of Jealousy.

DEAR HEARTBROKEN WIFE: I can well understand that you might be heartsick at the thought of your husband's loving another woman, but I am decidedly impatient with and unsympathetic toward your silly goings-on at the present time. If you want to lose your husband's interest entirely; if you want to make him everlastingly sick of and disgusted with you; completely hopeless of ever getting back to some tolerable basis of married comradeship, all you need do is pursue these same ill-advised tactics a little while longer.

• • • •

Let me quote you a few excerpts from Dr. W. Beran Wolfe's most instructive book entitled "How to Be Happy Though Human." In the chapter headed "Love and Marriage," this able psychiatrist and authority on human behavior says, among other things:

• • • •

"Love may be shared, love may be bestowed, but it can never be demanded. We have seen wives complain bitterly that their husbands do not love them any more, as if this were a sign of some defect in their husbands. More likely such a failure of love is an indication that the wives have not made it sufficiently interesting for their husbands to continue the affection of the honeymoon . . . Happiness in love, like freedom, is to be bought only at the cost of unflagging watchfulness and assiduous mutual adjustment. No love is happy where one partner does all the adjusting and the other remains an unbending rock, complete in his self-assurance of perfection and immovability . . .

• • • •

In another chapter, headed "Conflict and Emotion," Dr. Wolfe says: "To be jealous of someone means to . . . attempt to possess him. Human beings are not chattels and can never be possessed . . . There are wives who believe that once they have married a man they have solved all their problems and that love will follow on marriage as the night follows the day, without their lifting a hand to earn it . . . Whenever a human being is jealous he tacitly admits that he feels himself incapable of earning and keeping the love of his beloved . . . If you are jealous, examine the tottering foundations of your security. If you were not so cowardly you would not take such drastic precautions to prevent your beloved from being a human being. You cannot own a human being and you cannot fetter the human spirit. Jealousy is the boomerang of the emotions and feelings . . . It not only kills (the) love (of the beloved), but it maims the lover, body and soul."

• • • •

Half crazed by jealousy and fear, you are permitting a golden opportunity for recapturing your husband's whole souled devotion to slip through your fingers. Once he had told you about his beautiful, lost three-years' love for the other woman, you should have had the strength and wisdom to become an actress of the first water in meeting the crisis (since you love him so idolatrously and have no wish to give him up, and since, according to his story, he has not been technically unfaithful to you). You should have taken him in your arms, consoled him in his extremity, accepted part-blame for what had happened, pledged yourself never to mention the subject again and suggested that that hour be made the beginning of a second honeymoon and a new and better married life, animated by a mutual spirit of greater humility and closer understanding.

• • • •

It seems to me your husband proved the indestructibility of his sense of obligation to you by refraining from asking for, or accepting his freedom from you in order to marry the other woman. As he very rightly says, he has no obligation to prove his love in other ways. It is up to you to merit and woo more tender and intimate manifestations. I think your insistence upon meeting or talking with the other woman, now that she has moved to end the association, is in shockingly bad taste. And so is your wish to stand by while your husband tells her that he loves you best. Only a woman lost to reason would conceive of such a shabby triumph over a rival who has voluntarily abdicated.

• • • •

And I should think that Dr. Wolfe's statements make it clear that this is not so much a case of your husband's having fallen by the wayside and loved another, as of your having lost him by the wayside, so that he turned to another for the romance and gentleness you failed to provide. For by your own confession, you have frequently played the role of the shrew.

• • • •

My advice to you is to begin, this moment, to act as though the past had never been. Build a brand-new happiness from this day hence, working with whatever material the passing hours provide. Try to think of your husband as a brand-new beau and treat him with the same responsive graciousness you would accord a brand-new beau. Let no reproach, accusation or complaint about his past love affair ever cross your lips.

Our Santa Claus Fund.

DEAR READERS: Donations ranging in amounts from 35 cents to $5 have already been received by this column in response to an appeal made here Wednesday for cash contributions to The Post's 1936 Toy and Doll fund. The money has been turned over to the treasurer of the fund, and receipt of same will be publicly acknowledged in another column of this newspaper today. I feel a sense of personal gratitude to those who gave, and I take this means of thanking them.

• • • •

Once more I call attention of readers to the fact that such money as they may care to give to this fund will be used for bringing Christmas happiness to more than 20,000 underprivileged children living in the District of Columbia. In addition to dolls and toys, such children are to be given—according to their individual need—shoes, stockings, sweaters, warm gloves and underwear and other wearing apparel.

• • • •

This department has been asked to familiarize readers with the existence and purpose of the Toy and Doll fund, and reminders will be printed here from time to time until Christmas Eve. Contributions may be addressed to Mary Haworth's Mail, in care of this newspaper.

White Wreaths for a Modern Christmas

Surprise Decorative Scheme Offered for Current Holidays

Greenery of Traditional Pine Tree Varied Strikingly With Whitewashing and Trimming With Silver Tinsel and Blue Candle-Shaped Bulbs.

By Rebekah Blake.

"Same old Christmas tree again! Same old stars and tinsel trimmings and pine needles dropping on the floor! Same old decorations to put away when Christmas is over!" That is the way some persons feel when the holiday season approaches. If you are one of them, why not try giving yourself a new outlook on Christmas and the family a surprise by trying out some new decorations?

green pine tree in the usual Christmas manner, don't think that it has to be that way. One woman is making her tree quite modern by whitewashing it and decorating it with silver tinsel and blue candle-shaped electric bulbs. White cotton is being spread around the base of the tree. If you spray aluminum paint on the tree, a silver effect will be produced.

In a modern room with white accents sheafs of the white foliage are tied with stiff red bows to give a Christmas feeling. Indirect lighting in the room reflects on the foliage. A Christmas scene on an indirectly illuminated shelf would be especially attractive. Decoration of this type changes the atmosphere of the room yet keeps to the color scheme.

Candles are an old idea but may be used in modern manner if you are extravagant in their distribution. If you have a fireplace in your room, line the mantle with many tall tapers and light them all. They will change the old scene of the mantel with one candle at each end. Gleaming candles in the windows and on small tables will be a change from the colored lights, but be careful where you set these bits of fire, for careless placing might cause disaster.

Burning white or red tapers on your dining table, create a new atmosphere if you are used to electric lights when you eat. Miniature angels are charming accents for the table. A green and white color scheme for the dining room is effective. Use green mistletoe and white flowers in a white or silver bowl. Place this bowl on a plain glass mirror in the center of the table and arrange a tall green taper candle in a low holder at each corner of the mirror. Green Christmas tree balls, scattered on the glass are reflected like bubbles. Place a sprig of holly on each napkin.

Garlands of Christmas greens, caught with little silver bells, are appropriate to bring Yule-time cheer to a room paneled in pine or walnut. Huckleberry greens are attractive and inexpensive. Long sprays of holly, pine and barberry, arranged in large vases with water, take the place of flowers in the home and stay fresh longer than when they are arranged on the walls without water

Another family is having twin Christmas trees, one on either side of the fireplace. These are being decorated with gay balls and tinsel and a sheet of finely spun glass is spread over the entire trees. The spun glass gives an effect of mist around the trees.

Do you remember when your grandmother trimmed the family Christmas tree with cranberries and pop-corn strung in long strips and sugar cookies cut in fancy shapes? These are not new ideas but they are decorations that are seldom used.

In wrapping your packages, do a little something different to them this year. Why not illustrate some of your own personality in the coverings. If you like the color of red and would never be seen in blue, do up your presents in red tissue or cellophane and accent them with gala ribbons of gold. If you are partial to pastels and dainty ribbons and ruffles in your personal dressing, tie your gifts with white tissue or fancy silver paper and don't be stingy with the ribbon you use for the bows.

If you decorate the exterior of your home, light all of your shrubs around the house with lights of the same color. Your house will be more outstanding than if you use vari-colored bulbs. Set up a Christmas scene in a front window, if it can be seen from the street, and shine a light from above down on the scene. If you can obtain life-size models, a Christmas scene set up in the front yard and properly lighted would be the attraction of the neighborhood.

Glazed Pottery Held Suitable for Plants

Christmas shoppers and indoor gardeners in particular will be interested in recent experiments conducted at an Eastern university which have disproved the need for the old-fashioned clay pot for house plants.

Instead the more attractive glazed pottery and metal containers are advocated, not only because they are more beautiful and will not leave moisture stains on window sills and furniture, but because the plants grow better in them.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Glands That Keep Enlarging.

Some of these days we will find the cause of Hodgkin's disease—which today presents a baffling problem to medical science. During all the years that the disorder has been studied since it was so clearly described by Thomas Hodgkin, no answerable agent has been discovered. Certain factors point to tuberculosis, others to a diphtherialike bacillus, and still others to tumor growths simulating cancer.

One observation in particular, however, is of considerable moment, namely, that the majority of those who are afflicted are victims of bad oral hygiene.

Fortunately, the affection is not common, although it occurs twice as often in men as in women. Its greatest incidence will be in the two decades between the ages of 18 and 38.

The symptoms come on as a rule without much fuss. In most of the cases, the enlargement of the lymph glands (nodes), which is characteristic of the ailment, is painless. The patient may observe a gradual increase in size of one side of the neck. After a time the glands on the opposite side may begin to grow. Sometimes lumps will be felt beneath the arm in the early stage, although many other causes may be responsible for the appearance of tumors in this location.

The swelling may progress for many months without producing any symptoms. Itching, however, is common and may be persistent and severe. After a time the glands will become visible in other parts of the body. It is only when hidden structures around the esophagus or the bronchi increase in size that difficulty in breathing or swallowing becomes noticeable.

What to do is the burning question. Medical science must admit at the outset that there is no specific remedy that can be considered curative. First of all, infections anywhere in the body, especially those about the mouth and teeth, should be removed. Both X-ray and radium have a powerful effect upon the enlarged glands, and under treatment with these forces, they will recede in size and many pressure symptoms may thus be relieved.

The only drug that seems to be of value is arsenic in some form. Just why this acts in so beneficent a manner is not clear, but at best only temporary relief is possible.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Dec. 17.

LAST WEEK-END I spent in hilly Hartford, Conn., home town of Kate the Great Hepburn and of the insurance business, as the house guest of the amazing Beatrice Fox Auerbach, who presides over the destinies of the largest department store there. It is one of the finest emporia I ever saw in a city of modest dimensions—and Bea, who works 30 hours a day, is a truly fine merchant.

ALICE HUGHES.

While there I was privileged to sit in at one of those heart-warming events—the return of a native girl to her own backyard when she has taken the first step toward fame. In this case the wandering daughter was a tall, blondely beautiful contralto named Anna Kaskas, just signed by the Metropolitan Opera—one of that wondrous new type of operatic glamour-girl already typified by such radiant songsters as Helen Jepson and Muriel Dickson.

In Hartford La Belle Kaskas studied her trills and sang in a local Gladys Swarthout, Grace Moore, choir. Not long ago she auditioned triumphantly for the Met—and here she was, sharing a recital platform in her home with Tenor Tito Schipa. Beautiful Bushnell Memorial Hall was packed with 3,200 people plus standees, to bid her welcome—the town's swank and the girls and boys who went to school with her! She sang well, and the stage was heaped with flowers; and it was a rich experience for all of us—especially Anna! So keep an ear open for the lovely middle register of Anna Kaskas—you'll hear from her, in every sense of the world!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN — As Messrs. Leslie Howard and John Gielgud end their historic battle of the Hamlets, with Johnny winning by a nose (and you'll understand this when you see him!) The Bard of Avon will still have a lovely exponent in our town. Downtown at Christadora House, in Tompkins Square, Mrs. Richard Mansfield, widow of one of our greatest actors, still reads the words of Shakespeare to large groups of people, young and old. Thus she spends her last years in helping to keep alive and vivid the magic words of the greatest dramatic poet who ever lived! . . .

• • • •

We are still agog over the local reports, or rumors, that Alexander Woollcott will actually marry the attractive Mrs. Grace Hendrick Patterson Eustis, writing-lady of New York and Washington. Our distinguished essayist and radiorator is one of the world's most dogged and determined bachelors—and what are we to think? Any wagers, pro or con? . . .

The annual anti-kissing crusade is now on at my old alma mater, Columbia University. After thoroughly scouting the dear old campus on Morningside Heights, I find that the practical unanimous opinion of the student body is "Phooie!" Who starts these silly ruckuses, anyway? . . .

• • • •

Speaking of Columbia, Dean Virginia Gildersleeve of Barnard College, the girls' school, recently reported the loss of her cairn terrier, Culag Beag (Gaelic for "Rover," no doubt), after 12 years on the campus. I found Culag in a bar and grill on upper Broadway, nearby, and he said, between hiccups, "Can't stand these modern, hatless, coffin-nial-puffing co-eds any longer!" Stanch old Tory, that hound! . . .

• • • •

Oh, my! Gloria Swanson is reported about to take a flier on Broadway, with Herbert Marshall as her leading man . . . Doesn't look as though "Bart" made up with his pretty wife, Edna Best, during his recent London visit!

One of America's really great women will soon celebrate her eightieth birthday, still alert and busy at her trade of putting down wise words on paper. I mean Ida M. Tarbell, famous 30 years ago as a "muck-raker" and later for her brilliant biographies. Now she's writing her memoirs, which should be fascinating. Oddly enough though she's been a professional writer for 50 years, she's never penned a novel. And why should she? Too darned many novels now.

Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Garner Receive at 'Honor Bright' Party, Given at Navy Yard in Compliment to 'Girl on the Cover'

Reproduction in Life of Book Jacket Striking Note for Guests.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Garner both were present yesterday at the party given by Mrs. Emmet Carlyle Gudger, wife of Capt. Gudger, at the Navy Yard "in compliment to her goddaughter, 'Honor Bright.'"

The tea was such as always marks the advent of one of Frances Parkinson Keyes' new books. Mrs. Keyes, wife of Senator Henry Wilder Keyes, dedicated "Honor Bright" "To Genevieve Walsh Gudger, the noble daughter of a great father, from a devoted friend of both." Among the unique features of the afternoon was a reproduction in life of the book jacket for which Mrs. Gudger's elder daughter, Elinor, posed. There she sat, a lovely picture in a frilled frock of pink, her golden hair in braids around her head, the center of a bright blue "book cover" reaching from floor to ceiling.

Guests caught the first glimpse of "Honor Bright" as they turned toward the dining room after being greeted by Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Garner and Mrs. Keyes, who received with the hostess. Miss Mary Hornaday, president of the Women's National Press Club, made the introductions.

Graced by First Lady.

Mrs. Roosevelt, whose presence adds to any occasion she attends, not only because she is the First Lady, but also because she is such a gracious one, wore a becoming tailored dubonnet frock trimmed in a band of green velour at the neck and around the hem, and with a studded leather belt. Her dubonnet hat had a flaring brim, turned off the face and caught with a little gray wing in front, and the wrap was a gray squirrel cape, hip length.

Mrs. Garner, who it is welcome to see again since her return to the Capital from her home in Texas, wore a costume of black, relieved by white at the neck. Mrs. Gudger was in a gown of black net with rose-colored flowers at the neck, and Mrs. Keyes in a plum-colored moire taffeta with which she wore antique clips at the shoulders.

Mrs. Genevieve Forbes Herrick, who, like Mrs. Keyes, is a resident of Alexandria, had collaborated with her on a gay little skit, which was given by members of the Women's National Press Club, who portrayed the book's "best selling" cities. "Honor Bright" was published October 2, both here and in England, and a week later had taken its place in the select company of best sellers. The cities were Washington, represented by Miss Virginia Stevens; Wilmington, by Miss Virginia Price; St. Louis, Mrs. Emily Newell Blair; Omaha and Portland, Me., Mrs. Helena Hills Weed; Newark, Mrs. Gladys Moon Jones; Springfield, Mass., Mrs. Bulkley Griffin; Boston, Miss Corinne Reid Frazier, and Milwaukee, Miss Ada Rainey. The role of the author was taken by Mrs. Keyes herself, and that of two reporters by Miss Hornaday and Emma Perley Lincoln.

Book Scenes Are Motif.

Friends who assisted at the tea were all costumed to represent the places where parts of the book were written. Mrs. Carter Grimes, the former Miss Lucy Lewis, had come from Marmion, her home in King George County, which was built in 1670 and has been in the Lewis family since 1700. She is a great-great-grandniece of Washington and her gown had belonged to one of her ancestors.

Mrs. Joseph Crockett, of Alexandria, Va., at whose home Mrs. Grimes was a guest last night, wore a gown in which a colonial belle, Mary Page Fleming, attended a ball given in Fredericksburg in honor of Gen. Lafayette. She represented Alexandria, where much of "Honor Bright" was written.

Mrs. Julian Messner, of New York City, wife of the publisher, wore a black gown decorated with sprays of pine, representing Pine Grove Farm, the home of Mrs. Keyes at North Haven, N. H. Mrs. Johnston Cheatam, wife of Admiral Cheatam, was in a quaint old Norman costume from Lisieux, where Mrs. Keyes spent the summer, and Mrs. J. A. B. Smith, of New York City, wore a sailor's uniform, representing the Bremen, on which Mrs. Keyes completed the book on her return from Europe.

During the entire afternoon Miss Gudger remained on the "cover" and only by a smile and response to the greeting of Mrs. Roosevelt and others who went up to speak to her, did she relax briefly from the serene likeness to the picture. Mrs. Randolph D. Hopkins, who knew her mother when she was a girl, recalled that her daughter looked just as she did then.

Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, was among the guests, as were Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. Florence D. Shreve, president of the newly formed California Democratic Club; Miss Elena Carroll, of the School of Journalism at Columbia University; Miss Florence Long, of Alexandria, and many members of the Women's National Press Club and wives of naval officers.

Party Planned For Miss Talley

Honor Guest Makes Debut at Tea Dance Monday; Aides Are Named.

Miss Mary Morris Wright and her mother, Mrs. Arthur Wright, are entertaining today at a luncheon at the Cosmos Club in honor of Miss Martha Downs Talley, daughter of the Assistant to the Directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and Mrs. Lynn P. Talley, who will make her debut at a tea dance December 21.

The guests will include Mrs. Talley, Mrs. William Laird Dunlap, Mrs. Robert Downs, of Baltimore; Mrs. A. S. Gardiner, jr., and the Misses Carrie Roper Fulton, Alice Blair, of Baltimore; Claire Lynch, Gertrude Pearson, Helen Rodgers, Jane Kemon and Hebe Reynolds.

Miss Talley will be assisted at her debut party by Miss Mary Senate Howes, Miss Reynolds, Miss Kearsley Caldwell, Miss Mary Agnes Young, Miss Margaret Boyden and Miss Fulton, as well as by her sisters, the Misses Carolyn Downs Talley, a sophomore at Vassar, and Beatrice Anne Talley, a senior at Madeira School, and a group of young friends from out of town. These include her cousin, Miss Sarah Anne Crosswell, of Houston, Tex.; Miss Nancy Mitchell, of St. Louis; Miss Mary Belle Maddin, of Nashville; Mr. Lawrence Cathels and Mr. Henry Cathels, of Scarsdale, N. Y.

Navy Man to Wed Girl From New York

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Gibbs, of 142 East Seventy-first street, New York City, and Woodcliff Lake, N. J., announce the engagement of their daughter, Ann Olivia, to Lieut. Comdr. Rutledge Barker Tompkins, U. S. N., son of Mrs. John Thomas Tompkins, of Washington, and the late Capt. John Thomas Tompkins.

The wedding will take place later in the winter. Miss Gibbs attended the Warrenton Country Day School at Warrenton, Va., and St. Mary's School in Peekskill, N. Y.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

Hollywood is reaching out its long grasping fingers toward Washington, and greedily searching for new faces and brighter talent. Now, it seems that Norton, the second s[on] of the Clarence Norton Goodwins, has been summoned to the capital of filmdom. His 6 feet of good looks and personality have attracted the attention of a certain studio. He, incidentally, has just been in the Christmas play at Harvard, and arrives in town today for the holidays with his family. Knowing Mrs. G. as well as we do, we can just bet that they will be very gay holidays.

The William C. Sullivans are giving a cocktail party Sunday afternoon in honor of Leon Erroll, from 5 until 7. This reminds one of the party they gave several years ago in honor of the same gentleman of the footlights. It was a freezing night—the trees cracked in the chilly blasts, the street lamps tried to shine merrily through extra coatings of ice, and people hustled indoors.

All of the 60 guests braved the zero temperature, went to the theater and then back to the Sullivans for a buffet supper. That was all very well—but, in the meantime something had gone wrong with the furnace and the rooms, usually so warm and cozy, were anything but. The ladies sat about bundled in their fur wraps, while their escorts, with the host, went downstairs and as so many medical specialists might, inspected the heating system and offered suggestions for fixing it. Finally, after an expert was called and routed out of his home, a small wire did the trick and once again there was heat in the radiators.

Helen Fish has a versatile coiffure. We saw her yesterday at the Mayflower lounge with a knock-about felt hat pulled down with her curls peeping out beneath the brim. And we wondered just how she does it. Because only a few nights before we had seen her at the Pall Mall room of the Raleigh . . . At that time she was wearing a quaint evening gown and had her curls piled high on the top of her head with a perky little spray of flowers in the front and a dark maroon band of velvet that encircled her crown.

Mrs. Garner to Be Guest Of Women Democrats

Mrs. John Nance Garner, wife of the Vice President, will be honored at a tea of the Woman's National Democratic Club in their clubhouse tomorrow afternoon.

The president of the club, Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, officers and members of the board of governors will be in the receiving line.

Homer Cummings' Guests Praise Portrait of Attorney General

By Marylyn Reeve.

The Spanish Ambassador, Señor Dr. Don Fernando de los Rios, and the Minister of Greece, Mr. Demetrios Sicilianos, both of whom are connoisseurs of art, were most enthusiastic last evening in their praise of the portrait of the Attorney General, Mr. Homer S. Cummings, by Henry R. Rittenberg when the portrait was shown for the first time at a reception given by the Attorney General and Mrs. Cummings at Ruthven, their hilltop home.

After signing the large guest book "those present" were greeted by the hostess who was wearing a gown of black chiffon fashioned with an interesting trimming of appliqued red circles; Mrs. Rittenberg, petite wife of the artist, who was attired in black velvet with chinchilla sleeves; and the artist and Mr. Cummings. At the opposite end of the room was the portrait, which was shown to advantage under indirect lighting. The picture, a three-quarters length and an excellent likeness, shows the Attorney General wearing an academic gown.

After admiring the portrait, the guests wandered into the dining room where the long table was set with an artistic arrangement of calla lilies. At one end was a large golden brown turkey and at the other end were various cakes and sandwiches. At the other side of the room was the "bar," which offered champagne, highballs, and even tomato juice!

Among those present were the Ambassador of Japan and Mme. Saito, the latter wearing black lace; Senora de los Rios, wife of the Spanish Ambassador, also chose black lace for her gown. Among those from the cabinet were Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring and the Acting Postmaster General and Mrs. W. W. Howes.

Also there were: Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, Miss Vera Bloom, who arrived early and was joined later by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sol Bloom, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Richberg, former Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. William Stanley, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bohn, the Minister of Siam and Mme. Rajamaitri, Senator and Mrs. William H. King, Mrs. Harry Baxter and Miss Betsy Dern.

Others were: Mr. J. Edgar Hoover, Mr. and Mrs. John Dickinson, the Minister of the Irish Free State, Mr. Michael MacWhite; the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close; Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Kremer, Mrs. J. J. Mack, the Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Robert Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Golden Bell, former Representative and Mrs. Fred Britten and Mrs. Vincent Morgan Miles.

Lodges Take House Famed for Historic Connections Here

Senator-elect and Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., of Massachusetts, have leased the home of Col. and Mrs. William Alexander McCain, at 3337 N street, in Georgetown, and will occupy it January 1.

This is one of the oldest and most historic houses in that section of the city. Built in 1790 by the first mayor of Georgetown, it is a beautiful example of Georgian architecture. General Lafayette and many other celebrities of the period were entertained there. The Lodges will bring their antique furniture from Boston and have leased the house for two years.

Mrs. McCain, who has been in town for a few days putting the residence in order, has rejoined her husband in Philadelphia, where he is now stationed.

Diplomats Guests At Entertainment In Cuban Embassy

The Ambassador of Great Britain and Lady Lindsay were ranking guests last evening at the dinner at which the Cuban Ambassador, Dr. Guillermo Patterson, entertained, with his daughter, Miss Olga Patterson, as hostess.

Others included in the company were the Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. Ertegun, the Minister of Finland and Mme. Jarnefelt, the Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Pastoriza, the Minister of Njcaragua and Senora de De Bayle, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom, Dr. Pedro de Alba, acting director of the Pan-American Union; Mme. Jean van Kaathoven, Mrs. Berenice Fleming Holland, the First Secretary of Embassy, Dr. Carlos Blanco; the Second Secretary of Embassy and Senora de Muxo and the Third Secretary of Embassy and Senora de Patterson.

Society Notes

Mrs. Roosevelt received at tea yesterday afternoon at the White House the newly appointed Minister of Bolivia and Senora de Guachalla and the Minister of Panama and Senora de Boyd.

The Ambassador of France and Mme. de Laboulaye will go to New York today to be guests of honor at a luncheon at which the French Teachers of America will entertain. They expect to return to Washington tomorrow.

Mme. Saito, wife of the Ambassador of Japan, will not be at home this afternoon.

The Ambassador of Italy and Signora Suvich entertained informally at dinner last evening in honor of Signor Orlando Barera, noted violinist, who, following the dinner, played several of his favorite selections. He was accompanied by Mr. Vladimir Padwa.

Representative Scott And Family Take Home.

Representative Byron N. Scott, of Long Beach, Calif., with his mother, Mrs. E. D. Scott, and sister, Miss Betty Scott, will arrive in Washington Christmas eve from their home on the West Coast.

They have taken the Gen. Chamberlain house on Jefferson place, where they will make their home for the coming session of Congress.

Representative and Mrs. C. C. Dowell, of Des Moines, Iowa, arrived in Washington yesterday and have taken an apartment at the Roosevelt Hotel for the winter. He succeeded Representative Hubert Utterback in the past election in the Sixth Congressional District in Iowa.

Representative Dowell was in Congress three years ago and at that time he and Mrs. Dowell made their home at the Roosevelt.

Tea Postponed.

The tea to have been given this afternoon by the Newspaper Women's Club in honor of Acee Blue Eagle, the well-known Indian painter, has been postponed owing to the death of George P. Hart, father of Miss Margaret Hart, president of the club.

Christmas Theme Dominant At Women's Clubs Meetings

International Festival Sponsored by Industrial Nationality Groups of the Y. W. C. A. and World Fellowship Committee Well Attended.

Christmas themes and Christmas welfare activities are very much in evidence at every meeting of Washington women's clubs and organizations this week.

Programs of Christmas music and plays, with Christmas trees, are the order of every meeting. The Washington needy will benefit by the Christmas spirit among club women, for every club seems to be collecting toys and clothing, and many encourage the children of the members to bring toys for the less fortunate children.

Yesterday Barker Hall and many of the other assembly rooms of the Y. W. C. A. Building were filled with members of Washington's business, professional, social, diplomatic and official circles for the international Christmas festival sponsored by the industrial nationality groups and the world fellowship committee. The festival began at 4 o'clock in the afternoon and lasted until midnight.

Barker Hall was transformed into an international street with a market square. Gay groups of members of the Y. W. C. A. and others interested in the work of this city-wide organization of young women sang folk songs and danced the folk dances of many nations.

Many people attended the Christmas carol program arranged by Miss Mary M. Burnett, director of music of the Y. W. C. A., in the market square at 9 o'clock.

Chairmen of the international groups taking part in the festival included Mrs. L. K. Cone, Armenian; Miss Laura Jones, British; Miss Esther Swanson, Scandinavian; Mrs. John Stathos, Greek; Miss Helen Riley, United States; Mrs. D. E. Yarnell, Japanese; Mrs. W. T. Willoughby, Chinese; Mrs. Andre Hec, French; Miss Tasia Stadnichenko, Russian, and Miss Berta Muller, German.

Christmas Carols Sung.

A group of children of the Chinese Community Church sang Christmas carols and presented a Christmas play.

Mrs. William S. Culbertson, chairman of the world fellowship committee, and Mrs. Rodney Bean, chairman of the industrial national groups, were in charge of arrangements, assisted by many committee members.

The work of the District of Columbia Girl Reserves of the Y. W. C. A. is being displayed on a huge international Christmas tree in the Y. W. C. A. lobby. This is in connection with the Girl Reserves' work being carried on in 52 countries. Among the novel articles on the tree are tiny wooden shoes, a straw reindeer, a Santa Claus of bright red yarn and other unique Christmas tree trimmings, all suggestive of the many countries in which the good work of the Girl Reserves is carried on.

The members of the Petworth Women's Club listened to an interesting illustrated lecture on "Madonnas" by Mrs. Anton Heitmiller at the meeting of the art section at the Petworth Memorial Church yesterday. Luncheon was served under the direction of a committee, of which Mrs. Virginia Perrin is chairman.

Miss Betty MacDonald Miller, educational supervisor of the Federal Art Project of the District of Columbia, spoke on Japanese Art at the meeting of the arts appreciation section of the American Association of University Women last night.

300 Dolls Dressed.

One of the busiest Santa Claus shops here is that of the Christ Child Society of the District of Columbia at the Christ Church Center, 1738 Connecticut avenue northwest. The members of the organization are busily carrying on their work to bring Christmas joy to "neglected and forgotten" children of Washington. Each member of the organization assumes the responsibility of answering the appeal of at least one child.

This year the Christ Child Center is presided over by the youngest member of the organization. This includes Mrs. F. X. Callahan, Miss Katherine Tumulty, Miss Stellita Stapleton, Mlle. de Laboulaye, Mrs. Louis Watkins, Miss Letitia Emery, Mrs. Daniel O'Donoghue, jr., Mrs. Louis Peek, jr., Miss Mary Callaghan, Mrs. Frederick Altemus and Mrs. Albert Cahill.

The Ladies Auxiliary of the D. C. Dental Society will hold a memorial silver tea on Sunday at 1326 Massachusetts avenue northwest, from 4 to 7 p. m., in memory of the founder, Mrs. Alden Scott Wolfe. The society maintains a dental clinic at Children's Hospital. The commissioners of the District of Columbia and their wives as well as other District civic officials will attend. Mrs. Melvin Hazen and Mrs. Willard Camelier will preside at the tea table.

The students of the Sidwell Friends School will hold their annual Christmas dance tonight. The dance is sponsored by the Student Council. In the receiving line will be Headmaster and Mrs. Albert E. Rogers, Miss T. O'Sullivan, Miss Helen Zartman, Mr. William B. Alexander 5th, president of the Student Council, and Miss Roberta King.

MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

Doubtful Games.

South should have been in a game contract in today's hand. His obvious losers—once the dummy went down—were two spades, a heart, and a club. But it is difficult to say what was wrong with the bidding. If South's club and spade holdings were exchanged, he would have a lay-down game. There was no way for either of the partners to find out about the "fit" in the black suits and under such circumstances good players will always bid game. Their theory (and a good one, too) is that if they make half of the games they bid, they will show a larger profit in the long run than if they play all such hands at lower-than-game contracts.

But it doesn't pay to bid doubtful games unless you can play the cards well. Note what happened to South in the hand below.

North, dealer.

North: ♠ A 7 4 3 ♡ A 8 6 4 ◇ A K 10 4 ♣ 10

West: ♠ K 10 8 6 ♡ K J 7 5 ◇ 8 ♣ A 9 6 4

East: ♠ Q 9 ♡ 2 ◇ 9 7 6 2 ♣ Q J 7 5 3 2

South: ♠ J 5 2 ♡ Q 10 9 3 ◇ Q J 8 5 ♣ K 8

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Double
Pass	Pass	Pass

Had another player been in the South seat, West might not have doubled. But West knew that declarer was a bold bidder so that the contract might well be an ambitious one; that he was not an expert player, so that he might very easily co-operate in his own defeat; and that a redouble was practically out of the question, so that his own loss because of the double could not be very great.

This was excellent reasoning and displayed a shrewd appraisal of South's ability. Such tactics and psychology, other factors being equal, make for the difference between a winning and a losing session.

For his opening lead, West chose the six of spades. His first plan was to force declarer rather than to try for diamond ruffs. Dummy ducked and East won with the Queen of spades. His return of the nine was covered by South's Jack, West's King, and dummy's Ace.

At this point South embarked on some sort of nebulous cross-ruff and decided to cash two top diamonds. But West ruffed the second diamond and led the eight of spades. East ruffed with his lone trump and led a third round of diamonds. West used his other low trump and cashed the Ace of clubs. Later on he made a trump trick to set declarer three tricks!

Had declarer drawn trumps at once, of couse, he could have been set only one trick.

The Federal Diary

By Samuel Lubell.

Inventions.

The inventive genius of Government workers seems particularly active these days, half a dozen inventions having been called to the Diary's attention recently.

Brooks A. Brice, associate physicist in Agriculture's Food and Drug Administration, has just received a patent on a photoelectric cell instrument that can be used with photometers and colorimeters to get direct readings of light intensity. The instrument was first devised to assist in the grading of rosins, but has since been applied to measure the appearance of granulated sugars.

Of a similar nature is the new reflectometer to measure the whiteness of paints and pigments by the amount of light reflected, devised by Richard S. Hunter, on leave of absence from the Bureau of Standards. A. D. Edgar, of the Bureau of Agricultural Engineering, is the man principally responsible for the bureau's improved potato-storage house—a protected wall surface collects the condensed moisture, preventing the wood in the house from rotting and reducing the shrinkage of potatoes—while William V. Hukill, also with Agricultural Engineering, has Edisoned a new anemometer that measures the velocity of gases and fluids. More sensitive than any previous anemometer, Hukill's device will record the movement of gases and fluids at the snail's rate of 6 feet per minute.

Arnold K. Balls and T. L. Swenson, also with Agriculture, have received a second patent on their processes for the alteration of egg-white. At the War Department, Bureau of Ordnance, Craftsman F. K. Howard has devised a trigger mechanism for machine guns which allows the trigger to be worked from the side, retaining the automatic qualities of the present trigger. The side trigger, Howard explains, lessens the recoil.

AFGE President Col. Charles I. Stengle will accompany the dismissal committee of the WPA, Resettlement and Agriculture lodges when they meet with WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins or his representative, probably next week. Stengle will press particularly for the extension of civil service to employes in the agencies affected, and, if possible, for research projects for the dismissed employes.

Dear Santa.

How does it feel to be a Santa Claus? You'll have to wait until tomorrow to learn, for today's column was written before we left for the Social Security Board Union's party last night. Anything may have happened since then—we'd list some of these possibilities, but merely thinking of them sends shivers down our spine.

Regardless of what happened last night, we promise to carry on the tradition of the stage that the show must go on, and so tonight your diaryist will appear at the Agriculture Lodge, No. 31, dance at the Hayloft and the open meeting of the Securities and Exchange Commission Union. Surprises are in store for all toy and doll fund contributors, so don't forget your toys and dolls. (When the "surprise" hour comes those who haven't brought their "t" and "d's" will be curtly informed that there "ain't no Santa Claus.")

Tomorrow night's toy fund parties seem to be progressing splendidly. At the Railroad Retirement Board Lydia Cohen is painting dolls; Dorothy Bailey, of Labor, has gotten Ellen Lewis (who has quite a pull with the baker boys) to aid her in the hunt for Santa's strawberry shortcake, while the Agriculture ARA reports swell ticket sales for their dance.

Civil service qualifying exams for REA employes are to be staggered through January according to present plans. In the meantime REA workers are conducting "cramming classes."

Postals.

Leonard Kemp has indicated he will accept a nomination for reelection as president of Commerce Lodge, No. 9. His most likely progressive opponent will be Dr. Walter L. Slifer, of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Slifer taught labor relations at Butler University for several years . . . His Ph. D. thesis was on a history of mining legislation . . .

The Civil Service Commission is accepting applications until January 11 for associate entomologist, $3,200 a year; assistant entomologist, $2,600 a year, both with the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, and assistant librarian with the Department of Labor, $2,600 a year . . . Four or five additional employes will be taken on in the next two months in the business division of the REA to round out the staff required by REA's new uniform system of accounts . . .

—Agriculture Graduate School is distributing its spring semester announcements . . . "Typortrait" is what Joel F. Webber, of the Federal Writers Project, calls his new type of sketch. The portrait is done on a typewriter. Webber has already made sketches of President Roosevelt, Mrs. Simpson and himself—the last typortrait is to serve as a frontispiece for a book Webber is writing.

Zoo Director William Mann will conduct a tour through the Zoo on Sunday. To get in on the tour, telephone National 2520, extension 1393, before tomorrow noon . . . Dr. Mann took us through the Zoo once, and words fail us to describe his par excellence guiding.

Appeals Court Refuses To Lift 'Pin Ball' Bar

The United States Court of Appeals, late yesterday refused to issue an injunction "pendente lite" which would have stayed enforcement of a permanent restraining order barring "pin ball" machines as games of chance issued last week by Justice Daniel W. O'Donghue in District Court.

Attorneys representing pin ball machine owners asked the Appellate Court to grant a temporary stay of the order pending a final hearing on the appeal. This the higher court refused to do, so that the machines will stay under official ban at least until the Appeals tribunal has reviewed the case. Under normal procedure that will be many months hence.

GobelCo. Sues For $150,000 On Abattoir

Commissioners Named in Suit Charging a 'Conspiracy.'

Building Permit for New Plant Merited, Firm Declares.

Charging the three District Commissioners with having set afoot a "conspiracy" to block erection of an abattoir in Benning the Adolf Gobel Co., meat packers, yesterday in District Court filed suit against the Commissioners for $150,000 damages.

Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen, George E. Allen and Dan I. Sultan were named defendants for money damages, and John W. Oehmann, inspector of buildings; Wade H. Coombs, superintendent of licenses, and George C. Ruhland, health officer, were cited for failing to perform their duty and have the necessary permits for the abattoir.

The suit charged the Commissioners "unlawfully confederated, conspired and agreed to instruct the defendant inspector of buildings to withhold the issuance of said general permit for the completion of renovation of plaintiff's plant and did so instruct said inspector * * * with the result that said defendants * * * have and still unlawfully neglect and refuse to issue to plaintiff such general permit."

The company, through Attorneys D. Edward Clarke and W. Gwynn Gardiner, a former District Commissioner, estimated there had been a profit loss of $100,000 through inability to get the plant in operation and that in addition there had been a heavy drain on the company's treasury through contracts entered into when the foundation work was started and completed.

Traces Case's History.

The suit traced the history of attempts of the Gobel company to start up its plant after it was razed by fire two years ago. When it was sought to build a new plant, the plans were sent to the Department of Agriculture, where approval was obtained, and preliminary permits were obtained from the District.

The company, seeking to erect four buildings, each to be three stories high, said it had complied with every requirement of the District and had even agreed to numerous changes that were beyond the pale of the authorities. All this was done to gain good will, it was stated.

Under the law, the complaint added, it was the ministerial duty of the commissioners to issue the permits. They were without discretion in the matter, since the building code had been complied with, as was attested by approval of the various bureaus in the Municipal Building.

After the Commissioners had been sued two months ago for the mandatory issuance of a permit, a committee, composed of Dr. Ruhland, Vernon E. West, principal assistant corporation counsel; Hugh P. Oram, director of inspection, and J. B. Gordon, director of sanitary engineering, was made up and was directed to look into the matter. The committee found six technical errors in the plans and specifications and these were met by the Gobel firm by adoption of corrections.

Holds Permit Merited.

The plaintiff is "legally and equitably entitled" to the permits and has "in law * * * the legal right to demand to have issued to it a permit for the operation of said plant, and the renewal for the occupancy permit for the continuance of said plant as an abattoir and slaughter house * * * and said commissioners are without legal right or authority to withhold issuing of same."

Erection of the plant would be in the immediate vicinity of a well-developed parks area now nearing completion by the Government. It is looked upon as a recreational development.

Informed of the suit late yesterday, Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal declared the court action was "groundless."

"The Gobel concern is not entitled to a permit until all building and plumbing regulations have been complied with," he said. "Thus far, these regulations have not been complied with, and the Commissioners therefore are not liable for damages until the regulations are obeyed."

Lohr Will Discuss Art in Advertising

George Lohr, director of the George Lohr illustration studios, will speak before the Advertising Club in the Willard Hotel at 8:15 o'clock tonight on "Pictures and Type." His lecture will be the fifth in a series.

James W. Hardey, chairman of the lecture committee, announced yesterday the talk is free to students and all interested in better advertising. Tickets may be obtained at the hotel.

Lohr will discuss various phases of art, layout, typography and illustration. A native of Woodstock, Va., Lohr studied at the Corcoran Art School here for three years. After working for a time at interior decoration designing he practiced commercial art in Worcester and Boston, Mass. Quake in Manila.

Manila, (Friday), Dec. 18 (AP).—An earthquake shook Manila at 12:21 p. m. today. No damage was reported in an early check-up on the effects of the temblor.

Christmas Boxes For Poor Children Are Robbed Here

The man who shot Santa Claus has meaner rivals.

Several boxes in which the Board of Public Welfare was collecting what it hoped would exceed $1,500 for Christmas parties for dependent children and wayward boys and girls were discovered to have been broken into yesterday, and looted of most of their contents.

The board had placed the boxes in the several departments of the District Government in the District Building. Employes had been dropping their money into them for days, and the gay tinselled colors of the boxes, with their holiday motif, seemed to reflect cheer and happiness.

Yesterday the boxes were opened. Four of them had been broken into, and their contents filched. The thieves had sought to avoid suspicion by leaving a few silver coins in each box.

Luther W. High in Appeal Claims Law Violates Constitution.

The constitutionality of the Virginia milk-control act was challenged in the Supreme Court yesterday by the Highland Farms Dairy and Luther W. High, Washington retail milk dealer.

Appealing from a District Court decision denying an injunction against enforcement of the act, High's attorneys contended that the act violates the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution.

Highland Farms Dairy operates a milk depot here, buying from producers in Maryland, Virginia and in the District. It entire milk supply is sold to High, who operates a chain of retail stores.

The Virginia Milk Commission's orders fixing a minimum price for milk have affected High's stores in Arlington and Alexandria. The act set up a milk control board, with authority to fix prices and to regulate marketing in any milkshed area in the State where a majority of producers asked for such action.

In their brief, the appellants said that the District Court, in denying the injunction, erred in holding the control act a proper exercise of the police powers of the State and in failing to hold the act invalid as an improper delegation of legislative power to the State milk commission.

The brief also claimed that the District Court erred in not judging that the powers conferred upon the commission involved a denial of equal protection of laws and a denial of due process, in contravention of the fourteenth amendment, and in not ruling that the milk act and rules and regulations adopted by the milk commission were invalid because they constituted interference with interstate commerce by the State.

Berry Denies Plan For Revived NRA

Industry Co-ordinator George L. Berry yesterday issued a denial of published reports that his Council for Industrial Progress is seeking to revive the "Frankenstein of NRA" or to create a new one.

Saying he believed it would be a "real catastrophe to the country" to "repeat the errors," Berry asserted that the council's program "provides for business regulation by rules laid down by law, enforcement by normal court procedure, and administration mostly left up to industry."

He said also "there is now no need for emergency legislation, such as the recovery act," and added that the council objective would be carried out under the existing antitrust laws.

Berry made public at the same time the membership of the correlating committee that will prepare for President Roosevelt the eight reports of council committees.

New Juvenile Court Plans To Be Pushed

Nichols Will Introduce Controversial Measure Early in Session.

Oklahoman Says Study, Hearings Will Not Be Required.

The Norton-Copeland juvenile court bill, which stirred up a city-wide controversy last year, will be reintroduced as one of the first District bills in the 75th Congress and pressed for early enactment, Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, said yesterday.

Now in process of revision to meet some of the more substantial objections of Washington citizens, the measure should be ready for consideration by the House District Committee almost immediately after the session opens.

Nichols, who held hearings last year as chairman of a sub-committee, said he saw no necessity for further investigations or public discussion of the bill, which is designed to modernize Washington's obsolete juvenile court procedure and shift it from the status of a criminal court to a chancery tribunal.

Complaints Under Oath.

Among principal changes agreed upon by the subcommittee and now being made in the bill are:

All complaints by welfare workers or others must be made under oath.

Jury trials shall be allowed upon demand of any interested party.

Ample opportunities will be given for appeals from rulings of the Juvenile Court judge.

Records Public.

Records of all court actions, as well as petitions and other legal documents, will be made available for examination by the public.

The measure is an outgrowth of years of study by social welfare workers and is modeled after laws in the more progressive States. It was introduced at the request of the League of Women Voters and has the indorsement of the District Bar Association.

All children under 18 years of age, charged with certain offenses, will become subject to jurisdiction of the Juvenile Court if the bill becomes a law.

Judge Scott Guest At Bar Testimonial

Judge Armond W. Scott, of the Municipal Court, was honor guest at a testimonial dinner last night at the Twelfth Street Young Men's Christian Association. The dinner was sponsored by the Washington Bar Association, composed of colored attorneys, with William L. Houston, president.

Henry Lincoln Johnson, jr., toastmaster, read felicitations from President Roosevelt.

"When you gather with other friends and admirers of Judge Armond W. Scott at the dinner this evening, please extend to the guest of honor my hearty felicitations. Judge Scott is the type of jurist and citizen whose usefulness to the community it is a pleasure to recognize. I trust that the dinner in his honor will be a most enjoyable success."

Belford V. Lawson, jr., was introduced as principal speaker, Judge Scott responding to his address on "The Challenge of the Bar," by indicating how, in a measure, that challenge has been met.

Other guest speakers included Judge Nathan Cayton, of the Municipal Court; Judge Charles E. Toney, of the Municipal Court, New York; Judge Edward W. Henry, of the Magistrate's Court, Philadelphia; Judge Miles A. Paige, of the Magistrate's Court, New York; Judge Edward M. Curran, of the Police Court; Judge W. C. Hueston, Judge James A. Cobb, Dean William E. Taylor, of the Howard University school of law; Dean George A. Parker, of the Robert H. Terrell school of law; Maj. Campbell C. Johnson, and Josiah Henry, president of the Monumental City Bar Association.

Policeman Gains Hero-Medal; Honored Second Time in 5 Yrs.

For the second time in five years, annual awards for heroism in the Metropolitan Police Department, announced yesterday by the District Commissioners, included the name of Policeman Earl L. Baker, First Precinct detective.

Baker headed this year's list of three awards with a gold medal. In 1931 he received the department's bronze bar for meritorious service. Others named yesterday were Privates Robert T. Talbert, Sixth Precinct, silver medal, and William P. Doran, Sixth Precinct, bronze bar. There were no awards in the Fire Department.

A midnight gun battle in October, 1935, won top honors for Baker. He shot and killed a would-be robber, frustrating a holdup of the Blue Bell Cafe, 2335 Bladensburg road northeast.

Pursued Bandit.

The bandit fled to a waiting automobile. Baker started in pursuit. The chase led to the Maryland State line where the bandit, later identified as Morris C. Beck, about 27, was found lying in the roadway. He later died in Casualty Hospital.

Baker first proved himself a hero in September, 1930. He used an ironing board to enter the second floor of an S street house where a young man had threatened to kill his sweetheart and two members of his family. He placed the ironing board on the windowsill of an adjacent house, lowered one end to an opposite window and crawled across. He surprised the man and disarmed him.

Awarded Silver Medal.

Private Talbert was awarded the silver medal for capturing Charles F. Hisey after he shot and killed Miss Virgie Lyttle in a rooming house in the 400 block of Rittenhouse street northwest. When Talbert entered the house in answer to a shooting alarm, he met Hisey standing at the top of a flight of stairs. Hisey shot once and struck Talbert in the arm. Talbert, his citation showed, grabbed the armed man, threw him down the stairs and held him until aid arrived.

To win the bronze bar, Private Doran, without help, arrested three men who later proved to be heavily armed and wanted in connection with a robbery. He accosted the men on the street late at night, placed them in his own car and took them to the precinct station.

The award committee also considered five Fire Department cases of outstanding service, but decided circumstances did not merit award presentations.

Renewing agitation which has continued intermittently since 1908, the chief of the National Guard Bureau yesterday recommended an appropriation by Congress to build a suitable armory for the District National Guard.

The District Guard is the only unit of its kind of which the President is commander-in-chief in peacetime.

In his annual report to Secretary of War Woodring, Maj. Gen. Albert H. Blanding placed that need seventh in a summarized list of ten recommendations affecting the entire Nation.

It gave fresh hope to Col. John W. Oehmann, commanding officer of the District militia, who has been trying to obtain adequate housing facilities for the organization ever since he joined it in 1899. Col. Oehmann is municipal building inspector.

Blames "Buck Passing."

"For years we've been trying to get an armory," he said, upon being informed of the emphasis given the proposed project in the national annual report. "But with all the red tape and buck passing we've gotten nowhere.

"In 1908, an armory commission was created by Congress to prepare plans and estimates. It made a report, but nothing came of it. Every few years bills are introduced on the Hill, but nothing happens.

"Now the plans are being shunted back and forth among Secretary Ickes (Interior Department), the President's committee studying fiscal relations between the District and Federal governments, and the Budget Bureau.

"The PWA allotted more than $1,000,000 to rebuild the Fifth Regiment armory in Baltimore after it was damaged by fire but we could not get anything. Every unit in Maryland and Virginia has its armory. It seems everyone agrees Washington should have one but—well, it's like people pitying the blind man holding a tin cup but neglecting to drop a coin."

Condemned Building is "Armory."

Since 1930 the home of the District National Guard has been the condemned brick and wood building at Sixth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest that used to be the National Hotel.

Last night militiamen drilled in a one-time dining room, whose small size and supporting posts that get in the way are the pet peeves of Commander Oehmann. For want of anything better, they assembled in narrow corridors and on stairway landings.

They put on and took off their equipment in rooms which, according to Col. Peyton G. Nevitt, assistant adjutant general, contain about twice as many lockers as they should.

An inspection of the five-story structure, which is a century and a quarter old, revealed dilapidated corridors, ceilings from which much of the plaster has fallen, and other signs of advanced age.

The rooms which are used for class instruction, offices, supplies, etc., and which number 280 altogether, were neatly kept but practically all of them, according to Col. Nevitt, are overcrowded and in poor, even dangerous condition.

Catch the Rain.

In some of them, tubs are set out when it rains.

Approximately 1,200 enlisted men and 100 officers, the existing strength of the District National Guard, use the building. Its facilities also are available on frequent occasions to the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, shooting clubs (there are two target galleries) and other organizations.

Last night it was the turn of the 260th Coast Artillery to use the drillroom. Other nights the erstwhile dining hall is taken over by the 121st Engineers, a battalion of the 104th Quartermaster Regiment or special troops of the 29th Division.

About eight years ago bills were introduced in House and Senate providing that the old Pension Office Building, which now houses the General Accounting Office be turned into an armory. In recent years due largely to studies initiated by the Interior Department, a movement has arisen to build the armory at the foot of of East Capitol street in conjunction with a municipal stadium.

The Whipping Post Urged by Mattingly For Drunk Drivers

The whipping post may be the only punishment to mete out to criminally reckless and drunken drivers, Judge Robert E. Mattingly, of the Municipal Court, told the American Automobile Association's Women's Safety Club, in a meeting at the Sulgrave Club yesterday.

"I have almost come to the conclusion that the whipping post is the only thing that will clear the situation," asserted Judge Mattingly. "They have whipping posts in Canada and Delaware, and you don't hear of much crime being committed there.

"There must be no compunction shown in meting out justice to criminally reckless drivers. I would rather try hit-and-run, drunken driving and 50-and-60-mile speeding cases than to eat turkey on Christmas Day."

Police Absolved Of Bootleg Link

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau yesterday denied Washington police are involved in an investigation of a bootleg ring in Baltimore.

Admitting the ring's activities may ramify into several big cities, he declared Washington is in no way implicated, any reports to the contrary notwithstanding.

Morgenthau stated that two separate investigations of liquor agents in Baltimore were under way simultaneously. One concerns personnel in the office there, the other concerns operations of bootleggers in 1934.

A third matter he mentioned was printed charges that the Treasury is suppressing 13 affidavits charging 13 Washington police with liquor law graft. He said the 13 cases had been thoroughly investigated by the Department of Justice in 1934 and for lack of evidence had been dropped.

Southeastern Alumni Maps Luncheon Series

More than 150 members attended the first of a series of luncheon meetings organized by the Southeastern University Alumni Association at the Raleigh Hotel yesterday, at which Dr. James A. Bell, president of the university, presided.

A talk on the work of association was made by August H. Moran. The lunch meetings will be held regularly in the future on the third Thursday of each month.

Bill for Death Of Red Rider Slated Early

Repeal Measure May Go to House on First District Day.

Liberals Reported Favoring Quick Passage of Measure.

A bill to repeal the "little red rider" may become No. 1 measure on the District calendar on the House and so be voted upon on the first District day, which should occur January 18, House members sponsoring it said yesterday.

Despite the statement of Speaker Bankhead that more important legislation should be considered first, House liberals pointed out that the District is entitled under House rules to the first and third Monday of each calendar month in the House.

Consequently, unless either members of the House District Committee tie up the bill in committee or House leaders cancel the District day as they did many last year, the long-delayed vote should occur at least early in the session.

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, who headed the sub-committee that reported the bill favorably last session, already has prepared for prompt action by sending the measure to the House bill clerk for introduction immediately after Congress convenes.

A small group of House Liberals are organized to work for speedy passage. While opposition is expected, sponsors believe there will be no filibuster against the legislation as there was last session.

It was recalled yesterday that Speaker Bankhead last year promised members backing the bill that if they would not press for action then he would assure them an early opportunity at the next session.

He was reported to have said that a vote last session might embarrass many Southern members in the fall elections, but that members would not have to fear reprisals at the beginning of a new term.

Card Rule Bars Vanderbilt, Jr., From El Patio

Matt Windsor Is Preparing New Cycle of Russian Entertainment.

By Chanticleer.

They tell this one at the Carlton to prove that card admission to El Patio (the Carlton's nightery) is decidedly in effect. It seems that Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr., was barred by the head waiter on a recent evening. He graciously accepted the captain's verdict and proceeded along the conventional lines of applying for one through a friend.

Matt Windsor has been doing a work marathon, getting ready for a complete new cycle of Russian entertainment. Most of the more popular of the present cast have been held over for at least another two weeks. And new acts are being brought in as well. All Host Windsor does these days is manage the restaurant activities, supervise the orchestra, direct the revues, hire and fire and be on hand day and night to greet the guests.

Strikers Boost Picketing Lines On All Fronts

By the Associated Press.

Strikers sent new men to the picket lines yesterday.

The picket force was doubled at the Kelsey-Hayes Co. in Detroit. A walkout at two of the firm's plants there has affected 5,000 wheel workers. Others appeared at the factory of National Auto Fibres, Inc., producers of floor mats, cushions and upholstery.

The seamen's strike strategy committee said there would be mass picketing today along the New York, Brooklyn and Hoboken water fronts in an effort to persuade longshoremen to join the maritime strike.

Peacemakers moved further toward settlement of the shipping stalemate on the Pacific Coast. Harry Lundeberg, spokesman for a sailors union, said he expected to put the terms of a complete accord before his followers today. He indicated representatives of marine firemen and shipowners had reached an agreement on all major issues in the 49-day deadlock.

Some 14,000 persons idling in the labor controversy with the Libbey-Owens-Ford and Pittsburgh Plate Glass companies turned their attention to Washington. There, John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, arranged a conference with the heads of the automobile and flat glass workers unions affiliated with his group. The parley, scheduled for yesterday, was postponed until today when the union leaders were delayed by poor flying conditions.

Six hundred strikers remained out at the Aluminum Co. of America plant at Detroit and 106 bus drivers continued their walkout at Flint, Mich. "Sit down" strikers variously estimated at 600 to 1,000 rested at the Fisher body branch at Kansas City. Operations at that plant and the adjacent Chevrolet factory were suspended. A strike resulted in the closing of the John B. Stetson Hat Co. at Philadelphia.

But the return of approximately 25 per cent of the employes who walked out of the Kelsey Wheel Co., Ltd., at Windsor, Ontario, Wednesday enabled the management to resume activities yesterday.

Dean Lloyd K. Garrison, of the University of Wisconsin Law School, reported an "unshakable deadlock" persisted at the J. I. Case Co. at Racine. He served as an observer for Gov. Philip La Follette in the protracted strike.

Ex-D. C. Newsman Is Dead in Alabama

Williams resigned from the Associated Press in 1929, due to ill health.

He was born in Columbia, Ala., May 12, 1887. During the World War he served overseas as an Army captain.

He is survived by his wife, the former Miss Mamie Tarver, of Americus.

National Guard Short Of Allotted Manpower

Maj. Gen. Albert H. Blanding, chief of the National Guard Bureau of the War Department, said yesterday in his annual report that the National Guard in Virginia as of June 30 was 137 below allotted strength, according to the Associated Press.

The actual strength of the National Guard in the State at the end of the year was 289 commissioned officers, 4 warrant officers and 3,590 enlisted men, he reported to Secretary Woodring. In the remainder of the Third Corps Area, Pennsyvania was 306 under allotted strength, Maryland 49 under, and the District of Columbia 45 under.

President of Cuba Opposes Sugar Tax

Havana, Dec. 17 (AP).—Cuba's army leaders, with their strong man, Col. Fulgencio Batista, kept abed by illness, tonight pressed their fight for passage of a $1,500,000 sugar tax bill in the face of presidential opposition.

There were few informed observers who doubted that the army would eventually win its battle to obtain funds for army-taught rural schools.

A number of national representatives and senators met "informally" with Maj. Jaime Marine, chief of army adjutants, at Camp Columbia today. The best-informed observers said the sugar tax itself was becoming a secondary thing and, instead, there were signs of an open fight between the military and the congressmen, on one side, and President Miguel Mariano Gomez on the other.

Ouster Issue Shunned By Frank, La Follette

Madison, Wis., Dec. 17 (AP).—No mention of the ouster proceedings against President Glenn Frank of the University of Wisconsin was made at a meeting between the university head and Gov. Philip La Follette today.

Instead the conference concerned only facts and figures for the university's biennium budget. The move to replace President Frank was instituted yesterday by a regent appointed by Gov. La Follette. Two members of the regents' executive committee which will set a date for Dr. Frank's removal hearing on six charges preferred by Board President Harold M. Wilkie were present.

November Relief Expense $181,269

A total of $181,269 was spent last month for all types of District relief cases except work projects, according to a report yesterday by Elwood Street, board of public welfare director.

Street said this was 23 per cent less than was expended during the same month last year. Cases last month numbered 5,716, he said. Expenditures were allocated as follows:

Dependent children, 1,033, $49,227; home cases, 261, $16,784; old age, 1,174 cases, $29,629; needy blind, 84, $2,013, and direct relief, 3,164 cases, $83,616.

The month, Street said, saw 6,518 persons in the direct relief case load. The average payment in each case was $26.433 and $12.83 per person per month.

On the Air Today

For the first time since its inception in 1928, the "Music Appreciation Hour" with Walter Damrosch is being changed in its presentation. Today (WMAL, at 2) will see the introduction of dramatizations of famous events in musical history.

Dr. Damrosch, N. B. C.'s music counsel, will be heard as an actor! Dr. Damrosch has long felt that pertinent incidents from the lives and times of the great composers would help listeners understand the circumstances under which the music was composed and at the same time fix the compositions themselves more firmly in their minds.

For the first half of today's new venture the incident chosen for dramatization is the first performance of Handel's Water Music on the Thames River in July, 1717.

The second half hour will dramatize the historic dinner party given by Beethoven to his friend, Johann Maelzel, inventor of the metronome.

Two new "twin stars" will be heard in the program of that name after January 1. Rosemary Brancato and Helen Claire will be replaced by Victor Moore and Helen Broderick which seems to augur of new days in the field of air comedy. They appear in radio together for the first time although each has been a favorite of Broadway theater audiences and in pictures.

Here and there: Willard Farnum, who collapsed on the Sunday, December 6, broadcast of "Tale of Today," has been advised by his doctor to take several weeks vacation and has gone to Florida. His part will be written out of the play until his return . . . John Charles Thomas is reported on the verge of signing a new air contract . . . Judy, Anne and Zeke Canova will have top billing on the new series replacing the present Whiteman period.

More here and there: Buddy Rogers and his orchestra will background the new "Twin Stars" show referred to above . . . Allen Prescott, the "Wife Saver," moves to a Columbia network, beginning January 13. Also to be heard on the new series will be Jimmy Wilkinson, who began his air career here in Washington. Wilkinson will be known as the "Serenader," with Oswald at the piano.

• • • •

Features today:

"Der Freischutz"—Third act of von Weber's opera will be shortwaved from Leipzig commemorating 150th anniversary of the composer's birth, WMAL, at 3:15.

"Boar's Head and Yule Log"—Pageant in the medieval English manner fills "Radio Guild" period, WMAL, at 4. From Episcopal Hoosac School, Hoosick, N. Y.

Carols—Ford Bond show, WMAL, at 7:15, features "Holly and the Ivy," "O Little Town of Bethlehem" and "God Rest Ye Merry Gentlemen."

Andre Kostelanetz—And orchestra in one of his final Friday night programs features "Organ Grinder's Swing," via Cuban arrangement, and the rhumba, "Cubanacan," WJSV, at 6:30.

Sonja Henie—Skating champ, and Adolph Menjou in prevue from their new flicker, "On in a Million," WJSV, at 9, "Hollywood Hotel." Also Arlene Judge, Ritz Brothers and Borrah Minnevitch.

"First Nighter"—Presents "Don't Count Ten," with Don Ameche, WRC, at 10.

Lucille Manners—And Casper Reardon, swing harpist, guest in "Court of Honor," WMAL, at 10. Also Edith Dick, popular songstress.

The air will be filled from now on with Christmas music. Carols and special singing groups are being scheduled right and left. The full swing probably will be reached by Sunday.

Manhattan Cocktail.

CELEBRATION: Last September Harpo Marx sent a birthday present to his brother Gummo, the theatrical agent. It consisted of a $50 gift order on Saks-Fifth avenue . . . Last month, when Harpo announced his marriage to Susan Fleming, Gummo sent him a wedding present. It was the same gift order, except that it was for $45 . . . "After all," was Agent Gummo's message of explanation, "you're not going to deny me the usual commission."

EASE: William Randolph Hearst, who fought the Newspaper Guild strike in Seattle recently, attended last night's premiere of Lillian Hellman's "Days to Come." The play concerns strikes and strike breakers . . . During the first act Hearst sat in his second-row seat and watched the strike play unfold . . . For the second act he changed his seat to row H and settled back comfortably—unaware that directly behind him sat Heywood Broun—president of the Newspaper Guild.

CHARITY: The other day a meeting was held at Madison Square Garden to raise funds for the Loyalist defense of Spain . . . Roger Baldwin, who presided, announced to the audience that he had just received a contribution of $1,000 from a gentleman who favored the cause but whose name couldn't be revealed . . . The anonymous contributor to the anti-Fascist Defense Fund was Corliss Lamont.

ROMANCE: Baron Giorgio Suriani, president of the Noblemen's Club, called a meeting of this organization last week-end at Laurel-in-the-Pines. The purpose of the meeting was to consider the activities of King Edward with relation to the Simpson case—and to announce their regal opinion to the world . . . "The Duke of Windsor," was Barton Suriani's statement, in behalf of his noble colleague, "is a fool and a coward for renouncing royalty in favor of a commoner" Whereupon the Baron immediately returned to New York to announce his own engagement to Miss Audrey Birschy—of New Jersey!

SAFETY: The other day William Carney of the New York Times wrote an eight-column report of his observations in Madrid. He attacked the Loyalist Government—a bitter attack, in which he pointed out that wherever he went in Madrid mysterious Spaniards dogged his footsteps day and night. He just didn't feel safe—with terrorists ever on his trail . . . Another Madrid correspondent, who just returned here, now reveals the truth. In Loyalist ranks Carney was ranked high among the Government enemies—because of his writings. And the two mysterious Spaniards who trailed him day and night were bodyguards assigned by the Government—to see that no harm befell him!

In HOLLYWOOD With Jimmy Fiddler

Hollywood, Dec. 17.

I have about reached the conclusion that nothing can be done about the hysteria which sweeps certain types of fans at sight of movie actors. No star today dares live a normal, private life. Time was when Wallace Reid and Rudolph Valentino played at the beaches and other public resorts as do ordinary mortals, but that time has passed. Let Robert Taylor and Barbara Stanwyck stick their pretty noses into a public function today, and likely they will lose them. Lose their noses, I mean.

GINGER ROGERS.

No few readers have written letters panning me because I have criticised what I term "summer tourists" who crowd into Hollywood yearning to meet stars in person. It is not the normal visitor I criticize. The fault I pick is with the tourist who sidles up to Clark Gable and makes away with his hat as a souvenir, or the visitor who nabs Ginger Roger's handbag.

• • • •

I am convinced that such actions are prompted not so much by star-worship as by the same sort of morbid curiosity that sends crowds to scenes of fatal accidents.

• • • •

Add curious movie jobs, that of Charles Oelze, whose task is as odd as his name. He works for the Hal Roach studios, and his stint is to think up new play-gadgets common to kids, for use in "Our Gang" comedies. For instance, he recently made a cannon, using an old stove pipe and two wagon wheels. The darn thing catapults old shoes and tin cans, and it belches smoke like grandpa's corncob.

• • • •

Oelze has been on this job for years. At first he made a practice of following his young son, snitching ideas from neighborhood boys. Today the son is in his 'teens and holds the job of chief assistant gadget designer.

It is my guess that you would be shocked right out of your Sunday clothes were I to name off a score of actresses who wear wigs. Don't get excited. I am not going to do it, because I might thus give birth to a flock of false rumors. But I breach no etiquette when I tell you that fully a score of our beautiful ladies wear wigs during working hours, and it is not because they need them. The actresses put them on with their make-up mornings, remove them with their make-up evenings. The wigs are so well made they look like the McCoy, and use of them saves wear and tear of the stars' own hair. Of course, it is harvest time for local wigmakers, who are working night and day to turn out "transformations" to fill the suddenly aroused demand.

Walter Huston Proves Self the Perfect Exponent of His Profession; Herbert Mundin Is on Way to Earle

The Star of Shakespeare's 'Othello,' at the National, Submits Himself to a Hectic Day in and Out of the Playhouse: Mr. Mundin, That Amusing British Comic, Will Be Here the Week of the New Year; Do your Christmas Shoplifting Earlier Than Usual.

IF THIS column were called upon—which it happily is not—to cast a vote for the most amiable, most companionable and least arrogated to a specious grandeur of all the actors occupying places of distinction upon the contemporary American stage, its ballot without hesitation or equivocation would be cast in behalf of that eminent Thespian, Mr. Walter Huston, who this week is to be seen on the stage of the National Theater in the role of Othello in Master Will Shakespeare's tragic play of the same name.

BELL.

Take yesterday for an example. At the behest of George W. Stimpson, president of the National Press Club, this column served as the clumsy guide for Mr. Huston to the luncheon given in compliment to the Honorable Sir Herbert Marler, Minister of Canada to the United States. We were, perhaps, a bit late in getting there, but Mr. Huston, being a native of Toronto, Ontario, was intensely interested in all that was said by Minister Marler concerning his Dominion's viewpoint toward the rest of the world.

Perfectly frankly, following the festivities at the Press Club, we did our utmost to interest Mr. Huston in a Scotch and Soda, but that was no dice! Instead, he manifested a superior sort of intelligence by wishing to meet some of the editorial staff of your favorite paper, The Washington Post. So we came up here and a pleasant time was had by all.

After that this genial fellow had nothing whatever to do but rehearse Brian Aherne as Iago in "Othello" for the impending engagement of the tragedy in New York, where it will open, I think, on January 6.

Robert Keith, who has been playing Iago here so far this week, strikes me as an actor who gives the part an excellent reading. Unfortunately, he is not what the theater dubs a "name" player. He will be, probably, after this engagement.

I am told that he is being very cricket about the whole business, but insists that when "Othello" opens in New York, he is going to parade in front of the playhouse bearing a placard, both front and rear, reading to the general effect that "This theater is unfair to Keith."

I wouldn't be sure that the fellow is not right.

• • • •

This Walter Huston has a queer idea lurking in the back of his head, too. He wonders if in the exuberance of his art he really should choke Desdemona to death in that tragic last act, if he would be charged with first-degree murder or merely manslaughter. Since the role of Desdemona is played by Nan Sunderland, in private life Mrs. Walter Huston, our insistent contention is that it could be nothing more sinister in the law books than Nan-slaughter.

But, once again, maybe I'm wrong.

• • • •

Our more or less dependent "ear-to-the-ground department" reports that in all probability the chief stage attraction at the Earle Theater for the week of January first—that would be New Year's week, in case the whole jolly business had slipped your mind—will be Herbert Mundin, that nimble-tongued Briton, whose diction can be made so completely Cockney as to be positively devastating, no less, when he wishes it to be, just as Noel Coward's is in "Fumed Oak," which I still insist was the best—and still is—of his nine one-act plays that have so definitely set Manhattan by the ears, just as they did the National Capital.

But this Herbert Mundin fellow is, after all, quite a comedian. He has been around the better cinemas for a long time now and never, to the best of my knowledge and personal observation, ever has turned in a cheap or slovenly performance.

Of late months he seems to have been overtaken by a quick succession of jungle roles, but Mr. Mundin can be quite as amusing in civilization as he can be in the remote outposts of the human race. It will be fun to have him here in person.

• • • •

It hardly seems possible, so soon after the last one, but Christmas is practically here again. I have lost track of the exact number of shop-lifting days until the Yuletide, but they are not many. So do your holiday quilting early. A satin quilt, so you will "get" the connotation, is a Santa Claus mandate. And what a funny-looking Santa Claus I make!

• • • •

Last night, tonight and tomorrow night, the National Academy of Stage Training is closing its fall term of instruction with three performances by the graduating pupils in the academy theater.

The various departments of the institution—and it can hardly be called less than that—will present plays, monologues, pantomimic and dancing numbers under the direction of John McKee, Adelaide Hibbard and Marion B. Venable.

A-Step-in-Time Note.

Just in case the pretty postage cards don't get around in time, don't be impatient. I usually mail them Christmas Eve, so that they will be sure to arrive by Washington's birthday. But sometimes I miss. However, be of good heart because the darn things are on the way—I hope.

Three Dead in Fire.

Janesville, Wis., Dec. 17 (AP).—A mother and two children were burned to death early today in a fire that destroyed their home. The father saved himself and his 4-month-old baby by jumping from the second story.

Two Closed Banks Get New Receiver

Frederick J. Young, of Milford, N. H., has been named receiver for the Bank of Brightwood and the United States Savings Bank here, it was announced yesterday at the office of the Comptroller of the Currency.

Young, who has been acting as receiver for the International Exchange Bank, will consolidate the three in liquidating total assets of about $1,750,000. It was explained at the Currency Comptroller's office that such consolidation is its policy when assets of banks in receivership reach a low point. The motive, it was said, is to reduce administrative costs.

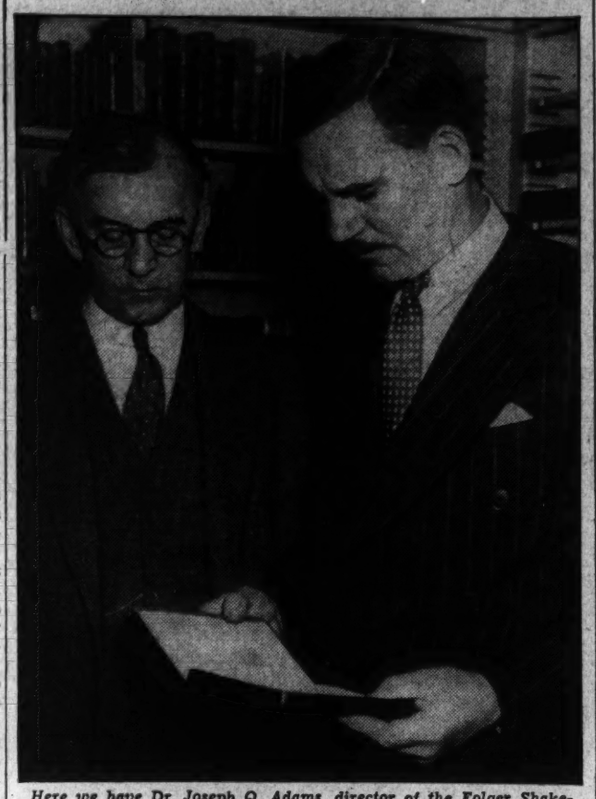
Young succeeds Claude T. Woodward at the Brightwood Bank and Carter B. Keane at the United States Savings Bank.

Plunge Kills Aged Man; Death Held Accident

A certificate of accidental death was issued yesterday by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald after an autopsy was performed on the body of Zachariah Collins, 75, of 3591 Yuma street northwest. Collins died after a two-story plunge from a window of Gallinger Hospital early yesterday.

The man's body was found in a driveway by attendants. A screen on the second floor was pushed out and investigators believe Collins had mistaken the window for a door. Suffering from a heart disease, Collins was told he could never leave the hospital. Physicians said he was anxious to leave.

Actor Peruses Some First Editions



Here we have Dr. Joseph Q. Adams, director of the Folger Shakespeare Memorial Library, and Walter Huston, who is appearing in Max Gordon's presentation of Robert Edmond Jones' production of "Othello," at the National this week, reading in the customary direction, in one of the vaults of the Folger Library, where some of the scripts are worth as much as a quarter or a half a million dollars—which is quite a good many dollars. Mr. Huston is holding the first printed copy of "Titus Adronicus," Shakespeare's first published play.

Palace

"BORN TO DANCE," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Jack McGowan, Sid Silvers and B. G. De Sylva, adapted to the screen by the Messrs. McGowan and Silvers, starring Eleanor Powell, with James Stewart, Virginia Bruce, Una Merkel, Sid Silvers, Frances Langford, Raymond Walburn, Alan Dinehart, Buddy Ebsen, Georges and Jalna, Reginald Gardiner and "The Foursome." Directed by Roy Del Ruth.

There is no problem involved in the continuance of "Born to Dance" for a second week at Loew's Palace Theater. It is one of the inevitabilities.

If ever there was a picture which, by virtue of its running veins of comedy, sprightly songs, lively dances and all-around excellence of investiture and performance deserved to carry on indefinitely in any man's theater, "Born to Dance" is the one.

Eleanor Powell, of course, occupies a particularly individualized niche among the distaff tap-dancers of the day. She begins to pick them up and lay them down where most of the others stop. She never has done so splendid a piece of work as in her present vehicle.

Supported by such consummate artists as Una Merkel, Sid Silvers, James Stewart, Reginald Gardiner, Buddy Ebsen, Frances Langford and the other members of one of M-G-M's most formidable casts, it is not surprising that "Born to Dance" should take its place among the best of the musical revues that ever have come out of Hollywood.

Raymond Walburn, as the submarine commander, anchored in New York harbor, none of whose crew is able to find Brooklyn, is a comedian who turns in a comic gem in his present assignment. Miss Merkel and Mr. Silvers are not far behind, as a married couple who have not seen each other for four years, nor does Buddy Ebsen, as the dumbest of the gobs, lag far behind.

Altogether, a very fine hour of two of inconsequential pastiming that still is a tremendous amount of fun. The short-reel subjects also are being carried over for the extra week of the run of this sterling bill.

Crash Here Hurts Missouri Aviator

Serious injuries were suffered late yesterday by Hayden Campbell, St. Joseph, Mo., private pilot, when his new "flivver plane" crashed during a speed run near Bolling Field.

Campbell, who was taken to Casualty Hospital, suffered severe cuts about his head, face and hands, and possible concussion of the brain.

Cause for the crash was believed to have been failure of the oil system in the automobile engine with which the little plane is powered. Both wings were torn off, and the plane almost completely overturned when Campbell attempted his forced landing. He was flying at a low altitude over the measured Navy Speed Course, from the Anacostia Naval Station down the Potomac, and was just able to reach shore before the motor failed.

Hunt for Maryland Man Is Renewed in Chicago

Chicago, Dec. 17 (AP).—Chicago police were ordered today to renew their search for Alvin H. Nelson, 31-year-old electrical company draftsman from Hagerstown, Md.

Nelson has been missing since he parked his automobile on a parking lot here December 5. He came to Chicago to visit his sister, the wife of the Rev. William B. Waltmire, pastor of the Humboldt Park Methodist Church. Nelson left Hagerstown November 29, after telling fellow workers that his sister was ill in Chicago.

Lost and Found By Priscilla Wayne

CHAPTER 18.

Doris was surprised that she did go to sleep—and almost immediately. The bed was clean—that is, the sheets on it had at least been freshly laundered and Doris crept between them still dressed in Chiquita's clothing.

She thought she might be frightened, worried. But sleep came to her almost instantly.

She was awakened by hearing George tap on her door. "Better get up," he said. "I'd like to get started out of here before the Mex and his family are even awake." Doris roused instantly. When she came out into the kitchen-living room bedroom-dining room of the two-room cottage she found George at work preparing their breakfast. He had heated another can of soup and spread out the rest of the crackers on the oiled inside wrapper of the box. "Wish I could offer you a cup of java."

Real Good Today.

"I don't mind not having coffee. This will be warm and invigorating," Doris grinned sleepily. There was a pan of warm water on the old cook stove.

"For you," George said. "Is it warm enough?"

"Plenty." Doris washed her face gingerly. "This rose-scented soap and the lovely, fluffy towels make a rite of this morning's ablutions," and she bowed her mocking thanks as George spread out a clean handkerchief he had in his pocket and tossed it over to her.

"We'll find a place where we can get real food today," George promised. And they packed away their things in the car.

Teck's old car complained considerably when George tried to start it. They held their breath until the engine sputtered a bit and then started reluctantly.

Slept.

"Shady Rest," George grumbled. "Did you ever see such a place in all your life?"

"Did you get any sleep?"

The old car was hitting on three cylinders now, but George guided it expertly. "Went to sleep the minute I touched the bed. But I wakened several times. Patrick didn't like the place. He kept prowling around."

"It's good for us," Doris ventured, "that Patrick decided to come along. We might not have been safe if it hadn't been for Patrick's presence."

"We can give him a little more freedom now, too," George told her. "We're getting out of the communities where he would be known."

"Where are we?" Doris sighted the sun. "I know we're traveling west. Have we crossed over into Arizona yet?"

"I don't think so. I've been watching for signs. We're going west, all right, that is most of the time, and we must be almost out of the State. But I can't be sure. I haven't seen a marker since we left our last night's hotel."

They were hungry and still tired from the day before. But even so their spirits were rising. The day was young. Even now the dawn stretched rainbow fingers across the morning horizon. "We'll be safe enough by evening," George prophesied.

Radio Bulletin.

But his prophecy was not altogether correct. It was when they had lunch in a shabby little restaurant of a tiny village that they heard a bulletin of their flight broadcast over the radio.

It was late for lunch. George had purposely suggested that they stop for a late lunch. Not because they were not hungry earlier but because George had the very correct notion that, if they waited until the normal lunch hour had passed, that fewer people would have the chance to observe them when they stopped.

Now they sat in the little restaurant waiting for the order to be served. The place seemed to be in charge of one girl who was waitress and cashier both. She took their order and went to the kitchen with it. The room had been loudly vocal with a singing chorus of a dance band. And then the music stopped.

An excited voice that fairly took the roof from the place announced. "Pardon the interruption, please. We have an important police announcement. Be on the lookout for a man and a woman. Dressed as Indians. They are making their escape from a hideaway in the Jemez mountains. Believed to be driving a Ford tudor sedan of an old model. Identity of man unKnown. The girl is the notorious——"

Turns Radio Off.

George leaped to the radio, turned it off just as the waitress hurried back into the room. "It made so much noise," he told her apologetically. "I just turned it off."

"Oh, that's all right." She was serving the food. "I'm not much of a radio fan myself. Makes me nervous. Want your coffee now?"

They ate hurriedly. Neither was in the mood to enjoy food or conversation.

George kept watching his companion. He noticed that the announcement had shaken her considerably. She was pale and her hands trembled. "You'd better go on without me," she told him once, a pathetic little smile quivering at her lips.

"Nonsense. Finish your lunch. I'm sticking by you. Do you hear? We'll plan our next move when we get back to the car."

They took food to Patrick who had waited more or less patiently in the car.

Don't Worry.

"Don't worry, Doris," George said kindly, when she would have collapsed into tears. "Just keep a grip on yourself. We'll think our way through this."

He chose a secondary highway out of town. "I've made up my mind, Doris, that when we get to the next town I'm going to buy some clothing. For both of us. I guess I'll have to do it alone."

"I'd be afraid to stop any place—now," the girl confessed.

"You needn't. I'll park the car in some obscure place and you and Patrick can wait for me. I'll buy just the things we need to get rid of these Indian clothes. I'm not so worried about their checking this car. They haven't the number of it and they haven't a very accurate description. But that part about being disguised as Indians is just too much of a give away. We aren't very well disguised as Indians. Why, even that Mex recognized the fact last night."

"Maybe he gave the police their information," Doris volunteered.

"Do you suppose he did?" The thought riveted George's attention. "Then they can't be very far from us. We'll have to act quickly."

New Clothes.

Patrick had finished eating the food they brought for him when George stopped the car on an unfrequented street leading into a straggling village a dozen miles farther on.

"Patick, lie down." He covered the dog with the blanket. "Doris, sit right here. I'll make it just as fast as I can. Doris, what size clothes do you wear?"

"A 14."

"I'll find something," he promised, and was off in a hurry.

It might be a foolhardy thing that he was doing, George reflected, but he had to take the chance. If they continued with the clothing they wore there was every chance that they would be picked up very quickly. There was no way to tell just how accurate and complete the descriptions had been given because he had been obliged to turn off the radio before he could tell it all.

He bought hurriedly. A gingham house dress for Doris. A hat. A sweater. For himself a shirt. Then at another place a pair of overalls. Then he bought a half-dozen handkerchiefs, some hand towels and a bar of soap and, remembering the experience of the night before, a can opener.

Not Suspicious.

He was glad that the sleepy little town gave no sign that his presence was at all unusual or suspicious. If the girl who waited on him in the little department store was amazed at the size and haste of his purchase she gave no evidence of the fact. Perhaps she just took in the money quickly, being extra glad that the dull afternoon had given her at least one customer.

Doris was glad to see George come hurrying back, his bundle under his arm. She knew he had been gone less than half an hour, but the minutes had seemed like dismal eternities.

"We'll get some place where we can spend the night and get a chance to get into these things," he told her "There was a radio blaring away in front of a garage up there in the village. Believe me, I didn't give it a chance to say anything while I was there. I'll feel a lot more comfortable when we get rid of these clothes we've got on. Just wait until you see the dress I got you. Boy, is it foxy?" He knew he must keep up her rapidly flagging courage.

Colonials Use Many Subs In Game

Kiesel and Butterworth Lead in Attack of Local School.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 17.—George Washington University's big, fast and sharpshooting quintet bowled over Johns Hopkins tonight by a score of 41 to 22, in a game featuring the Medicos' annual gymboree program—an all-sports event.

The Blue Jays never had a chance against the far-more-experienced Colonials who established themselves in a 22-to-11 lead during the first half and continued at the same blistering pace throughout the final period. Capt. Hal Kiesel, at forward, led the Washington team's attack, followed closely by Jack Butterworth, center, and Ben Goldfaden, guard. The Colonials were particularly effective under the backboard following up missed long shots.

Hopkins, however, was not disappointing in defeat for its set the early pace and at one stage held an 8-7 lead, but wilted rapidly under the gruelling pace. The home team was at a distinct disadvantage in the matter of reserves. Coach Bill Reinhart, of George Washington, substituted freely without interrupting the smooth steady work of his team.

George Washington held possession of the ball throughout most of the second half and in the waning stages of the first, and exhibited a web-like defense that completely stopped Hopkins' passing attack. The Blue Jays, consequently, were obliged to fall back on long shots in a vain attempt to score as they saw their first defeat of the season creeping upon them.

Max Schmeling Judged Best Comeback

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 17.—The experts who wouldn't concede him a chance, have hailed Max Schmeling's 12-round knockout of Joe Louis as the year's crowning comeback achievement in the sixth annual Associated Press sports poll.

Their selection of the black-haired Uhlan, whose insistence that he was "unafraid" was consistently doubted and overlooked by most scribes, was just as decisive as the thrashing he dealt the young Negro heavyweight in Yankee Stadium on June 19.

Considered washed up when he left these shores in 1933, Max now will get a chance to regain the championship he won on a foul from Jack Sharkey six years ago. He's been matched against Title-holder Jim Braddock for June 3.

	Points.
1. Max Schmeling, knockout winner over Joe Louis	152
2. Miss Alice Marble, U. S. tennis champion	57
3. Jimmy McLarnin for boxing victories over Tony Canzoneri and Lou Ambers	34
4. Bob (Lefty) Grove, Boston Red Sox pitcher	23
5. Frank Wykoff, anchor on U. S. 400-meter relay team in Olympics	16
6. Joe Louis for return to form after knockout by Max Schmeling	14
7. Johnny Fischer, U. S. Amateur golf champion	11
8. Denny Shute and Tony Manero, golf champions; Paul Waner, National League batting champion, each	10
11. Tony Lazzeri, Yankees' second baseman	9

Scattered votes—Seven for Pat Malone, Yankees' pitcher; 6 for Danny MacFayden, Boston Bees' pitcher; 5 for Jack Lovelock, Olympic 1,500-meter champion; 4 each for Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, tennis; James J. Braddock, heavyweight boxing champion; Bronko Nagurski, Chicago Bears' footballer, and Lou Meyer, winner of 500-mile Indianapolis automobile race for third time; 3 each for Fred Perry, world amateur tennis champion; Willie Hoppe, billiards; Carl Hubbell, leading National League pitcher; Fred Fitzsimmons, New York Giants' pitcher and Ralph Guldahl, professional golfer; 2 each for Jimmy Phelan, University of Washington football coach; Gene Venske, Pennsylvania foot racer; Leo Durocher, St. Louis Cardinals' shortstop; Bill Mehlhorn, professional golfer; Charles Ruffing, New York Yankees' pitcher; Goose Goslin, Detroit Tigers' outfielder; Rabbit Maranville, manager of Elmira team in New York-Penn Baseball League, and Discovery, A. Babe Didrikson's 87 Gets 'Phooey,' No Prize

Her First Competition in a Male Golf Tourney a Complete Flop.

By the Associated Press.

Glendale, Calif., Dec. 17.—Mildred Babe Didrikson finished her first 18 holes of tournament golf against male competition today, tossed her club to her caddy and exclaimed:

"Phooey!"

Babe, lone woman entry in the $1,500 southern California open, shot a 44-43—87, 15 strokes over men's par and nine shots over women's par for the tough Oakmont Country Club course.

Monday, in practice, she had equalled men's par 72 to chop six strokes off the former women's course record.

Erratic before a large gathering, Babe smacked four balls out of bounds, performed badly on the greens and dropped two strokes on the seventh, when she broke a wood into many pieces.

"I couldn't get going," she apologized.

The Texas girl, 1932 American Olympic star, who later turned pro, played with Jim Ross, of Los Angeles, and Richard Arlen, film actor, both amateurs, who shot 71 and 84, respectively.

A young Pasadena amateur, F. P. Hixon, turned in a spectacular 30-36—66, six strokes under par, for low score in the first round.

"BABE" DIDRIKSON.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

When Third Baseman Frank Higgins steps into a Boston uniform next spring, he will be the tenth former Mackman to make the same change of allegiance since 1933. Thus, the raids of the Red Sox on Philadelphia's talent are more than mildly reminiscent of the tactics of the Yankees of 1920-21-22 who snatched from the impoverished Red Sox of that era a great cluster of stars.

But the effects have differed widely. Whereas the Yankees' inroads into the money-grabbing Boston team provided them with the ingredients of three consecutive pennant winners, Millionaire Tom Yawkey's expenditures for Philadelphia stars have netted him only the headache of a sixth-place ball club.

The folks who had deplored the fact that a rich man could buy a big league pennant are not so certain now that it is a fact. The Yankees did it more than ten years ago, of course, but Yawkey has spent three times as much as the Yankees expended and his teams have finished steadily worse.

He has acquired from Philadelphia what had been that team's entire infield—Jimmy Foxx, at first base; Max Bishop and Dib Williams, second basemen; Eric McNair, shortstop, and now Higgins, third baseman. He bought also the A's proudest pitchers—Lefty Grove, Johnny Marcum and Eric McNair, and he contrived to land for the Red Sox also, the brilliant outfielder, Roger Cramer.

POVICH.

That crew was more numerous and, on paper, equally as capable a lot as the group the Yankees pried away from the Red Sox in the early '20s, yet while the infusion of the new Boston blood into the Yankees resulted in pennant victories during the next three seasons, Yawkey is still laboring with a second-division team.

The Yankees came up with Babe Ruth in 1920 as their first prize from the Red Sox and then followed in rapid succession the series of cash deals that brought to New York Pitchers Joe Bush, Waite Hoyt and Sam Jones, Shortstop Everett Scott, Catcher Wally Schang and Third Baseman Joe Dugan. These formed the brilliant nucleus of Yankee teams that were to be invincible in 1921, 1922 and 1923.

Then as now it was a case of a rich club dangling tempting cash offers before the eyes of rival owners hard-pressed for money to meet the payrolls. The Red Sox, like the Yankees, made away with precious stars and, like the Yankees, expected the same results. But they were reckoning without the new conditions in baseball.

In the days when the Yankees corraled the Red Sox stars, there was no club owner in baseball with the bankroll to match their purchases and the Yanks, accordingly, stepped far in front of the field. But the competition is stronger for Yawkey. Big bankrolls have come into the league in increasing numbers and no one magnate can actually buy the pennant.

Ready to match the purchases of any club owner who threatens to gain a corner on the league's talent, as the Yankees did, are such as Walter O. Briggs, of Detroit, with his automobile body-building wealth; Alva Bradley, of Cleveland, with his railroad and realty millions; Yawkey, himself, and Col. Jake Ruppert, of New York, with his brewery fortune.

The current Yankees, who won the 1936 pennant by 19½ games, were assembled not through Ruppert's cash but by careful grooming of young talent. Only Red Ruffing and Walter Pearson came to them as established big league stars. The others—Gehrig, Lazzeri, Dickey, Crosetti, Rolfe, Selkirk, Gomes and DiMaggio—are the products of Yankee scouts who plucked them from the minors.

In Short—

The Yankees, who originally gained an option on Joe DiMaggio for $75,000 let it lapse after DiMaggio injured his leg in a 1934 Coast league game . . . when no other club bid for him, the Yanks gained title to DiMaggio for $25,000 the following season . . . Bob Feller, pitching for the Fargo-Moorhead team in an exhibition game after the close of the 1936 season, was pounded for five runs in the first inning by Earl Mack's barnstorming big leaguers . . . Johnny Salveson, the pitcher acquired by the Nats for Earl Whitehill in the three-cornered trade with Cleveland and Chicago, bears the distinction of being the last rookie signed by the late John McGraw . . . Salveson graced the Giants' bench during the 1933 World Series with Washington . . . if, as reported in Philadelphia, Bill Werber was given a raise in salary by Connie Mack after the deal that brought him to the A's from Boston, Werber will be the highest-salaried member of the team . . . Werber's contract with Boston called for a $10,000 wage in 1936 . . . the Cleveland Indians are attempting to solve the problem of Bob Feller's salary demands by offering him a provisional contract . . . that calls for a bonus which may net him $20,000 if he wins 20 games in 1937.

Cards Down Shepherd's Five, 38-24

Schmarr, Ambrose Lead Scoring; D. C. Five Never Threatened.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A surprising Shepherd College quintet took it on its collective chin for Catholic University last night, bowing by a 38-24 count in a rather exciting game at Brookland.

It was somewhat of a surprise that the visitors scored at all in the first half, which ended with "Fod" Cotton's crew leading, 16-4, after being held scoreless 16 minutes. It was just as surprising, however, when the same men rallied at the start of the final half and pared Catholic's lead to 23-16 with an outburst of accurate shooting from all angles.

But this uprising was short lived as Hermie Schmarr and "Barrell" Ambrose settled down to the important business of adding to the home team's total. Cotton evidently has a scoring star of first dimensions in "Barrell," younger brother of Whitey Ambrose, who starred under "Dutch" Bergman several years ago. "Barrell" makes points to order, using either hand or both, and from every conceivable angle.

Leads Scoring.

Bud Mitchell, Shepherd's center, led the second period uprising, a well planned and equally well executed attack that penetrated the Cards' defense with unbelievable ease. He was ably assisted by Stevens and Willard, but not quite enough to overtake the host five.

Possibly the biggest hit of the evening was Catholic's reserve team, which succeeded in transforming an orderly ball game into a hilarious battle of arms, legs, elbows and what not. It was Catholic's final appearance until after the Christmas holidays.

Leemans, Griff To See Benefit Cage Game

Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Ball Club, and Tuffy Leemans, who has thrilled thousands of Washington's sports-loving fans on Saturday afternoons, will be interested spectators at a basketball game to be given in the Mount Rainier High School Gym tomorrow night for the benefit of Robert C. Newell, a prominent Mount Rainier athlete, seriously ill in Sibley Hospital of pneumonia.

Newell, who recently passed his twenty-third birthday, graduated from Hyattsville High in 1932. He participated in all sports in that school and after graduation played with most of the amateur teams in and around Mount Rainier. For the past two years he has been playing with the Mount Rainier Grays, an outfit that has hung up an enviable record in basketball and baseball.

Tickets are on sale at the Mount Rainier High School and the Mount Rainier Fire Department.

Runyon Picks Dempsey As Florida Police Chief

Miami Beach, Fla., Dec. 17 (U.P.).—Jack Dempsey tonight was appointed chief of police of Sunny Isles by Damon Runyon, newspaperman and playwright who recently was elected mayor. "He'll be a knockout, don't you think?" said Runyon.

Olsen Whips Cox as Riot Threatens

Police Restore Order as Angry Fans Move Toward Ring.

Cox Pinned in 32 Mins. After Being Kicked to Canvas.

Cliff Olsen, owner of a claim to the heavyweight championship, tossed Joe Cox, to Kansas City, after 32 minutes of the roughest barroom brawling ever dignified with the name of wrestling at Turner's Arena last night.

Those of the goodly crowd of 1,600 who were seated near the ring were kept busy scurrying as first one then the other of the gladiators was tossed nonchalantly from within the squared circle, often almost over the heads of first row customers into the second row of seats.

So heated did the action become that sporadic riots threatened to break out at almost any minute during the brawl, and several brave male spectators removed their coats and were restrained from entering the ring by other customers and one rugged individualist seized a stool with the avowed purpose of conking Cox over the noggin.

Police Restore Order.

Not only did the wrestlers keep heaving each other through the ropes, but they both resorted to almost every frowned-upon tactic known to the game. Cox was the ringleader in the roughness, but Olsen matched him, punch for punch, kick for kick and gouge for gouge.

Olsen pinioned Cox's head in the spectacular "hangman's noose" hold, in which the head is placed between the twisted strands of the middle and top ropes, then squeezed until the rope breaks, the ensnared grappler's head explodes or the referee intervenes. Cox repaid Olsen for this bit of business by hooking Cliff's arm in the ropes and squeezing mightily.

Cox really was knocked out by a kick. He had just launched a flying tackle at Cliff, missed it, kicked Olsen, knocking him down and was ready to pounce upon the title claimant's form when Cliff kicked him in the puss, laying him low.

Semifinal Lasts 30 Seconds.

Henri Piers, the big Belgian who is rapidly becoming a favorite here, established a record for a quick finish here, getting rid of Jim Coffield in exactly 30 seconds. The combatants started arguing and almost came to blows before the opening whistle tweeted. Scarcely had the whistle sounded than Piers fastened a flying scissors about Coffield's midsection, which spelled the end of James.

The other preliminaries scheduled for 30 minutes, Frank Judson and Jack Hader worked to a draw, Stanley Pinto flopped Abe Yourist in 14½ minutes, and Ed Meske tossed Pat McKay in 13 minutes.

Impellittiere to Meet Pastor in Bout Tonight

New York, Dec. 17 (AP).—Making his first Garden start since he was knocked out by Primo Carnera in March, 1935, Ray Impellittiere, giant New York heavyweight, goes against Bob Pastor, former New York University star, tomorrow night.

The huge Cold Springs youth, who recently returned from a successful Pacific Coast invasion, rules a 7-to-5 betting choice with very little wagering reported.

Ted Twomey Rumored As Texas Line Coach

Dallas, Dec. 17 (AP).—The Dallas News in a special dispatch from Austin tonight says it learned from a reliable source that Ted Twomey, University of Texas line coach, will succeed Jack Chevigny, resigned, as head football coach at the university.

Hubert, Alabama Star, New V.M.I. Grid Coach

"POOLEY" HUBERT.

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Va., Dec. 17.—Allison T. S. (Pooley) Hubert, star quarterback of Alabama's 1925 Rose Bowl team and for the past six years athletic director and head coach at Mississippi State Teachers College, was appointed head football coach at Virginia Military Institute today.

The Alabama athlete was selected from a list of 50 candidates by the V. M. I. athletic council for the position left vacant by the resignation of William C. Raftery, Cadet mentor for the past ten years.

Hubert will also serve as head coach of basketball and baseball. He will report on January 1 and will select four assistants, subject to the approval of the council.

Salary Undisclosed.

Salary terms were not revealed. Raftery received $5,000 a year.

Council members said that Hubert's success in developing teams from limited material at the Hattiesburg, Miss., college was an important factor in his election. During the past season his football team, developed from a squad of 25, was a leading contender in the S. I. A. A., winning seven games, losing two, and tying one from opponents of much larger student bodies.

Mississippi S. T. C. competed only one season in intercollegiate baseball during Hubert's service, but he managed a Fayetteville, N. C. professional nine in 1928, while holding down a catcher's position.

Hubert played for three years at Alabama under Wallace Wade, present Duke mentor. Wade was among the coaches recommending Hubert for the V. M. I. position, the council said.

Was Rose Bowl Star.

Dr. George H. Denny, former president of the University of Alabama, and Dr. J. B. George, president of Mississippi S. T. C. also praised Hubert's leadership and ability.

As a football player, Hubert performed one season at tackle, one year at fullback, and two years at quarterback on Alabama's Crimson Tide. During the seasons of 1924 and 1925 he was all-Southern quarterback, and during the latter season was voted the most valuable player on the team.

He received national recognition on January 1, 1926, when he led the Tide to a thrilling 20-19 victory over the University of Washington, this year's Rose Bowl contender. Hubert scored one touchdown and passed for another in Alabama's second half drive.

Hubert then played three years of professional football with Red Grange's New York Americans; Ironton, Ohio, Tanks, and at Ashland, Ohio.

Pass Rule Due For Lacing by Coaches

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Dec. 17.—The question of forward-pass interference, the most widely discussed and controversial matter which developed during the season just closed, will be the subject of an open discussion by coaches, officials and sports writers at the annual meeting of the American Football Coaches Association, which will be held in conjunction with the annual convention of the National Collegiate Athletic Association in the Hotel Pennsylvania December 28 and 29.

The coaches have set aside most of the morning session of the second day for discussion of the subject. Most of them hope that the session will provide the initial impetus of a move for a new ruling on forward pass interference or a new interpretation of the old.

By inviting officials and newspaper men to join in the discussion as well as members of their association, the coaches hope that the trend will be controversial and that all points will be argued out thoroughly.

Walter R. Okeson, commissioner of the Eastern Collegiate Association, will lead the discussion for the officials. Other officials who will speak are Bill Crowley, W. H. Friesell and Austin Lake.

All-Pro Eleven Includes 3 Redskins

By the United Press.

New York, Dec. 17.—The Western division of the National Football League nominated the all-professional team picked today by the United Press. The West placed eight men on each the first and second teams, leaving three places for the East on each team.

The Green Bay Packers landed four men on the first team, with two each from two other strong Western teams, the Chicago Bears and Detroit Lions. All three Eastern players on the first team were Boston Redskins. The places on the second team were divided as follows: Chicago Bears, 3; Chicago Cardinals, 3; New York Giants, 2, and Green Bay, Pittsburgh and Detroit, one each.

Most of the strength of the Professional League was centered in the West last season, with the champion Packers, Bears and Lions rated the three strongest teams. The Boston Redskins came fast at the tail-end of the season to meet the Packers in the East-West play-offs, but the Eastern champions were considered inferior to the three Western leaders. Green Bay won the title by defeating Boston in the play-off game, 21-6.

The standout player of the league again was Earl (Dutch) Clark, Detroit's great quarterback from Colorado College and leading pro scorer. He was the third leading ground gainer in the league, with 628 yards in 123 attempts. He completed 38 out of 71 passes for 487 yards and drop-kicked four field goals. Clark's generalship again made the Lions the league's most feared team, never beaten until the game was over or Clark was on the sidelines.

First Team.	Position.	Second Team.
Hewitt, Bears	L.E.	Hutson, Gr. Bay

Terps Score, 51-40 in Overtime

Knetley Stars for Terp Five as Players Are Used in Vain.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 17.—Pete Jacobs forgot about his ailing ankle tonight and led the University of Richmond Spiders to a hair raising 51-40 victory over Maryland's basketball team in an overtime game.

Jacobs substituted into the game in the waning minutes dribbled in a field goal in the last ten seconds of the regulation game to knot the score at 40-all, and the red-socked guard was the spark plug of the Spider offensive in the overtime five minutes.

Al Dickinson and Jack Briscoe followed in rapid succession and successful shots by Briscoe and Pete Jacobs put the Richmonders well out in front. Bucky Jacobs and Brother Pete hit the target with long shots and Al Dickinson sank one from the foul line 12 seconds before the final whistle.

Knetley Stars.

The students, mistaking the time out blast for the game ending signal, rushed upon the floor and tried to carry Pete Jacobs off on their shoulders. It was several minutes before order was restored and the game resumed.

Outstanding in the play of the Maryland basketeers was the sophomore, George Knetley, who paced the Terrapins with 10 points. High scoring honors for the evening, however, were won by Capt. Bucky Jacobs, who scored 18 points before he went out of the game in the second half with four personal fouls.

Richmond led, 20 to 19, at the half, but the lead changed three times in the torrid second half.

Maryland substituted frequently in an effort to find a winning combination, and used 11 players, including three centers, among them was Ed Johnson, son of baseball's Big Train, Walter Johnson, and Bill Guckeyson, football star.

The line-up:

Pitts, Kenner to Fight In Amateur Tourney

DeLois Pitts, who boxed in two Golden Gloves Tournaments in Boston, will make his debut here in the semifinals of the Tristate Amateur Boxing Tournament to be held at the Twelfth Street Y. M. C. A. tomorrow night. Pitts will be pitted against Willie McBride, the Y. M. C. A. 126-pounder.

Jim Kenner, who proved somewhat of a sensation in recent elimination bouts at the Twelfth Street Y, also will see action in the heavyweight division.

Winners of the tournament will meet the Recreational Association boxing team in Richmond January 5.

Dobie Deserves Croix de Guerre

Expected Howl Against Bowl Games to Be Barren

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Dec. 17.—Collegiate spokesmen who will gather in New York during holiday week for the annual viewing-with-alarm may take a "strong stand," we hear, against post-season "bowl" games . . . They might as well pass a resolution deploring bad weather on football Saturdays . . . Some major groups, including Big Ten and Ivy League, bar post-season team activity but enough remaining colleges are in a receptive mood to keep things bowling along . . .

Here's one that Carter (Scoop) Latimer, the sage of Greenville, S. C., contributes for the 1936 gridiron book: Walt (Booty) Payne, sophomore back on the Greenville High School team, stood on his own 10-yard line and punted the ball over the Asheville High safety man's head, the kick covering 73 yards on the fly and rolling to Asheville's 1-yard line for a total coverage of 89 yards . . .

Speaking of kicking, Bob Sensenderfer, of the Philadelphia Bulletin, recalls that the late Clarence Herschberger's sensational punting wasn't enough to keep his Chicago Maroons from being licked by Pennsylvania, 23 to 11, in 1898—the game that helped convince Walter Camp the Western star belonged in All America company . . . "I saw Herschberger play in that game," writes Bob, "he sure could kick but it didn't do much good, for his ends couldn't get down to cover them and Penn's Johnny Gardiner got 'em back pretty well everytime" . . .

Ace Parker, Duke's All-America halfback this year, likewise had to shorten his kicking range this year for the benefit of his ends' time . . . Ace's hometown folks in Portsmouth, Va., presented him a bag of gold sticks at a post-season celebration in his honor . . . Parker shoots in the low 70's and may turn golf pro, unless the football or baseball scouts sign him up first . . . Dutch Clark, although still rated tops in the pro gridiron circuit eight years after being All-America quarterback, wants to land a college coaching job . . .

North Carolina's stellar end, Andy Bershak, passed up the Charlotte Observer's All-Carolina football soiree to concentrate on his studies . . . Bershak hopes to make the all-Phi Beta Kappa team, among others, next season . . . The coaching Croix de Guerre belongs to Gil Dobie for 1936 . . . Gil retired under fire at Cornell last February, after 16 years with the Big Red teams; quickly got another job at Boston College, had his collarbone broken in spring practice, brought the Eagles through a bumpy season to climax victory over Holy Cross, and then was almost killed in an automobile accident.

Hunk Anderson, another storm center, probably will stick as head coach at North Carolina State . . . The Wolfpack has been howling but Hunk has been standing his ground under fire, as usual . . . No team has yet been able to get very far through an Anderson-coached line . . . For the first time in years every head coach in the Eastern "Ivy League" can enjoy a merry Christmas free from any worries about his job for 1937.

Florida Military Academy, at St. Petersburg, claims the only "father and son" football coaching staff in the country . . . Capt. Frank Joseph, one-time New York firefighter, former pro star, and his son, Lieut. William Joseph, coach the team . . . Babe Ruth, who gave the academy its donkey mascot, is an honorary cadet major.

Uneasy, Mrs. Denemark's Entry, Takes Winter Haven Purse

Juvenile Wins Main Dash By Neck

Victor Pays EvenMoney; Three Jacobs Horses Tropical Winners.

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., Dec. 17.—Mrs. Emil Denemark's Uneasy, a juvenile that threatened on numerous occasions in Maryland competition, broke the ice here today when he drove first home by a neck in the Winter Haven Purse, a dash of 5½ furlongs for juveniles that held the honored spot on the card. Favorite at even money, the brown son of Royal Minstrel—Balance, drove through on the inside to wear down W. W. Adams' Conservative. H. E. Enger's Bain Marie was third, four lengths away.

Amhurst, Say When and Leona Reigh completed the small field as named. Uneasy raced the distance over a fast track in 1:06 4-5, under Charlie Kurtsinger.

Kurtsinger probably saved the day for Uneasy's backers by stealing through a hole on the inside rail turning for home. His backers were uneasy enough while Amhurst and Conservative were vying for the lead, with the Denemark youngster back in the middle of the bunch. It was fortunate that Uneasy was able to find an opening. The colt responded gamely to Kurtsinger's whipping and nipped Conservative just before reaching the judges. Bain Marie, outrun early, easily beat the tired Amhurst.

Today's program started off with another victroy for America's pace-making trainer, Hirsch Jacobs. The young man from Brooklyn tightened the girth on the 2-year-old filly Star Loom. The daughter of Twink won in easy fashion under Irving Anderson's intelligent handling.

Zevanaid, 6-year-old daughter of Zev, outfooted six other sprinters in the second event. Backed down to 9 to 10 favoritism, the coal black mare dashed right to the front, and, under Bobby Watson's hustling tactics, remained on the head end to the judges.

Miney Myerson Wins.

The veteran sprinter Miney Myerson showed his best form to win the third dash by a nose from the favorite, Likewise. It was a fast-run 6 furlongs, the pair hitting the wire in 1:12 flat.

Strategist II, a galloping winner here in his last start, came back to repeat the feat in the fifth contest, thus giving Mrs. E. D. Jacobs and her husband, Hirsch, a double. It was the 170th winner saddled by Trainer Jacobs in 1936.

Galloping, under a hard ride by Joe Rosen, gained a head decision over Roberta in the 1 mile of the sixth number. Peaceful trailed the pair by two lengths with Lauguorous, the choice, a laboring fourth. Galloping raced Languorous into defeat in the first 6 furlongs. Roberta, always close up, stuck her head in front in the stretch, but Galloping gamely prevailed in the thrilling dash to the wire. The filly returned $13.30.

Hirsch Jacobs saddled his third winner of the day and his 171st of the year and Apprentice Irving Anderson also completed a triple when Top High, carrying the silks of W. N. Adrians, survived a photo finish in the seventh. Pay Rack, on the inside, made it so close that many observers though he had lasted to win. Continuity was a poor third. Top High, fourth successful choice of the day at $5.40 for $2, wore down Pay Rack and Continuity in a pretty stretch drive. Jacobs was represented by the winners Star Loom, Strategist II and Top High. Kawagoe failed to finish in the money in the second race, thus ruining a perfect day for the 32-year-old wizard.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAR LOOM, $9.50, $5.00, $3.70; DICKERY DOCK, $5.50, $4.90; LUCKY JEAN, $7.90.

STAR LOOM, well handled, came around the field entering the stretch, assumed command at the furlong pole and won going away. DICKERY DOCK broke slow, worked her way up and finished gamely. LUCKY JEAN had plenty of speed, but weakened suddenly. LOVE POTION closed a big gap under weak handling.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 2:25. Off at 2:25½. Winner, Miss A. Doris' blk. m. (6), by Zev—Lady Diana. Trained by H. L. Campbell. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:13 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ZEVANAID, $3.80, $2.60, $2.20; DIXIE PRINCESS, $3.30, $2.50; CHARACTER, $2.50.

ZEVANAID broke alertly, was sent into a long lead, showed good speed, but was tiring at the end and the boy drove her hard to stall off the determined bid of DIXIE PRINCESS. The latter, on the outside, finished very fast. CHARACTER followed the pace for half a mile and then tired. He is sure to improve. GLADESS ran an impressive race. AMERICAN BELLE had no mishap.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $26.50.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place easily. Went to post at 2:51. Off at 2:52. Winner, L. E. Ogle's b. g. (6), by Amberjack—Marinette. Trained by L. E. Ogle. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:12.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MINEY MYERSON, $12.70, $5.10, $3.10; LIKEWISE, $3.20, $2.50; COUNT RAE, $2.70.

MINEY MYERSON broke well in motion from the outside, opened a wide gap early, saved ground and stood a long drive gamely. LIKEWISE moved menacingly around the turn and made a game effort. COUNT RAE was hard ridden all the way and had no excuse. GREAT HASTE ran a good race and will be hard to beat in the future.

FOURTH RACE—Five and a half furlongs. The Winter Haven. Purse, $700. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place easily. Went to post at 3:18. Off at 3:21½. Winner, Mrs. E. Denemark's br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—UNEASY, $4.00, $2.50, $2.40; CONSERVATIVE, $3.00, $2.80; BAIN MARIE, $4.10.

UNEASY handled his weight well, was hard ridden all the way, got through on the inside entering the stretch and right at the end was drawing away. CONSERVATIVE went to the pace to the stretch where he took the lead, but weakened suddenly in the closing strides. He will be hard to beat. BAIN MARIE ran a real good race and is worth noting. AMHURST was used up setting the pace. SAY WHEN had no mishap.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 3:48. Off at 3:49. Winner, Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—STRATEGIST II, $3.80, $2.80, $2.30; WISE WILL, $6.30, $3.50; HAZY AUTUMN, $6.00.

STRATEGIST II was much the best. He assumed command turning out of the backstretch and won nicely in hand. WISE WILL, well up all the way, was next best. HAZY AUTUMN was a stout contender for the entire trip. KNIGHTS FANCY had no mishap. LADY MARNOCK ran a poor race, being outrun from the start.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $700; claiming. For fillies and mares, 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:16. Off at 4:16½. Winner, T. S. and J. S. Mulvihill's b. f. (3), by Galetian—Hester R. Trained by G. Gould. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:41.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GALLOPING, $13.30, $6.00, $3.60; ROBERTA, $6.00, $3.80; PEACEFUL, $2.40.

GALLOPING broke good, was eased back off the early pace, moved up gamely around the turn and held on well. ROBERTA was hustled along from the start and made a game effort. PEACEFUL showed big improvement over recent effort. LANGUOROUS was sent to the front in the run down the backstretch and stopped badly. LOLOMA had no mishap.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place easily. Went to post at 4:47. Off at 4:48½. Winner W. N. Adrian's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TOP HIGH, $5.40, $3.20, $3.10; PAY RACK, $4.00, $3.20; CONTINUITY, $12.70.

TOP HIGH was allowed to gallop along back of the field, worked his way up on the inside in the run down the backstretch, then was taken to the outside and, finishing fast, got up to win the photo decision. PAY RACK was used up racing into defeat and tired at the end. CONTINUITY had plenty of speed and ran a fair race. TREASURE SHIP closed a big gap. THE SINGER had no excuse. PENRILL ran well for 6 furlongs.

EIGHTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:18. Off at 5:21. Winner, D. Stelsing's br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOOD DAME, $10.40, $5.10, $4.00; BLACK RIVER, $6.50, $4.70; FAIR TIME, $5.60.

GOOD DAME broke very fast, was sent right to the front and, raced along, held on well in the drive. BLACK RIVER got away well in motion, showed good speed and made a game effort. FAIR TIME moved up very fast around the turn. MILLIMETER came from far back and was a fast-going fourth. OUR CREST broke slow and lacked speed.

Nats Led League With Fewest Strikeouts, '36 Averages Show

Trosky Best At Driving In Runs

Led Gehrig for Honor; Foxx Most Frequent Strikeout Victim.

The umpire's gleeful "Stuh-r-r-ike three!" sounded in the ears of Washington batters fewer times than it was heard by the hitters of any other American League club during the 1936 season, it was revealed yesterday.

A list of miscellaneous batting figures for the season, announced by American League headquarters, attest that the Nats were the only club in the league with fewer than 400 strikeouts recorded against them. Washington hitters fanned 398 times to lead the Chicago White Sox for the honor of being the stubbornest strikeout victims. The Sox fanned 417 times.

The St. Louis Browns were the most frequent strikeout victims with 627 recorded against them, and Boston's Jimmy Foxx, for the sixth consecutive season, gained the dubious distinction of out-fanning all other batters with 119 strikeouts in 1936.

Yanks Good Walkers.

The pennant-winning Yankees led the teams in drawing bases on balls with 700 coaxed from opposing pitchers, a department of play in which the Nats were fifth with their 576 totals. The Yanks also led all clubs in players hit by pitched balls, with 33 such incidents. Twenty-four Nats were hit. Washington was fifth in runs batted in with 822, the Yanks leading the league with 995, a new league record.

Big Hal Trosky, of the Cleveland Indians, gained the chief individual honors when he led all batters in runs batted in with 162. Lou Gehrig drove ten fewer runs across the plate to gain second place in the list by a margin of nine over Jimmy Foxx.

Kuhel Drove in 118.

Eighteen players batted in 100 or more runs, bettering the former major league record of 17, set in the National League in 1930. Joe Kuhel, who drove 118 runs across the plate was the only Washington player in the 100-run class. Cecil Travis, with 92, led the other Nats.

Frankie Crosetti, of the Yanks, had both the satisfaction and the pain of being hit more times than any other player. Crosetti was struck 12 times by pitches. Contrastingly, Odell Hale, who played every game for the Cleveland Club, was never hit by a pitched ball.

5 Plaques Placed In Hall of Fame

New York, Dec. 17 (AP).—Plaques of baseball's foremost immortals—Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth, Honus Wagner, Christy Mathewson and Walter Johnson—were turned over to the Cooperstown (N. Y.) memorial committee today for installation in the game's hall of fame.

Alex Cleland, secretary of the memorial committee, accepted the plaques and said they would be installed in the Cooperstown Museum by January 1.

Meanwhile, the major leagues sent out ballots for new candidates for the rank of immortals. Each member of the Baseball Writers Association was asked to name ten players, none of them now active.

Sugar Bowl Stadium Would Seat 70,000

New Orleans, Dec. 17 (U.P.).—Plans for a 70,000-capacity stadium—by far the South's largest—for the annual Sugar Bowl classic here were proposed today in a joint statement from Gov. Richard Leche and Mayor Robert Maestri.

The announcement caused confusion in the Mid-Winter Sports Association, Bowl sponsors, which only recently let it be known it was planning an identical stadium for the New Year's Day games.

It was common conversation among sports fans that the Sugar Bowl would be an enlargement of Tulane University's 26,000-seat stadium, where the Sugar games regularly are played. Many expected formal announcement at the annual "Sidelines" banquet, when Tulane athletic letters are awarded.

Life Is Real and Life Is Earnest, Says Pitt Squad

Kansas City, Dec. 17 (AP).—Thirty-four solemn football players from University of Pittsburgh, en route to Pasadena, Calif., for their Rose Bowl battle with University of Washington New Year's Day, determinedly nodded assent as Tackle Averell Daniell asserted on a brief stop here late today:

"We're going out there to win. We have the fight and the kind of boys who like to play football. Haven't all the experience in the world, but we're going some place New Year's Day. Mark my words."

Boggs Is Re-elected.

Ernie Boggs, middle distance free-style champion of the District, has been re-elected captain of the Central Y. M. C. A. swimming team. Boggs, also a star back-stroker, captained the "Y" to the indoor and outdoor District A. A. U. championships.

The "Y" meets Woodrow Wilson High tonight at 8 o'clock in the Y" pool.

Dreifus Recovering.

Friends of Carl T. (Doc) Dreifus, well known Alexandria athlete and coach, will be interested in knowing that he is convalescing at the Emergency Hospital following an appendicitis operation. Dreifus will remaining in the hospital for at least six more days, his physician stated.

WPA Expended $10,500,000 On 368 Golf Links During Year

By the Associated Press.

Uncle Sam dug into his jeans for around $10,500,000 of emergency relief funds during the past 18 months to build and improve golf courses.

That amount was spent by the Works Progress Administration.

The big splurge on golf occurred last year, when the Government financed work on 306 courses, scattered over the land, at a cost of $9,359,699.

The latest figures available for this year covered 62 additional links, with an expenditure of $1,234,428. Work is in progress on some now.

Total $12,000,000.

Local sponsors have contributed approximately $1,500,000 over the entire period, bringing the total outlay for WPA golf projects to around $12,000,000.

Golf was only one of the sports that pulled the Government's emergency purse strings. A big hunk of the relief money has gone for the building of stadiums, playgrounds, baseball fields, swimming pools and other developments.

The biggest golf project handled through WPA cash was the Bethpage Park course in Long Island, with four 18-hole courses radiating from a single club house. The national public links championship was played there this summer.

Municipal Links.

All the WPA golf expenditures were on municipal links.

It is likely that more work relief money will go for golf in 1937, although the WPA program has not been announced. A short while ago, George Jacobus, president of the Professional Golfers Association, said he had learned from Federal authorities that around 600 new public courses would be built within a few years, with work on some likely to start next year.

Lucky Strikes Better Loop Standing

The Lucky Strike team, led by Howard "Sailor" Campbell, featured the pin-mauling in the District League last night, bettering its standing in the league with a near-record set of 1,893, seven pins short of Heurich Brewers' season record mark. Convention Hall was the victim of the powerful set, taking the count in all three games, and losing after rolling a big game of 607. Campbell was in rare form, rolling games of 141, 152 and 125 for a 418 set. Howard Parsons contributed 411 and Al Woods, 399. Tony Santini led the Hallmen with 404.

The league-leading Washington Brewery five increased its advantage by stopping Georgetown three games, picking up a game when Rose Liquor dropped a game to Arcadia and Heurich Brewers was taking one from Occidental Restaurant.

Daily News picked an opportune time to establish three new season record scores in the Daylight League at Convention Hall. With first place at stake, the Newsmen turned back the threat of the Master Printers with a new high team game of 593 and two high individual marks, a 157 game and 382 set by Norman Groff, winning two games. The Printers outrolled the Daily News by one pin for high total pinfall.

The first-place Easy Marks stopped the Sand Blowers twice in the Miscellaneous Tax Unit League . . . The Pinnetts scored a shut-out over the Larks in the Ladies Procurement League, rolling 488 and 1,408 for two season records . . . Tech Men Have Brains—Principal

The question as to whether or not Tech High football players "have brains" brought a difference of opinion between Principal Frank R. Daniel and "Uncle Louie" Mattern, veteran chemistry teacher at McKinley, at the school's football banquet last night when the inter-high champions were guests of school officials.

It was all in fun, of course. Principal Daniel explained that Tech's championships are due to two reasons: (1) Coach Hap Hardell and (2) "Boys with brains."

Instructor Mattern then arose and stated in a dramatic tone that he agreed with the first reason. "However," he added, "do not let anybody tell you that this championship Tech team is made up of boys with brains—at least so far as chemistry is concerned."

The banquet was the first given by Tech for its football team in many years. A representative attendance was gathered around the tables. Among the speakers were Henry Gilligan and Henry I. Quinn, of the Board of Education; Principal Daniel, Coach Hardell, Birch E. Bayh, supervisor of inter-high athletics; Assistant Superintendent of Schools Jeremiah Crane, Paul Magoffin, inter-high referee, and Joe Oehmann, Tech captain.

Leemans Goes Back to G. W. For Degree

Tuffy Leemans is going back to George Washington University.

That's what Tuffy, star of the New York Giants professional football team, said yesterday as he juggled a couple of beer kegs at the Heurich Brewery, where he is working during the off-season.

Leemans, hailed as the greatest athlete ever developed at the Buff and Blue institution, plans to reenter school in February. He will be working for his masters degree.

He admitted that he was interested in getting a coaching job at some school, provided a good one came along. Tuffy has a couple of schools in mind, he says.

But for the time being the former G. W. ace will continue to work at the brewery and play basketball with the Heurich pros. He made his pro basketball debut last Sunday against Kendrick, of Alexandria, and will be in the Brewers' line-up against the Brooklyn Dux Sunday.

Excess Reserves Drop $110,000,000

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported last evening that holiday demands for currency brought another increase in money in circulation during the week ended December 16, contributions to a $110,000,000 decline in excess bank reserves.

In its weekly condition statement of Federal Reserve banks, the board said money in circulation climbed $55,000,000 to $6,552,000,000. It was the third consecutive weekly increase and was in line with seasonal trends.

Excess reserves of member banks, which provide the basis for credit expansion, were estimated at $2,050,000,000 for the week, compared with $2,160,000,000 in the previous week.

Monetary gold stocks climbed $16,000,000 to another new high of $11,222,000,000. The continued inflow of gold has been a major factor in building excess reserves to current high levels.

Broker's Loans Drop $3,000,000 for Week

By the Associated Press.

Loans on securities to brokers and dealers, held by weekly reporting member banks in New York City, were reported yesterday by the Reserve Board to have totaled $1,056,000,000 for the week ended yesterday, a decrease of $3,000,000 for the week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $945,000,000.

Sharp Advance In Advertising Seen for 1937

Budgets Are Expected to Exceed This Year by 15 to 25 Per Cent.

New York, Dec. 17.—With the automotive, building, toilet goods, liquor and other important industries increasing their advertising budgets from 15 per cent to 25 per cent for 1937, total advertising expenditures for next year may be more than 15 per cent larger than the sharply expanded 1936 figures, says the Standard Statistics Co. today.

For 1936, preliminary figures indicate that dollar expenditures were from 15 per cent to 20 per cent greater than in the previous year and the best since 1931. As advertising budgets are generally based on industrial and retail sales, this improvement reflects the general business betterment taking place this year. A part of the increase, however, especially that resulting from the stepped-up fourth quarter expenditures, may be attributed to the influence of the present surtax on undistributed profits.

Newspaper space sales have moved sharply ahead. Aided by steady gains in the retail, classified and financial advertising divisions, and a marked upturn in automotive space during the final four months, the newspapers should close the year with 11 per cent to 12 per cent more lineage than was received in 1935. For 1937, with about 60 per cent of the total automotive advertising to go to the newspapers and numerous institutional campaigns to be carried on in the press, another successful year is forecast.

General Motors Gains In Overseas Sales

New York, Dec. 17.—Sales of General Motors cars and trucks to dealers in the overseas markets during November totaled 24,088 units, representing an increase of 5.9 per cent over the volume in Novemeber of last year.

In the first 11 months of 1936 sales totaled 294,713 units—an increase of 14.1 per cent over the volume of 258,263 in the first 11 months of 1935.

Stock Market Prices Yield; Steel Shares Show Strength

Year-End Switching of Securities Results in Diminished Volume of Trading; Rye, Rubber, Zinc Advance.

By Frederick Gardner.

Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Dec. 17.—First aid to an ailing stock market was furnished by steels and specialties today but it was not sufficient to bring about recovery. In another slow-motion session, punctuated by occasional bidding and offering flurries, favored issues were made more conspicuous by the fact many leaders remained in obscurity or backed away from such support as appeared.

Finding no special news to account for the diffidence of the list as a whole, analysts fell back on the theory investment quarters may have done a little year-end switching of holdings or that accounts were being adjusted on a tax basis.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .4 of a point at 70.3. Transfers totaled 1,951,220 shares, compared with 1,945,000 yesterday.

The steel division did virtually nothing in the morning, but revived briskly in the afternoon, along with carrier equipments, on reports of expanding orders for rails and other materials which were expected to push mill activities to new peaks before the end of this month.

Labor difficulties that may delay output of new automobiles kept the motors in the background. Growing operating profits for some railroads helped to sustain this group, although most transportation shares finished a trifle mixed. Merchandising stocks drifted lower. Low-priced issues were notably in the minority on the ticker tape. Of the day's 20 liveliest movers only two sold under $10.

Wall Street felt better when a stock exchange seat changed hands at $115,000, up $10,000 from the last transaction and $26,000 above the year's low established December 1.

Rubber, zinc and rye exhibited further strength among commodities, reaching new post-depression tops. At Chicago rye was up 1¼ to 3 cents a bushel, wheat was ⅞ off to ahead 1⅛ and corn gained ¼ to ¾. Bonds developed a downward drift with stocks. The guilder enjoyed a forward tilt in foreign exchange dealings, but other European currencies did little in terms of the dollar.

Bond Market Active.

Gains showed a slight edge over losses in the bond market as trading generated the greatest momentum in more than two months. Demand has spread over the entire list with South American and domestic railroad and utility issues snaring the lion's share. The latter groups staged a spotty recovery from the previous day's setbacks, while South American loans continued an upswing dating from about the advent of the Pan-American peace parley.

Buenos Aires 3s of 1984 gained 2⅝ to 66¾ and the 4¼-4½s added 1¼ at 81⅜, while other obligations of the city moved up fractionally. Colombia, Peru and Chile bonds also were higher.

In the domestic railroad division, St. Paul and New Haven loans attracted solid support. The St. Paul 5s of 1975 worked ¾ high, to 19, while the adjustment 5s of 2000 edged up ¼ on 1,061 sales. Of the New Haven liens, the July 4s of 1955 made the widest gain, advancing 3 points to 33. Spectacular jumps were recorded by Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Cleveland & St. Louis 4s and New York, Susquehanna & Western general 5s of 1940. On the other side of the line, a long list of low and medium priced bonds showed minor to 1-point setbacks. Gains in the utility quarter were uniformly small, most of them in the neighborhood of half a point.

Convertible issues moved lower in a body as the influence of a declining stock market made itself felt. A notable exception to the general trend was provided by Symington-Gould 4s-6s, those ex-warrants gaining about 10 and those with warrants roundly 8 points.

United States Government loans slipped lower on moderate turn over, the widest loss being 11-32 of a point.

Transactions totaled $18,784,000, face value, for all bonds, compared with $16,095,000 on Wednesday. In was the heaviest volume since October 9, when $19,052,000 changed hands.

The Associated Press averages were unchanged to slightly higher. The 20 rails added .1 of a point to 97.7, and the 10 utilities .1 of a point to 102.3. The 10 low yield dipped .1 of a point to 113.3.

London, Dec. 17.—Rubber shares, which continued active and strong, owing to the strength in that commodity, led prices to higher levels in the stock exchange after early steadiness. Trading, however, was on a smaller scale. Industrials tended upward with motor, cable and tobacco shares in fair demand. Transatlantic issues and German bonds eased, while Argentine rails continued their advance. Gilt-edge securities held firm and oil shares steady. The mining group turned irregular.

Paris.—Although rentes recorded gains of 40 to 50 points, prices were generally irregular in the bourse today. International and industrial issues weakened, and Bank of France shares lost 50 francs.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures resumed their upward drive today and closed ¼ to ⅝ higher. Wednesday's late rally in North American markets and the good United Kingdom milling demand were the principal factors in the advance. London selling and further liquidation which resulted from uncertainties surrounding the release of American loan cotton and fears of a strike in Lancashire uncovered stop loss orders and sent cotton futures downward today. Prices closed 4 to 6 points lower.

Baltimore Grain Prices.

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 17.—FLOUR—Receipts, 3,459 barrels by car. Market steady. (98-pound new cotton sack basis.) Winter patents, 5.85@6.35; winter straights, 5.55@5.85; spring patent, 7.70@7.95; spring straight, 7.45@7.70; hard winter patent, 6.75@6.95; hard winter straight, 6.45@6.70; rye flour, dark to white, 5.20@6.00.

WHEAT—Receipts, 1,233 bushels by car. Shipments from elevators, 17,331 bushels. Stock in elevators, 1,034,171 bushels. Closing prices: No. 2, red winter, garlicky, spot domestic 1.39¼; December, 1.39¼.

CORN—Receipts, 61,742 bushels, including 2,650 bushels via vessel and 55,266 bushels via vessel in bond. Shipments from elevators, 4,902 bushels. Stock in elevators, 308,505 bushels. No. 2 yellow corn, new, 1.06. Western selling at a premium over this price.

OATS—Shipments from elevators, 520 bushels. Stock in elevators, 33,311 bushels. Stock in elevators, 33,311 bushels. No. 2 white oats, 63@73 per bushel, as to weight and location. Note—on all sizes of oats to the local trade, except to those on track, there is an additional charge of 1½ cents per bushel for storage and elevation, which is paid by the buyer.

RYE—Receipts, 5,226 bushels by car. Shipments from elevators, 9,691 bushels. Stock in elevators, 385,993 bushels.

HAY—General market quiet. On good timothy, clover and mixed hay prices are nominally 17@22 per ton. Poorer grades are hard to sell and market irregular on all grades below No. 3.

STRAW—Market dull. Wheat straw, No. 1, per ton, 9.50; oat straw, 9.00@9.50.

MILL FEED—Receipts, 412 tons, including 182 tons for shipment. Market quiet for spot bran and middlings. Spring bran, per ton, 100-pound sacks, 40.00@41.00; standard middlings, 41.00@42.00.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press

A sharp rise in the Netherland guilder against the dollar in foreign exchange dealings yesterday accompanied a continuation of yesterday's advance in the pound sterling.

The Holland unit was up .13 of a cent at 54.65, the highest rate quoted since October 1. A few days after this departure from the gold standard. The pound, at $4.91¾, was ⅛ of a cent higher. French and Swiss francs were unchanged, the franc unit at 4.67½ cents and the Swiss at 22.99 cents.

Argentine "free rate" pesos were were quoted at 30.50, off .10 of a cent.

The dollar ⅜ of a cent in London, where it closed at 4.91⅝, to the pound. In Paris is finished .It the equivalent of 4.675 cents to the franc, unchanged from the overnight New York rate.

First Federal Of Alexandria Votes Dividend

1½ Per Cent Declared Makes 3 Per Cent for First Year.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

A semi-annual dividend of 1½ per cent will be paid out or credited to the accounts of shareholders of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Alexandria, on or before January 10, it is announced by Charles T. Nicholson, vice president and executive officer of the association. The dividend was declared at a meeting of the board of directors of the association held recently at the association's offices, 803 King street, Alexandria, Va.

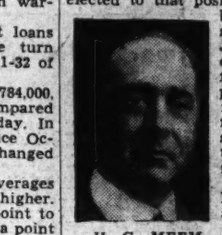
The forthcoming will make a total of 3 per cent in dividends paid to shareholders during the first year of the association's existence, as the organization began business just about a year ago, receiving its certificate of insurance of shares from the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation December 12, 1935.

In addition to declaration of the second semi-annual dividend, the association's directors voted to pass a substantial sum to the undivided profits account, besides setting up the various reserve accounts required by the Federal Home Loan Bank System.

Starting with resources of approximately $6,000 a year ago, the assets of the association have grown to a present total of nearly $160,000, according to Mr. Nicholson, with all required reserves established and an undivided profits account exceeding that required by Federal savings and loan regulations.

Meem Anniversary.

Harry G. Meem began his sixth year as president of Washington Loan & Trust Co., this week, being elected to that position in December, 1931, to succeed the late John B. Larner, one of the founders and president of the institution for many years. Associated with the company for more than 40 years, Mr. Meem rose from a messenger to be its chief executive. He was born in Georgetown where his family had resided since 1756. Peter G. Meem, was an official of the old Farmers & Mechanics Bank of Georgetown.



H. G. MEEM.

Frederick Dividend.

Peoples Liquidating Corporation, Frederick, Md., will make a distribution of 2 per cent to all holders of its certificates of beneficial interest, payable on and after January 6, W. Clinton McSherry, president of the corporation, advises

A 2 per cent distribution to all certificate holders amounts to approximately $200,000. This is the fifth distribution made by the corporation and will make a total of 19 per cent paid to certificate holders.

Checks for the distribution will be available upon the presentation of the certificates by the holders to the banks in their immediate vicinity, which, in the past, have handled checks for the corporation.

Banking Notes.

James A. Farquharson, vice president of the association of Railway Trainmen, was guest speaker at a recent meeting of the local chapter of the Chartered Life Underwriters at the Cosmos Club.

The condition of President Francis G. Addison, jr., Security Savings & Commercial Bank, recently injured in a hunting accident is improving steadily.

Fred S. Brynn, agency supervisor, National Life Insurance Co., of Vermont, attended the recent meeting of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association.

The New York Stock Exchange firms of J. S. Bache & Co. and Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath announce bonuses to employes. Both have local offices.

Washington banks are now ablaze with brilliantly lit Christmas trees and sparkling holiday decorations.

A regular meeting of the safe deposit section, District of Columbia Bankers Association, will be held this evening at 8 p. m. in the board room of the American Security & Trust Co.

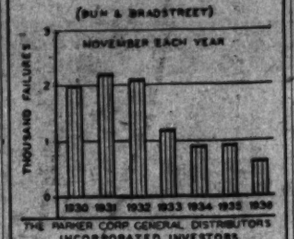
Business Fatalities Drop 28½% in Year



Boston, Mass., Dec. 17.—Although commercial failures in November were somewhat higher than in any of the four preceding months, the rate continues very low. November failures dropped 30 per cent from a year ago, while during the first 11 months of this year the total number was 28½ per cent under the same 1935 months.

Rye Prices Climb To 7-Year Top

Chicago, Dec. 17 (AP).—Brisk speculative buying rushed rye up today to peak quotations unreached before in seven years, and did much to make other grain values develop backbone.

Unfavorable reports about the condition of the new domestic rye crop together with lively commercial demand for the meager supplies available from this year's small harvest, acted as a stimulus for greatly enlarged purchasing of future deliveries.

At the close, rye in Chicago was 1¼ to 3 cents above yesterday's finish; December, 115½; May, 111¾; wheat, ⅞ off to 1⅛ up, December, 135¼ to 135⅜; May, 130⅝ to 130½; July, 116⅞ to 116¾; corn, ¼ to ¾ advanced, December, 108¼ to 108⅜; May, new, 104⅝ to 104¾; July, new, 101¼ to 101⅜, and oats unchanged to ¾ off. Provisions results were unchanged to 15 cents down.

Gallaudet Mat Team in Debut Tonight

The much-maligned sport of collegiate wrestling makes its annual bow tonight as the co-feature of a slim athletic program, with Gallaudet's mat artists encountering Baltimore Poly at Kendall Green. Wilson Teachers College meets Millersville Teachers in the lone basketball game scheduled.

While never widely publicized, Gallaudet's torso-twisters nevertheless are highly regarded in the collegiate elbow-bending fraternity, but have never won from Poly. Several close matches have been waged between the two, but the Blue never has been able to throw its jinx. Tonight, however, with an enthusiastic and experienced team, the District contingent hopes to change the old order with a decisive victory.

The line-up will be George Culbertson, heavyweight; Will Rogers, light-heavyweight; Milan Markobrand, 165 pounds; Earl Jones, 155 pounds; Otto Berg, 145 pounds; Ned Wheeler or Felix Kowalewski, 135 pounds; Glassett, 126 pounds, and Claxton Hess, 118 pounds.

Defeated in its first two games with Kutztown and Frostburg by wide margins, Wilson will be gunning for its first victory of the season tonight and with the odds stacked heavily against it. Doc White's team is young and inexperienced and will need a lot of work before it begins to click.

G. W. Frosh Five Defeats Gonzaga

George Washington's high scoring freshmen quintet swamped another prep school aggregation yesterday when it bowled over a light and green Gonzaga team, 61-10, in a dull game. The victors previously had slaughtered Devitt Prep, 63-10.

Buddy Shaner, crooning forward from Eastern High School, led the attack with eight field goals and a foul, followed by Nowaskey, who rang the bell with five. The Frosh led at halftime, 34-10.

St. Anthony's Defeats St. Paul's, 49 to 36

Handicapped by the loss of three regulars via the personal foul route in the second half, St. Paul's Academy dropped a bitterly contested 49-36 decision to St. Anthony's High School yesterday.

The eventual losers did well enough in the first half, finishing with a 17-16 advantage as Willie Grimes led the assault on the cords. But with Roach, center; Grimes and Curtin on the sidelines in the second half, the boys waged a losing battle.

Bob Salb tallied 19 points in leading St. Anthony's to victory, but was hard pressed for the honors by Francis Carr, who chalked up 14.

Byers Elected Captain Of Friends Grid Team

Bill Byers, sophomore guard, has been elected captain of the Friends School football team and the players, at the same time, named Charlie Wannan, star quarterback, as the "most valuable member" of the 1936 eleven.

Byers, fast despite his 180 pounds, has been outstanding on the offense and defense. Wannan is the son of C. A. (Pop) Wannan, Friends athletic director. He is also a basketball and baseball letter winner as well as a triple-threater on the gridiron.

Col. Hackett Is Named Orange Bowl Official

Lake Wales, Fla., Dec. 17 (AP).—A. R. Hutchens, secretary of the Southern Football Officials Association, today announced assignments for Miami's Orange Bowl football game between Mississippi State and Duquesne University on New Year's Day.

They are Tom Thorpe, of New York; W. E. (Ted) Arnold, of Jacksonville; Horatio B. Hackett, of Washington, D. C., and Hutchens himself. Individual assignments were not announced.

Big Kate

Has More Troubles Than That Moon Over the Mountain.

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

New York, Dec. 17.—For several years I imagined that Kate Smith's lone sorrow in life was her inability to get that moon over the mountain. But I learned today that professional basketball causes Big Kate a lot more grief than said moon and said mountain.

The radio songstress is such a big gal that you never would associate her with athletics. Yet, Kate assures me that in her younger and more svelte days she played high school basketball in Washington, D. C., and was on the frosh team of the Georgetown School for Nurses.

No other sport has been able to wean her affections away from the hoop game, although her friends attest that Kate shoots surprisingly good golf. She also is interested in skiing and bobsledding.

Accordingly, as Kate yodeled to fame before the mike, she succumbed to her only weakness by traipsing away from the studios night after night during the winter months to watch the dribble-and-pass boys. When people saw the buxom Miss Smith attending these games so often, they figured at first that she was merely seeking publicity. But as time galloped on, they realized that she was a basket bug indeed.

Thus is was that about this time last year the big singer of little heart songs suddenly found herself presented with the opportunity of buying a professional team all of her own. That's what the men called it during their selling talk—"an opporunity." And poor Kate has been in hot water ever since. She bought that team—"the original Celtics."

You see, Kate understood the game all right, even though girls use six players on a team and men use five. But little did she suspect the aggravations entailed in trying to operate a professional club—trying to carry on in a professional sport that has almost been killed by the stupidity and mismanagement of its promoters.

When innocent Kate took over the Celtics she had never heard of "floaters," or basketball bums. I mean, the professional players who drift around, performing for one club tonight and a different one tomorrow night. And she didn't realize that the pro game had become a very rough-house sort of affair, far different from college play. The pros are permitted to use the two-hand dribble, hip blocking and things like that.

Well, Kate came through her first season fairly well, despite her crusade to abolish the "floaters" and to have her athletes perform like gentlemen. She sent the Celtics touring theough the South and Middle West, and they won 92 out of 96 games. And she didn't lose very much money, either.

But this is another season and another story. Kate decided to have her celtics play as much as possible in the metropolitan area so that she could watch them without being forced to take airplane trips to Louisville and towns in Indiana.

However, she reckoned without the American League, which I believe is the only professional hoop organizaflon in the country. At present there are six clubs in this league: The New York Jewels, Brooklyn Visitations, Philadelphia Hebrews, Jersey Reds of Hoboken, Atlantic City and Kingston, N. Y.

Before the season opened Kate obtained the services of three players who formerly worked for American League clubs. Kate insists that these players had no contracts with the American League outfits because there are no player-contracts in basketball. But, she explains tearfully, the American League moguls got sore because she took those performers and have laid down a boycott against her Celtics. And this boycott is costing her money and causing much worry.

As Kate explains it, the Amercian League not only refuses to schedule its teams against her Celtics, but they have warned other professional or semi-pro clubs that if they play with the Celtics they can't play with the leaguers.

That's why Kate's Celtics have played only one game so far this season, when they should have shown eight times. And big-hearted Kate has her eight basketeers on contract. Each gets $75 a week whether they play or not. She was the one who thought up this contract business. Heh! Heh! Heh! The other owners were too smart. But Kate wanted no "floaters" on her club.

Hence, my friends, when you hear Kate's voice coming over the air, and you detect a tearful quiver in it—just remember that she's probably grieving over her Celtics, and not sobbing because the moon won't come over the mountain.

Former Catholic U. Gridmen Turn Out Successful Teams

That the Bergman system of teaching football is highly successful is evidenced by the performances of four Northeast Boys Club teams which are coached by two former Catholic University men—Jan Jankowski, 1933 captain, and his assistant, Jack Hengstler, erstwhile freshman star.

During the season Jankowski's teams have won 21 games, lost two and tied one, a record few District organizations can boast of, collectively.

"Our four teams used C. U. plays strictly, and you can see they were pretty successful, more so than C. U. this season," Jankowski, athletic director, said with a smile, in no way attempting to reflect discredit on the 1936 team turned out by his former coach, Dutch Bergman.

Jankowski's 150-pound Northeast Boys Club team played under the name of the Regal Clothiers and last Sunday won the National City League title easily. The team was undefeated and unscored on in eight games, and were tied only once.

His 135-pound eleven plays the Metropolitan Police Boys Club No. 5 for the city championship in the police league this Sunday, and last Sunday the 115-pound team won the undisputed city title by defeating the Anacostia Lions.

SouthlandBeau Wins Feature With Rally

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, Dec. 17.—Coming from far back in the stretch, F. P. Letellier's Southland Beau today took the measure of a large field of 2-year-olds in the Fair Grounds' six-furlong feature for his third victory in 17 starts this year.

The son of King Nadi was not even close as the field swung into the stretch with B. C. Scott's Kitty's Rival leading Joe Cattarinich's Girls Chance by a length, and Maklalaw, the early pace setter, another length back.

Jockey Cowley brought Southland Beau up fast, however, registering by a half length over Girls Chance to pay $8.60 straight. E. K. Murray's Star Bess also staged a strong finish to take third money.

Five Navy Indoor Schedules Named

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 17.—Gymnastic and golf schedules for the varsity, and gymnastics, boxing and track slates for the Plebes were announced at the Naval Academy today by Lieut. Comdr. Andrew C. McFall, graduate manager of athletics.

It was also announced that the varsity fencing team would participate in the finals of the Intercollegiate Fencing Association, to take place in New York City, March 26-27.

Varsity.

Gymnastics—February 13, Pennsylvania State; 20, Massachusetts Tech; 27, Temple; March 6, Dartmouth; 13, Princeton (at Princeton); 20, Intercollegiate finals (at Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H.).

Golf—April 17, Princeton; 24, University of Virginia; May 1, Georgetown; 8, University of Virginia (at University, Va.); 15, Washington and Jefferson; 22, University of Delaware.

Plebes.

Gymnastics—February 6, Emerson High School, of Union City, N. J.; 27, Temple Freshmen; March 6, Dickinson High School, of Jersey City, N. J.

Boxing—February 6, Staunton M. A.; 13, Augusta M. A.; 20, Virginia M. I. Freshmen.

Track—May 1, McKinley High School, of Washington; 8, Massanutten Academy; 15, Mercersburg Academy.

Roosevelt Center Loop.

Department of Agriculture took the measure of Social Security, 28-17, last night in a Roosevelt Community Center League game at Roosevelt High, while Federal Alcohol was taking a 26-22 decision from Alber McNeil. High scorer of the night was Weigel, of the Aggies, with 12 points. Tice scored eight points for Federal Alcohol.

Ruark Wins in District Billiard Title Tourney

The veteran Gene Ruark, defending champion in the District three-cushion amateur billiard championship, won his third victory in four tournament starts last night, trouncing Frank Masi, 33-15, at the L. and K. Academy.

Ruark, however, still trails Gene Flynn and Dave Stetland, each of whom has yet to lose a match. Flynn has won two matches and Stetland three. Ruark's high run last night was five. The referee was F. Turton.

Test on Daily Reading Shows Pupils Deficient

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chambersburg, Pa., Dec. 17.—Eight hundred and ninety-five of the 1,359 pupils in Chambersburg High School and the seventh and eighth grades did not know the name of the president of the Cnambersburg school board, an examination on current events, conducted by U. L. Gordy, superintendent of schools, showed.

Gordy said he had called a meeting of teachers to consider means of improving pupils' knowledge of news as chronicled in newspapers. Only 101 of the pipils were rated as "good" readers on the basis of examination.

Chemist Dies Saving Others In Gas Chamber

Ohioan Perishes in Attempt to Stop Lethal Leak in Laboratory.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Dec. 17.—Deadly hydrogen sulphide fumes struck down Fred Thamann, 38, today in a laboratory where he conducted a dangerous search for a means to eliminate one of the hazards of industry—lead poisoning.

His chief, Dr. Robert A. Kehoe, said the research chemist died a hero's death in effort to save the lives of others endangered by the gas.

About 40 persons were driven from the building when the lethal fumes spread as a tank was overturned in a storeroom.

The gas felled David Birrell, 20, an electrician, who, unaware of the danger, had entered the laboratory. He was rescued. Physicians placed him under an oxygen tent and said he probably would recover.

Thamann's widow, Mrs. Anna Mae Thamann, was Christmas shopping and learned of his death when she arrived home. Their two sons, Thomas, 9, and John, 7, learned of their father's death when they came home from school.

The cause of the tragedy was not fully determined, but laboratory associates said Thamann probably discovered the storeroom filled with the fumes of hydrogen sulphide when he first entered it.

Realizing the danger, Thamann sought the source of the leak. Either accidentally, in his haste, or because he collapsed, he knocked over a 5-foot steel tank causing the valve to release more gas.

Seven Seized in War On Ambulance Chasers

Chicago, Dec. 17 (AP).—Police raided headquarters today of what they charged was an ambulance chasing syndicate operating with big business efficiency. They took into custody seven persons.

Papers and documents seized linked the syndicate, raiders said, with physicians, lawyers, hospitals, undertakers and private ambulance operators.

Starving Horses Offered Haven by Rescue League

Fearing many work horses in the Capital will be allowed to starve and freeze this winter, the Animal Rescue League yesterday appealed to owners and drivers to give up their animals if they cannot provide for them.

Through the chairman of its horse committee, Mrs. Robert Watson, the league announced it is prepared to buy up horses that are unfit for work or facing a season of hunger and blanketless misery.

Prices of hay and oats are high, said Mrs. Watson, an unhappy augury for draft animals owned or rented by small teamsters and hucksters who won't be able to feed, shoe and shelter them properly when inclement weather arrives. Nominal sums will be paid for unwanted horses which will be put out of their misery if they cannot be rehabilitated.

June Robles Relates Kidnap Story to Jury

Tucson, Ariz., Dec. 17 (AP).—Chubby 9-year-old June Robles, who was held captive by kidnapers for 19 days in the spring of 1934, told a Federal grand jury here today of her experience. She entered the chambers alone. Federal agents said it was the first time she had ever been permitted to tell her story without prompting of relatives.

Little June spent about 40 minutes with the jury. Several times during that interval, John Dougherty, assistant United States district attorney, came out to obtain pictures and other exhibits. Most of the pictures were those of the sheet-iron box in which June was chained when found May 14, half-buried in the desert nine miles from Tucson.

Funeral Held for Girl Who Slew Best Friend

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 17 (AP).—A funeral cortege bore the body of Hope Morgan, who killed her best friend, to a Detroit crematorium today following services at which no mention was made of her crime, or the suicide that followed it.

The Rev. N. A. McCune, who officiated at the funeral of Miss Elizabeth Giltner, Hope's victim, conducted the service also for Miss Morgan, who hanged herself Tuesday in the Ingham County Jail.

Council to Get Opinion On Judge's Eligibility

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Dec. 17.—The city council will hear the opinion tomorrow night of City Attorney W. M. Wharton as to the legal residence of Charles A. Hammer, jr., who was elected police justice for the four-year term beginning January 1.

Young Hammer, who practices law here with his father, former Harrisonburg postmaster, lived for a time in the suburbs of Harrisonburg. The contention is that he was not a resident of Harrisonburg a year prior to the election, as required by the city code.

Pawnshop Loot $30,000.

New York, Dec. 17 (AP).—Three holdup men entered a Brooklyn pawnshop within two blocks of police headquarters today, held up three employes and escaped with $30,000 in jewelry and $2,000 in cash. Three customers who entered the shop during the robbery were locked up by the thieves in a back room with the employes.

Vessels to Seek Trace Of Missing Freighter

Boston, Dec. 17 (AP).—The branch Hydrographic Office of the United States Navy sent a general broadcast to all North Atlantic shipping today to watch for some trace of the little Norwegian steamer Stranna, which sailed from Glasgow, Scotland, 54 days ago.

The 254-foot, 1,547-ton steamer, laden with coal and carrying a crew of 30, should have reached Halifax, Nova Scotia, more than three weeks ago and shipping men fear she may have foundered in recent storms. The steamer was not equipped with wireless.

Noted Mason Dies.

Ironton, Mo., Dec. 17 (AP).—Thomas Archer Goodman, one of 14 Masons in the world holding the Grand Cross of the Court of Honor, died last night. He was 86.
